SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

A healthy tonic, gentle stimulant and unequalled morning appetizer. Prepared in ripe old Bourbon. Being now used to the exclusion of all other Bitters in more than fifty United States Army Hospitals, and millions of private families, and is the only popular medicine which has been especially exempted from stamp tax by the United States government, on the ground of its having been adopted as a standard remedy by the medical profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

They are made of ingredients well known, and approved by the medical profession, as having powerful tonic properties, are both palatable and pleasant, with sufficient strengthening properties to correct the bilious derangement of the system, and act like a charm when taken according to direction, as a remedy for the following diseases:—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affections, Loss of Appetite, Lowness of Spirit, Bilious Complaints,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

FOR

Headache, Costiveness, and kindred diseases, arising from a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels. Let every one try these Agreeable Bitters; once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who are in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effectual tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced me to give them publicity, so that thousands who have not used them, may try them and be convinced of their efficacy.—

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

Ladies, who have tried and found most other "Stomach Bitters" too bitter, unpalatable and too highly medicated for their delicate taste, please give these a trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system.

If your druggist or tradesman has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.—

Remember the name, and take no other,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

The composition of Dr. Swain's Bitters, having been made public through the columns of Medical Journals, and having been adopted as a standard remedy by the Medical Profession, are by the decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, EXEMPT FROM STAMP DUTY.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

which have been showered upon him from

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of these eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

These Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of over twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by their use gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from torpid liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of those Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

They strengthen and invigorate the system.
They are unequaled for general debility.
They are a sure cure for dyspepsia.
They give a good and healthy appetite.
They assist digestion.
They are the best stimulant in existence.
They are a preventive of Fever and Ague.
They relieve constipation.
They cure Nervous Headache.
They are perfectly pure and palatable

Aged persons and delicate females will find they can save large doctor's bills by the use of these Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits. The Red Jacket Bitters are only sold in bottles with our name blown on the side, and our private government stamp across the cork.

—OUR—

For Medicinal and Table uses, which are perfectly pure, and need only be tried to be appreciated. None genuine unless they have our gold label on each bottle, and our initials pressed in wax over the cork.

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

—o—

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stich alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stiches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury give notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three tenths per cent. per annum.—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect.—They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1 000, and 5,000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT pay in anything better for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for discounts.

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum, for the current rate for 5 20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent U S stocks was over twenty per cent It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent per annum

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order.—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Bankers and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

The Cottage and the Mill.

BY S. W. HAZELTINE.

Have you seen the cottage and the old gray mill,
That stand at the foot of a rock ribbed hill?
Did you notice the glades towering high,
On the banks of a river that murmurs by?
And did you not see the garden bower?
Did not the scene chain you with magic power?

'Tis my childhood's home, and I'll love that spot,
Till the time shall come when my heart beats not.

'Tis there I have strayed in the hours of morn;
'Tis there I have roamed when the day was gone;
'Tis there I have chased in my childish glee,
For butterflies over the hill and lea.
Or sought for the fruit of the wayside hedge,
Or pebbles along on the water's edge;
And dear, yes, dear, till my blood is still,
Must be that cottage and old gray mill.

'Tis there I was wont in my youth to rejoice
At a mother's smile, or a father's voice;
But alas! even there death came one day,
And bore my father and mother away;
And the tear gushed forth from their fount ain deep,
As I laid them down to their last long sleep.
Years have passed since then, but I'm weeping still,
When I think of that cottage and old gray mill.

WINN'S BLUNDER.

Inexperienced travellers are so often "taken in and done for," and the record of their misfortunes made public, that Vivian Winn, a young man of twenty-two, thought himself fully competent to elude the wiles of any sharper who might best him on the journey he was about to undertake from his home to Chicago. To be sure, Vivian had never travelled much, but then he had the warning advice of his of his more experienced uncle and for the rest—he depended on his own shrewdness. He was going to the great metropolis of the West to take a stool at the desk of his brother-in-law's banking-house, and so, elated with his bright prospects for the future, he gaily bid adieu to the few friends who were at the station to see him off, and entered a crowded car. All the seats were full, except one, which was occupied by a solitary young lady.

Vivian walked slowly down the jolting car, and pausing before the unoccupied seat, bashfully inquired if he might sit there. With ready acquiescence, the accommodating maiden gathered up her skirts, and made room for him.—Disencumbering himself of his overcoat, our hero proceeded to sit down, pulled out a newspaper, and engaged himself to the contents thereof, while his compagnie de voyage continued the perusal of a book in paper covers, in which she seemed deeply engaged.

Vivian's eyes fell upon an article relating how a poor fellow had become enamored of a beautiful maiden with whom he became acquainted on a railroad train, and how, on landing at his destination, he found himself minus his pocket-book and its contents—some six hundred dollars. He laughed to himself, over the simplicity of the dupe, and folding up his paper, turned his attention to the person at his side.

Heavens! what a beauty! A thrill of uncontrollable interest ran through him as he beheld those large, dark, dreamy eyes, those waving tresses, and that fair, clear countenance. She seemed greatly interested in the volume before her, and gave him a good opportunity of studying her features. At length, becoming aware of his steady gaze, the fair unknown suddenly closed her novel, and fixed those large eyes upon him. Vivian, blushing at his detection in staring on a lady, excused his rudeness by inquiring if she was not a certain Miss Smith, and if she did not reside at such a place.

No, her name was not Smith, nor did she live at B.

"Ah! Indeed! Really, you must pardon me for the resemblance is very striking."

His conduct was excusable.

"Then you are not acquainted any at B——?"

No; but her brother had friends there.

"Your brother is not with you?'

"I am on my way to meet him. Do you come from B.?'

"I do, madam, and am going to meet my brother.'

"Yes? Quite a coincidence!"

'Remarkable! My brother is a banker at Chicago.'

That looked suspicious. Vivian began to think that this was a little too much of a coincidence to be natural—in fact, a vision of the lost pocket-book, with its six hundred dollars, began to loom up with painful distinctness, and to cause an itching to put his hand in his pocket, and feel that his own wallet was safe; but a moment's reflection satisfied him of the foolishness of any such fear. Another glance at the beautiful face so near his own made him ashamed for having ever harbored such an idea as that this lovely being could be capable of theft!

She a pick-pocket! Never! So irritated did he become at the thought of his baseness toward the fair creature, that he was on the point of showing her the article that had raised his suspicion, and then confessing his crime and begging forgiveness, when the young lady once more resumed her reading, and became indifferent alike to him and his fate.

Perhaps she had an inkling of his thoughts! He blushed at the idea. What a fool he had been, after beginning an acquaintance that was likely to prove so couleur de rose during the tedious ride, to forfeit her regard by such wickedness!

Perhaps she imagined that he was a rogue, and had trumped up the coincidence in order to get into her good graces! Jupiter! should that be the case—

"Thirty minutes for supper!" shouted by the brakeman, together with the name of the station, put an end to his cogitations, and her reading.

"Will you go to the table?" inquired Vivian, rising.

'No, thank you; but if you will be so kind, you may bring me some refreshment," and she confidingly put her purse in his hand.

Then she didn't think him a rogue—no, she must have felt his own suspicions and, kind, forgiving soul, took this method of punishing him!

With a mixture of misery and happiness, he thrust the tiny purse into a pocket, and rushed into the crowd of hungry mortals standing round the tables, and eating away as if for dear life. Having procured the best that the house afforded, he handed them through the window to its fair charge, and then paced the platform, too agitated to eat anything himself. A plump, white hand beckoned him.

"Can you get me a cup of tea, please?'

O, yes, he could get her twenty!

One would do, and she had it in a twinkling. Then the bell rang, the whistle blowed—'All aboard!" and the train was again jogging along.

As the car was now not more than half full, Vivian debated with himself, as he walked towards the seat, whether or not he was not bound in politeness to sit elsewhere. The lady solved the knotty point for him by again making room, and looking an invitation to take his old seat, which we may be pretty certain he did.

'Of course you lost my purse in the crowd!"

An electric battery couldn't have produced a greater shock.

'Upon my word,' (recovering), 'I never thought of it from the moment you handed it to me till now. Lose it? No; I never lose anything," said he, returning the article.

'You have not taken out the pay for my supper," she said.

'Nor shall I; it was pay enough to see you enjoying the meal.'

Some observing soul has told the world that young ladies lose their charms when eating, and this one was evidently familiar with the old maxim, for she smiled in a knowing manner at the intended compliment, and merely replying:

'I hate flatterers,' was proceeding to re-open her novel—it being yet light enough to read—when Vivian made a bold dash, and inquired the name of the book.

It was 'Dickens' 'Little Dorritt,' and the mention of that admired author led to an interesting discussion of writers and their works, followed by discussions on other subjects, and a 'general drawing out' of each other's opinions and characters. Thus it happened, that when Old Sol had gone to rest, and night had fairly come, they were so much interested in the conversation, and the cars made so much more noise than before (!) it became necessary to put their heads quite close together, and Vivian even presumed so far, or forgot himself, as to place his arm over the back of the seat, with a hand resting lightly on his companion's shoulder!

The cars and their tongues rattled on together, but finally the former got the best of it, and a gradual silence seemed to settle over all the passengers. On, on sped the puffing engine; drowsy grew the weary travellers; close and closer did Vivian get to his sleepy charge, and at last, laying aside her bonnet, she gave herself up to Morpheus, and leaned her tired head against our hero's manly breast.

Whew! How they did go!

"Singing through the forest,
Rattling over ridges,
Shooting under arches,
Rumbling over bridges,
Whizzing through the mountains,
Buzzing o'er the vale,
Bless me! this is pleasant,
Riding on a rail."

Vivian—ah, Vivian! That would have been the pleasantest ride of all thy life, had it not been for—those horrible suspicions for the second time! Yes, they would be heard spite of him; he couldn't ward them off.

Look at it calmly, now. Here she was feigning sleep at his side—and in such close proximity, too! Had she not enticed him to sit by her, when the car was half empty? Had she not encouraged him to become familiar? Had she not shown in a dozen ways that she was partial to his presence? Certainly she had—and he would keep his eyes open—he wasn't to be caught napping—not he! Thus it was that his first pleasurable emotions in his imaginary role of 'guardian angel' were turned to watchful care—not of the sleeping maiden—but of his pocket-book!

Eleven o'clock was striking on the city bells, as the cars rushed into the depot at Chicago. The stopping of the train became, as usual, the signal for a general bustle of departure, and our unknown heroine, waking up in a hurry, began, in a rather unheroic manner, to fasten on her bonnet and to the usual number of miscellaneous bundles that women will carry when travelling. Vivian had got into his overcoat, and—must it be confessed?—was examining his pockets! First, the left hand trowsers; all right. Then its compatriot on the other side; all r-i-g-h-t—where was that check? Sure he had put it into that pocket—'twasn't there now—perhaps in his vest—no, must be in his coat—not there either? Strange! He tries all the pockets over again, and by this time, our young lady being ready to depart, notices the search, and innocently inquires what he has lost.

'You haven't noticed a baggage check lying round loose, have you?'

'No, sir. Is that what you are looking for?'

'Yes it is, madam, and what's more, I believe you have got it!'

'Sir!'

'Oh, you needn't put on your dignity—I know you now, and if you don't give up that check quietly, I shall be so very rude as to hand you over to the police!'

The look of astonishment and horror with which she listened to these terrible words, he considered as a part of her game. Not a doubt remained in his mind but that she had taken his check, and intended to get possession of his trunk and its contents.

'Let me pass, sir!'

'So you wont give it up peaceably? Very well,' and Vivian followed her out of the car, through the crowd into the ladies' room. A policeman was instantly summoned, the accusation made, and a search demanded, followed by a copious flow of tears from our unprotected friend.

'Young woman,' said No X., blandly, 'please produce the contents of your pocket.'

The order was mechanically obeyed, and brought to light an embroidered cambric handkerchief, a watch key, a letter, and the pretty little purse, from which latter, there dropped to the floor a brass check! No X. and Vivian both made a dive for it, and their heads came together in rapid collision, bringing out an oath of pretty large dimensions from the burly policeman, and forcing a growl from Vivian. The latter, however, secured the check, and holding it up to the light, exclaimed:

'2205! That's mine! March her off!'

'Now, young woman, what have you got to say—'

'Hallo here! What's all this?' said somebody, coming up to the trio. 'Why, Kate, my dear sister, is this you? I must have missed you in the crowd.' [Imagine here an affectionate embrace.]

'O' my dear, dear brother, how fortunate that you have found me. (Sobs.) I have been shamefully insulted by that young—'

'What! Vivian Winn, is that you? Give me your hand, brother mine. What's this, Kate, about insults?'

'My brother in law's sister? Poor Vivian gasped out that much, but we'll drop the curtain over what followed, and to cary out the smile, the appreciative audience may eat peanuts—if their taste incline that way—and imagine that two years have passed since the green baize went down. It now rises on Vivian relating the foregoing incidents to a few friends, when his wife comes forward, and gently hints that he makes a fool of himself!

'You see,' continues the happy fellow, not listening to the warning of his better-half, 'when I handed the purse back to her, after that supper, my check got fastened in the syringe, and went with it.—But it came out all right at last—didn't it Kate? The fact is, after what had happened, I was bound to go in and Winn her, and there she is!'

Irish Soldier.

During the late war in Portugal, and while the army and while the army was on its march from Almendralejo to Merida, an irish soldier having drunk rather freely, quitted the ranks. He had scarcely done so, before he fell into a sound sleep, from which he did not wake until very late in the evening. Alone, and in an uninhabited part of the country, the poor fellow knew not whither to turn himself. He upbraided himself for his misconduct, and fancied himself already condemned by a court marshall, and the sentence ready to be carried into execution. To a village on his left he directed his steps, to see if some friendly individual would plead for him at head quarters. In this village he was informed there were two French soldiers concealed. A thought darted across his mind, that if he could get them secured, he would be able to carry them into Almeda as prisoners and thereby procure his pardon. In an instant, he loaded his musket, proceeded to the house where the Frenchmen lay, disarmed them, and, in two hours after marched them off in triumph. Some officers of the 71st regiment seeing a British soldier with two Frenchmen, as prisoners from the opposite side of the river where, none of the allied troops were at that time quartered, asked the soldier, 'What men are those you have got?' The Hibernian replied, 'By St. Patrick, your honors, I cannot tell, but I believe they are Frenchmen.'

TEA.—About the year 1591 the Dutch East India Company brought into Europe the dried leaves of tea shrub, and taught the method of producing an agreeable beverage by infusing them in boiling water. This seems to have been so much approved of by that of the year 1660, it became a favorable drink in coffee houses; and the government, taking advantage of this circumstance, imposed a duty of eighpence a gallon on the liquor sold in those places. At this period the price of tea is stated to have been about sixty cents per pound; and being thus dear be bought by the general consumer in the leaf, its infusion was ordinarily purchased ready made, at so much per pint, quart, or gallon. The first importation of tea by the English East India Company was in 1669, when two canisters, weighing 143 pounds, were forwarded to England by the resident merchants at Canton. About 1720, tea was generally drunk by the middle classes of society.

have been introduced to the public for less than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

which have been showered upon him from

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

and you should try them before going for a physician.

The tools used in the burglary were ordinary stone-cutters' tools—chisels and mallet. Some of them were broken in opening the safe. There appears to have been no drill employed, but the hole in the safe door, where the powder was inserted, has the appearance of having been punched. The tools used in the burglary were taken from Mr. Lenhart's stone yard, his shop having been broke into to procure them. Most of the tools were marked "K. K." They together with the crow bar, were left in the office.

Around the north side of the county building, and by the treasurer's office windows, were tracks in the snow, evidently made by one of the burglars, who probably went outside the building at the time of the explosion, for the purpose of observing if it excited any notice. The track was made by a small sized boot.

Many private citizens are sufferers from this burglary, they having deposited funds there for safe keeping. Among those we hear mentioned the names of A. L. Bliss, who, it is stated, loses about $2,000 in funds, and Mr. Morton Eddy, who had deposited there about $800 in government bonds.

The amount of money stolen is roughly estimated as approximating to $20,000.

☞ A young man named George Pitchard, who has served out his time in the army, attempted to commit suicide on the 3d inst. by shooting himself, because a young widow to whom he had been paying marked attention for some time refused to marry him. After hearing her refusal, the rejected lover deliberately placed a pistol to his left breast and fired, but the ball striking a rib glanced off and only slightly wounded him.

The News

Wednesday, Feb. 15.

The notorious Capt. Bell, connected with the capture of the steamer Philo Parsons on Lake Erie, has been convicted of being a spy and a guerrilla. He will be hung on Saturday morning next, on Govornor's Island, New York harbor, the sentance having been approved by Gen. Dix.

An expedition is preparing at Newbern, N. C., which, in all probability, will make an advance upon Goldsborough. If captured, it will give us all of Southeastern N. C.

Gen. Sherman's campaign in South Carolina is progressing favorably. A portion of his forces are two thirds of the way from the Edisto River to Columbia—an important point, forming the junction of the Charloote and South Carolina and the Greenville and Columbia Railroads, which connect with the railroads to Richmond.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb 14.

The Bulletin has the following dispatch from Washington: Richmond papers of the 13th inst. announce the tapping of the railroad by Gen. Sherman, north of Branchville and between Kingville and Branchville, thus destroying every road entering at Branchville.

New York, feb. 14.

The Comercial's Washington special says, notwithstanding Senitor Morgan's declination of his nomination to the Treasury department, his friends continue to press his name on the president, and it is thought Senitor Morgan will accept the position.

The Comercal's Washington special says Mr. Garfield's bill for the national line of railroad to Washington met with unexpected opposition in the Committee on Railroads. It is now doubtful whether it will be favorably reported on.

An expedition is preparing at Newbern, N. C., which in all probobility, will make an advance upon Goldsborough if captured, it will give us all of Southeastern N. C.

Lieut. Ward, of Gen. Palmer's staff, was recently accidentally shot by Captain Horn, of the 12th New York Cavalry.

Washington, Feb. 14.

It is stated that the substance of a dispatch from Gen. Grant to the Government was received to-day; that Richmond papers of Monday say Sherman has crossed the Edisto, which was the line held by Gen Hardee defending Branchville. According to the same rebel authority, a portion of Sherman's forces are two thirds of the way from the Edisto to Columbia, S. C., an important point, forming the junction of the Charlotte and South Carolina and the Greenville and Columbia Railroads, which connect with the railroads to Richmond.

New York, Feb. 14.

The World's Washington correspondent has intelligence confirming the report that Richmond would be evacuated under certain contingencies, and that the new military policy of the rebels was to give up all the seaboard cities almost without a struggle. He says Lee accepted the position of General-in-Chief on the written pledge that the military policy he might advocate should be carried out. This includes the plan of evacuating all ports near the Atlantic coast and concentrating the troops of the Confederacy a one or more points farther inland. The rebel armies in the Southwest are to be ordered east. The Southern forces will be concentrated into two large armies—one in Eastern Virginia under the direct command of Lee, and the other in South Carolina under Beauregard. It is designed to fall upon Sherman with the whole force, and if successful in destroying his army, then to attact Gen. Grant in the same way.

☞ A dispatch from Montreal of Feb. 8th says; Mr. Ermatinger, of the river police, discovered a plot to rescue Crawford from the Sherbrooke goal, where he was committed for extradition. The plot was first to sever the iron grating, for which the plan of a cutting machine was prepared; second, to seize the train; and third, to rescue the man from the goal in Massachusetts. Ruffians from the south side of the line were drilled in a house near the frontier by Confederate officers to capture the train and break the goal.

☞ The port of Fernandina, Fla., has been designated by Secretary Fessenden, with the concurrence of the President, is a place for the purchase of products of the rebellious States on government account, and a purchasing agent to be located there, has been appointed.

Martin O. Hara, residing in Danville, N. Y., was fatally burned one day last week by the explosion of a kerosene lamp. The explosion was caused by blowing into the chimney to extinguish the flame. The lamp wick was too small for the tube, and in blowing the chimney the flame from the wick was drawn downward in the lamp.

☞ A wild cat was recently killed at Bears' Swamp, 6 miles from Lansing, that weighed 60 pounds. It had done considerable damage to geese, ducks, chickens, etc., on the neighboring farms.

Petroleum is now found in the Canadas, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Western Virginia, Indiana, California, Kentucky, Illinois, Missouri, Michigan, Kansas and Colorado. It is estimated that the true geographical center of the oil territory is at Cincinnati, the Kentucky and Western Virginia developements being of a more promising character than any heretofore discovered.

At Chicago a few nights ago, a fiendish outrage was perpetrated upon a simple young country girl, named Hattie Willicks. She was on her way home to visit a dying mother, and stopped at Wright's Hotel, where four villains entered her room and ravished her. Two of them, Joe Hewitt and Tom Malcom, were immediately arrested, examined and held to bail in the inefficient sum of $1,000 each.

Brig. Gen. Tillson, Provost Marshal of East Tennessee, has issued a general order, announcing that hereafter no person will be allowed to take the amnesty oath at his office unless it shall clearly appear that their sympathies and influence are actively enlisted in the restoration of the authority of the National Government. This order has been rendered necessary by the fact that numbers of persons have taken the oath of amnesty while they still retain their sympathy with the rebellion.

Fire and Loss of Life.

HILLSDALE, Feb. 13.—A fire broke out at two o'clock on Sunday morning, in C. T. Mitchell & Co.'s hardware store, consuming the building, with most of its contents. The fire spread to the frame building on the south side, occupied by Mr. Cleveland as a harness shop and dwelling above, and then to the Strangers' Meat Market, where the flames were arrested in that direction; on the north side of the hardware store, Armstrong Brother's leather store, Hammond's dry goods, grocery, boot and shoe and crockery stores, fronting on two streets, occupied above as a dwelling; a frame building on the corner, owned by L. McIntyre, and occupied by Mr. Critterden as a harness shop; Tompkins' meat market, and Barnes' daguerrean gallery, where the flames were arrested, after consuming the whole corner. Mitchell & Co.'s loss on building and contents is $18,000; insured $7,500. Armstrong Bros. saved about half their stock; fully insured. Mr. Hammond's loss on the buildings is $5,000; insured for $2,500, and the insurance on his goods more than covers the loss, most of the stock being saved. McIntyre's loss is $1,500. The other parties meet with small losses, they saving the principal part of their stocks.

Five men were buried under the falling walls. J. Rancier, got out without injuries; C. Hallett, slightly bruised; H. B Armstrong, severe gash across the top of his head, not serious; Wm. Loring, severely injured about the head, face and body internally, probably fatal. The charred trunk of another man, with head, arms and limbs burnt off, was identified by his knife and tobacco box found, as that of Mr. Funk, dealer in millinery goods. The fire originated from a lamp in a bedroom occupied by a clerk Hardman's store, a strong, piercing wind, freezing the engines and hose. The citizens turned out en masse and worked with a will, preventing the fire from spreading to a long row of building occupied as stores, shops and dwellings.

From Southern Papers.

NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—The Richmond Dispatch of the tenth says the railroad connection with Augusta is severed. It is an error, however, to suppose that because any point on the South Carolina Railroad is in the hands of the enemy we can no longer draw supplies from Georgia. It would be wrong to explain the matter at this time.

At the Richmond war meeting on Thursday all the speeches were of the most furious character, informing the people the Confederacy was in danger, but could be saved by the efforts of the people. A preamble and resolutions were offered and adopted with much applause. The preamble calls the war one of conquest by the United States, and one of defense by the rebels. It denounces President Lincoln's recent proposition for peace as debasing and cruel.

The following are the resolutions:

Resolved, That the events which have occurred during the progress of the war have confirmed our original determination to strike for independence, and that with the blessing of God, we will never lay down our arms until it shall have been won.

Resolved, That as we believe our resources to be sufficient to our purpose, we do not doubt but we shall conduct the war successfully, and hereby invoke the people in the holiest of all causes, to spare neither blood nor treasure in its maintenance and support.

The third resolution thanks the soldiers for their gallantry and patriotism.

Who Shall Visit the Schools.

Some think the public servant—the editor—the man who has everybody's business as well as his own to look after. We are inclied to think that there are many men who can spend time in looking after their own children quite as well as the editor can take care of their children for them. Nor is it the duty of the district board alone to attend to the schools. Are they not the very men who have the most of business of their own to manage? Does it not often happen that the members of the school board send no children? How many of the parents, who send children to school, and who never visited the school, would permit a fine young horse to remain in the hands of a training master half the time that they allow their children to go to school without looking after them?

You train up a dog to be active and quick. You train your horse to mind to the word, and he becomes a fine specimin of horse flesh; but the children must look out for themselves, or at least be left in the hands of those whom you do not personally know. They may be good teachers and they may not. You do not inform yourself upon the subject.

Too many parents make their opinion from the opinion of the children. Just as if a child had more judgement than the parent. Who ever saw a child that was inclined to shirk from study that was not fond of an easy teacher.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and ground or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

The wedding party, including the President and Superintendent of the Southern Railroad, started this morning on a special train for Adrian, where Henry A., twin brother of the above, is to be married to Nellie, daughter of Dr. Knapp, of that place, and from where, we understand, the parties intend starting west on their wedding tour.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

A healthy tonic, gentle stimulant and unequalled morning appetizer. Prepared in ripe old Bourbon. Being now used to the exclusion of all other Bitters in more than fifty United States Army Hospitals, and millions of private families, and is the only popular medicine which has been especially exempted from stamp tax by the United States government, on the ground of its having been adopted as a standard remedy by the medical profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ They are made of ingredients well known and approved by the medical profession, as having powerful tonic properties, are both palatable and pleasant, with sufficient strengthening properties to correct the bilious derangement of the system, and act like a charm when taken according to direction, as a remedy for the following diseases:—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affections, Loss of Appetite, Lowness of Spirit, Sallow Complexion,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

FOR

Headache, Costiveness, and kindred diseases, arising from a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels. Let every one try these agreeable Bitters; once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who are in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effectual tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced me to give them publicity, so that thousands who have not used them, may try them and be convinced of their efficacy.—

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ Ladies, who have tried and found most other "Stomach Bitters" too bitter, unpalatable and too highly medicated for their delicate taste, please give these a trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system.

☞ If your druggist or tradesman has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.—

☞ Remember the name, and take no other,

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

which have been showered upon him from

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

will cure all the above mentioned diseases and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

These Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of over twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by their use gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from torpid liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of those Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

They strengthen and invigorate the system.
They are unequaled for general debility.
They are a sure cure for dyspepsia.
They give a good and healthy appetite.
They assist digestion.
They are the best stimulant in existence.
They are a preventive of Fever and Ague.
They relieve constipation.
They cure Nervous Headache.
They are perfectly pure and palatable

Aged persons and delicate females will find they can save large doctor's bills by the use of these Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits. The Red Jacket Bitters are only sold in bottles with our name blown on the side, and our private government stamp across the cork.

—CORDIALS—

For Medicinal and Table uses, which are perfectly pure, and need only be tried to be appreciated. None genuine unless they have our gold label on each bottle, and our initials pressed in wax over the cork.

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

—O—

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stich alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart, or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stiches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the Shuttle Thread equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on those machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The Secretary of the Treasury give notice that subscriptions will be received for Coupon Treasury Notes, payable three years from Aug. 15th, 1864, with semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three-tenths per cent. per annum,—principal and interest both to be paid in lawful money.

These notes will be convertible at the option of the holder at maturity, into six per cent. gold bearing bonds, payable not less than five nor more than twenty years from their date, as the Government may elect.—They will be issued in denominations of 50, 100, 500, 1,000, and 5,000 dollars, and all subscriptions must be for fifty dollars or some multiple of fifty dollars.

The notes will be transmitted to the owners free of transportation charges as soon after the receipt of the original Certificates of Deposit as they can be prepared.

As the notes draw interest from August 15, persons making deposits subsequent to that date must pay the interest accrued from date of note to date of deposit.

Parties depositing twenty-five thousand dollars and upwards for these notes at any one time will be allowed a commission of one quarter of one per cent., which will be paid by the Treasury Department upon the receipt of a bill for the amount, certified to by the officer with whom the deposit was made. No deductions for commissions must be made from the deposits.

Special Advantages of this Loan.

IT IS A NATIONAL SAVINGS BANK, offering a higher rate of interest than any other, and the best security. Any savings bank which pays its depositors in U. S. Notes, considers that it is paying in the best circulating medium of the country, and it CANNOT pay in anything better, for its own assets are either in Government securities or in notes or bonds payable in Government paper.

It is equally convenient as a temporary or permanent investment. The notes can always be sold for within a fraction of their face and accumulated interest, and are the best security with banks as collaterals for [illegible]

CONVERTIBLE INTO A SIX PER CENT. 5-20 GOLD BOND.

In addition to the very liberal interest on the notes for three years, this privilege of conversion is now worth about three per cent per annum, for the current rate for 5-20 Bonds is not less than nine per cent. premium, and before the war the premium on six per cent. U. S. stocks was over twenty per cent It will be seen that the actual profit on this loan, at the present market rate is not less than ten per cent. per annum.

Its Exemption from State or Municipal Taxation

But aside from all the advantages we have enumerated, a special Act of Congress exempts all Bonds and Treasury Notes from local taxation. On the average, this exemption is worth about two per cent. per annum, according to the rate of taxation in various parts of the country.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as those issued by the Government. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, or stock companies, or separate communities, only, is pledged for payment, while the whole property of the country is held to secure the discharge of all the obligations of the United States.

While the Government offers the most liberal terms for its loans, it believes that the very strongest appeal will be to the loyalty and patriotism of the people.

Duplicate certificates will be issued for all deposits. The party depositing must endorse upon the original certificate the denomination of notes required, and whether they are to be issued in blank or payable to order.—When so endorsed it must be left with the officer receiving the deposit, to be forwarded to the Treasury Department.

SUBSCRIPTIONS WILL BE RECEIVED by the Treasurer of the United States, at Washington, the several Assistant Treasurers and designated Depositaries, and by the SECOND NATIONAL BANK OF DETROIT, MICH., and by all National banks which are depositaries of public money, and all respectable Banks and Bankers throughout the country will give further information and AFFORD EVERY FACILITY TO SUBSCRIBERS. 717

ORDINANCE passed by the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh Oct. 3d, 1864, amendatory of the bye-laws on fire limits.

Whereas, petition has been made by Messrs Slayton & Tindall and seven other real estate owners contiguous and near the premises effected, asking such an amendment of the bye laws relative to fire limits in the village of Tecumseh, so as to allow the removal by said Tindall & Slayton of their two story ware house situate upon Evans Street in said village, southward to within one hundred and nineteen feet of the north line of Chicago street; provided the two story part of said warehouse when so removed shall be provided with an addition on the entire south side thereof twenty feet wide, its east, south and west walls to be constructed of stone or brick two stories high; also the west wall of said wood ware house to be built of brick, sustained upon iron columns, with the entire structure covered with one roof, flat and of fire proof gravel cement, cornice of brick along brick walls.

Be it therefore ordained by "the Common Council of the village of Tecumseh," that so much of the fire limits of said village adjacent to and upon the east line of Evans Street from a point ninety-nine feet north of Chicago street, extending thence north sixty feet and eastward of Evans Street seventy-two feet may at the option of the proprietors of the land, from and after the first day of March next, be occupied by a building upon the plan and of the materials recited in the foregoing preamble.

The Union.

"Sail on, O Ship of State!
Sail on, O Union! strong and great!
Humanity, with all its fears,
With all the hopes of future years,
Is hanging breathless on thy fate!
In spite of rock and tempest roar,
In spite of false lights on the shore,
Sail on, nor fear to breast the sea!
Our hearts, our hopes, are all with thee,
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears,
Are all with thee—are all with thee

The Basket of Almonds.

A peasant had three sons, whom he kept hard at work, helping him to earn a little money. One day he sent them out into the forest, to cut faggots; but, instead of working, the two eldest played with fir-apples. When it was almost noon, and they wanted to make up for lost time, the one broke his cleaver, and the other his hatchet. So they began to cry, for they knew well enough, when they got home, they would both get a sound beating. Just then, up came an old man, who said, "what is the matter, my lads?

So they told him their plight, and he said, "You may wish three times, and your wishes will instantly come true; only take care, and wish what is good for yourselves."

"A new hatchet for me, then," cried the eldest at once; and there, to be sure lay a hatchet before him.

"I wish for a pretty wife," said the second; and a wife he had.

"I wish for a castle and a garden, and an almond-tree in it, and whoever eats any of its fruit will never ail anything," wished the third, who was the youngest of the three; and strange to say, the castle rose up in a moment.

From that time the father and the other two went to live in the castle, with the youngest; after they had lived there awhile, the king's daughter fell sick, and no physician could be found clever enough to cure her. So the king made proclamation, that any one who could cure his daughter, should have her in marriage.

When the peasant heard that, he bethought him, as you may fancy, immediately about the almond-tree; and so he gathered a basketful of ripe almonds, and gave it to the eldest son to carry to the king's palace. On his way there, he met a little old man, who inquired what he had in that basket?

"Nothing," he replied; whereupon the little man said, "Well, if you have nothing, you will find nothing."

The young man went on laughing, and when he arrived at the palace, he presented to the king the basket, covered over, as it was, with a clean white napkin.

"My father's duty to you, sire," said he; "and here are some almonds, to make the princess well again;" and glad beyond measure was the king as he took off the napkin; but lo! not a single almond was to be seen.

The king was in a mighty rage, and had the young man kicked out, with orders to his chamberlain to have him paid off with five and twenty lashes. When he had limped home, his father gave him five and twenty more; so that he wished the almonds, and the little man, and the king, at the North Pole. That was his reward.

Next morning the second son thought he would have better luck, so his father filled the basket full of almonds, and off he started.

Not far off the city, he met the little old man, who asked him what he had in his basket?

"Nothing at all," said he softly; and the little old man replied, "Well, then, nothing will you get."

The youth went on mocking at the old man, and when he came to the palace, he presented the king with the basket with a napkin over it. And he said, "Here, sir, is a basket of almonds my father humbly sends, to make the princess well again."

"Let me see it," replied the king; but when he took up the napkin the basket was quite empty. "What!" cried the king, "Are you for making a fool of me, too? I'll teach you what ripe almonds are." And he bade the chamberlain give him 50 boxes on the ears, sore enough to bring tears into his eyes.

"How do you like the taste of that?" said the king. "Ill enough," he replied," and home he slunk he to his father, who gave him fifty more; so that was a hundred blows he had for his pains.

The youngest brother was not so fair in the face as his brother, but in his heart very much fairer. So he prayed his father to let him try with the basket of almonds. "For maybe," said he, "I may have better fortune."

"Well," said the father, "only remember, if you come back like your brothers, I'll beat you till you have no more strength than a bottle of London gin."

"For God's sake, let me go!" exclaimed the youth.

So his father gathered a basket of almonds, covered it with a cloth and off he went.

By and by, the little man met him and asked what he had in the basket.

"Almonds," said he, "to cure the king's daughter. Perhaps you would take one or two, for there are quite enough here."

"Thank you," said the little man. "But I must give you something in return for your kindness. Here, then, is a pipe, on which, if you blow, you will get anything you want;" and therewith the little man handed him a pipe and disappeared.

As soon as the young man reached the town, he made for the palace and went to the king.

"My father sends his duty, sire," said he, "and has sent these almonds to cure the princess," and so saying he presented the basket.

The king uncovered it, and there inside were the most beautiful almonds that man could ever set eyes on. So the king took them to the princess, and no sooner had she eaten one, than she was very much better; and after eating three, she was half cured.

The young man wished to have her for his wife, on the spot, but the king said, "Not yet, not yet. You must do three things for me, which, as soon as you achieve, I will consent to the marriage."

But he only said so, because he didn't like the young man as a son-in-law.

When the young man inquired what he was to do, the king replied, "Go out and you will find a heap of oats, which I shall have sown, and by morning you must pick them all up again, so that not a single one is missing."

The youth was greatly troubled at first but he thought him of his pipe, and fancied that would make his fortune. So he let the oats be sown, and sat down and blew his pipe.

All at once he felt something crawling up his leg, and there was the king of ants, who asked him what he wished him to do.

"Be kind enough to pick up the oats for me," said the youth; and so well did the king perform his bidding, that by morning they were all picked up, and not even one missing.

The king was annoyed, and he thought he would make the second task too hard for him. So he went with the youth to the sea, and threw a key into the water where it was deepest.

"Bring me up the key again," said he to the youth. "And, after that, you may have my daughter."

"I will try," said the youth; and he sat down on the shore, and when evening came, blew a blast on his pipe.

Soon there was a stir in the water, and a fish with a crown on, lifted its head out of the water, and said, "I am the king of the fishes. What he you wish me to do?"

"Be kind enough to get me the key that the king has thrown in the water," said he.

So the king of the fishes assembled all his subjects together, and issued a notice, that whoever found the key should have plenty to drink.

So down dived the fishes, and very soon one came swimming up with the key in his mouth, which the fish king gave at once to the young man. More annoyed than ever was the old king now, and devised something more provoking still. After pondering long, at last he said, "If you can feed a hundred sheep for a month on one plot of ground, without their becoming a whit fatter or leaner, and without losing a single one, or increasing their number, then you shall marry my daughter."

The plot of ground was so small that the sheep could scarcely stand on on it, and feeding comfortably on it was quite out of the question, and outside there was not a blade of grass for them to nibble at.

Sore pressed, indeed, was the youth, but he drove the sheep to the spot, and blew in the evening a loud blast on his pipe; made them leap over the city gate, and march right into the court of the castle like a battalion of soldiers, where they fed to their hearts' content. If he missed one, or one died, he had only to blow on his pipe, and a lamb sprung up which was soon quite as large as the rest of the sheep.

By the end of the month, the sheep could dance as well as if they had been under the best dancing master. Do what he would, the king this time could not refuse the marriage, which was celebrated with great pomp. The youth made his father prime minister, and appointed his brothers to such posts as made all the family remarkably comfortable.

Jack Sprat.

At the battle of Trafalgar, after the defiance and the French ship l'Aigle had been for some time heavily engaged, the fire of the latter slackened so much as to render it evident, that, although her colors were still flying, her power of further resistance was well nigh gone. Captain Durham, anxious to stop the dertruction of human life, was desirous of boarding the enemy's ship; but as it was a dead calm, and all his boats had been shot through, he found it impossible to accomplish his wishes, although the two ships were within pistol shot of each other. In this emergency, Mr. Sprat, master's mate, came forward, and volunteered to swim on board the ship Aigle, with Capt. Durham at first refused to sanction, as being far to hazardous an enterprise; and it was not untill Mr. Spratt, placing his cutlass between his teeth, and his battle axe in his belt, called out "boarders, follow me!" and, without waiting to see if he was accompaned or not leaped and swam toward the enemy's ship.

He was soon seen from the Defiance climbing up the rudder-chains of the French 74, and entering her stern-port alone, but undaunted. From the gun-room he contrived to fight his way through the decks to the poop, where he was charged by three grenadiers with fixed bayonets. Avoiding their first rush with great dexterity, he placed two of them hors de combat with his cutlass, and grappling the third, fell with him from the poop to the quarter deck The Frenchman broke his neck, but Mr. Spratt escaped uninjured.

By that time a slight breeze had enabled the Defiance to close with her antagonist, and the boarders, at first repulsed, had succeeded in establishing themselves on the decks of the French ship.—Joining his shibmates in the desperate hand-to-hand conflict raging on the quarter deck, Mr. Spratt had the happiness of saving a French officer's life from the fury of his assailants. Scarcely had he performed this act of humanity, before another grenadier endeavored to run him through with his bayonet. The thrust was parried, and the Frenchman then presented his musket at Mr. Spratt's breast, who succeeded in striking it down with his cutlass, and the charge passed through his right leg shattering both bones. He immediately retreated between two guns, and with two others who had joined him, continued to defend himself from his assailant until relieved by the approach of some of his own party.

Captain Durham, in a private letter, stated that Mr. Spratt hauled down the French colors, and that he afterwards saw him in the quarter-galley of the Aigle holding up his shattered leg, calling out, "poor Jack Spratt is done up at last." Mr. Spratt was not, however quite done up; for after seventeen weeks confinementin Gibralter Hospital, he returned home to England, and was presented by Captain Durham with a lieutenant's commission, which had been placed at his disposal by the Admirality, in testimony of the sense entertained of the daring courage he had exhibited in striking the French colors as above descriped.

A Slow Boat.

There was a steamboat coming up the Mississippi on a dark night, and the captain according to the "time honored usage," was blaying cards in the social hall. The mate stepped in:

"Captain, out of wood—not enough left to make the water hot enough to shave with."

"Ring the bell," replied the captain. "Show a light, and scare some up along the shore."

The mate went out, and the captain went on with the game. In afew minutes the mate returned.

"Found a boat, sir."

The captain left the table and went out.

"How do you sell your wood?" shouted the captain to the people at the yard.

"Two and-a-half."

"Too much," said the captain. "However, take a cord or two and look further."

A couple of cords were taken in, the game was resumed in the social hall, and the boat went on.

A half an hour elapsed, when the mate again appeared.

"Out of wood, sir."

"Bell and light—my deal."

The orders were obeyed, and the mate again anounced a wood yard. The captain went out.

'What's the price of wood?'

'Two-and-a-half.'

'Too high, but take a couple of cords till we can do better.'

As before, a couple of cords were taken in, and not twenty minutes elapsed before the mate again appeared:

'Out of wood, sir.'

'Ring the bell,'

'Better take more this time.'

'Show a light.'

In a few minutes a wood-yard was again 'rung up,' and the steamer B—— went in:

'How do you sell your wood?'

'Two and-a half.'

'Two-and-a-half be d—d!' cried the captain

'Well, captain,' answered the woodman, 'we will put it to you this time at two-and-a-quarter, as this makes the 3rd time you have wooded with us to-night.

The captain had nothing to say, but took the wood and got quickly out of that stiff current, which the boat was unable to stem. The B—— was so solmnly slow that the captain himself used to say she must have been intended for a hearse. She is the steamboat which the newspapers once said made a trip from New Orleans to Louisville in six days and —four weeks.

Rapidity of Thought.

A very remarkable circumstance, and an important point in analogy, is to be found in the extreme rapidity which the mental operations are performed, or rather, with which the material changes on which ideas depend are excited on the hemispherical ganglia. It would appear as if the whole series of acts, that would really occupy a long space of time, pass ideally through the mind in an instantt. We have in dreams no true perception of the lapse of time—a strange property of mind—for if such be also its property when entered into the eternal disembodied state, time will appear to us eternity. The relations of space, as well as of time, are also annihilated, so that while almost an eternity is compressed into a moment, infinite space is traversed more swiftly than by real thought. There are numerous illustrations of this principle on record. A gentleman dreamed that he had enlisted as a soldier, joined his regiment, deserted, was arrested, carried back, tried, condemned to be shot, and led out for execution. After the usual preparation a gun was fired; he awoke with the report, and found that a noise in the next room had, at the same moment, produced the dream and awakened him.

A friend of Dr. Abercombie dreamed that he crossed the Atlantic and spent a fortnight in America. In embarking on his return, he fell into the sea, and awaking in his fright, he found that he had not been asleep ten minutes.

☞ Christmas and New Year's fall on Sunday on an average once in four years. The cycle is 28 years—the days of the week multiplied by 4, a bissextile period—within which period these holidays occur four times on a Sunday. Christmas day will happen on sunday in the years 1870, 1881, 1892—being six, eleven, six, and five years, respectively. One leap year occurs in the first period, and and in the third period, completing the weeks in six years. Two leap years occur in the fourth period, completing the weeks in 5 years: while three leap years accur in the second period, completing the fortnight in elven years, and leaping over the Sunday in 1876. The year 1892 will be the next in which the days of the week and of the month will correspond with 1864. An interruption to the regularity of cycle will take place in 1800 which will not be a leap year.

☞ Some men, who, at certain hours of the day, are great walkers, calculate not by Long Measure, not in yards and furloughs and miles, but by Ale and Beer and Wine Measure.

☞ Many persons who pride themselves upon being skeptics, will believe anything, provided it is impossible.

☞ Why does the new moon remind one of a giddy girl? Because she is too young to show much reflection.

Taking Cold.

A "cold" is not necessarily the result of low or high temperature. A person may go from a hot bath, directly into a cold one, or into snow even, and not take cold. He may remain out in the coldest atmosphere until chilled through, and still not take cold. On the contrary, he may take cold by pouring a couple of tablespoonfuls of water upon some parts of his dress, or by standing in a door, or before a stove, or by sitting near a window or other opening, where one part of the body is colder than another part. Let it be kept in mind that uniformity of temperature over the whole body is the great thing to be looked after. It is the unequal heat upon different parts of the body that produces colds, by disturbing the uniform circulation of the blood, which in turn induces congestion of some part. If you must keep a partially wet garment on, it would perhaps be as well to wet the whole of it uniformly. The feet are the great source of colds, on account of the variable temperature they are subject to. Keep these always dry and warm, and avoid draughts of air, hot or cold, wet spots on the garments, and other direct causes of unequal temperature, and keep the system braced up by plenty of sleep, and the eschewing of debilitating foods and drinks, and you will be proof against a cold and its results.

Maid, choosing a man, remember this:
You take his nature with his name;
Ask, too, what his religion is,—
For you will soon be of the same.

The News

Thursday, Feb. 23.

Official information of the cature of Ft. Anderson, below Wilmington, has been received. The capture of this fort necessitates the evacuation of Wilmington, or the troops in the town will be captured. Unless hitherto unknown obstructions have been found above Fort Anderson, our forces are in quiet possession of the city. Commander Cushing, who has been up to Wilmington, asserts that our gunboats could all pass within full sight and shelling distance of the city.

Bell, the rebel pirate and spy, is to be executed to-morrow in New York, by order of Fresident Lincoln.

It is believed the enrollment bill will be defeated in the lower House of Congress, as its provisions are regarded as oppressive.

A special says Hon. J. K. Dubols, of Illinois is also pressed for a position in the Cabinet. It is most likely that should any Western man succeed, it will be Judge Usher.

Strong reconstruction grounds were recently taken by a lawyer named Harris in a speech at Raleigh, N. C., on the 20th ult. It had the effect to stir the rattlesnake u considerably, as Jeff. Davis ordereded his assert, but the legislature extended over him the protecting shield of the State.

From Rebel Journals

The Richmond Examiner of tne 18th says Sherman's marsh is a mere overrunning of the country, in consequence of which the enemy might begin to poast of subjugation. So far as they have advanced and penetrated to the very heart of the State without serious opposition, but the only value of that advance for the general purboses of the campaign consists in being a step toward co-operating with Grant in the investment of Richmond. Shermans enterprise is only a begining. The future plans or present disposition of Beauregard's forces are unknown here, but the Confederate army is safe, and may yet lead Sherman srch a dance as Green led Cornwallis over these same riverr and swamps. The Federal army cannot reach Danville. Thus it would have been better to have staid in Atlanta all this while. There is reason to believe that Beauregard is carying out a deliberate design, and Sherman is near his end of triumphs. We may regard the audations South Carolion as one of the consequences of removing Johnson from command of our army of Tennessee.

The Richmond Whig's editorial on the peace movment says we imagine Seward was rather glad than otherwise that the Confederate gentlemen refused to be duped by him, since their refusal gave him the coveted opportunity for the use of his accostomed weapon. No doubt he was more anxious as Grant had anticipated by him telling the most stupendous falsehoods that Hunter and Stephens had expressed themselves in a manner indicating a return to the Yankee Union.

The Whig, says Seward, wrote to Mr. Adams, intimating that the Commissioners meant an alliance against England and France, thus hoping to enlist foreign nations against the rebels.

Capture of Charleston.

NEW-YORK, Feb. 21.—A dispatch from Secretary Stanton to Maj. Gen. Dix, anounces the reception of the official report of Maj. Gen. Gilmoreof the capture of Charleston. Gen. Gilmore's report is as follows:

CHARLESTON, Feb. 18, via NEW YORK, Feb. 20 Maj. Gen. Halleck, Chief of Staff:

General—The city of Charleston and all its defences came into our posession this morning with about 200 pieces of good artillery, and a supply of fine ammunition. The enemy commenced evacuating the works last night, and Maj Mac beth surrendered the city to the troops of Gen. Schemelmnifig at 9 o'clock this morning, at which if it was occupied by our forces. Our adaance on the Edisto from Bull's Bay, hastened the retreat. The cotton, warehouses, arsenals, Quartermaster stores, railroad bridges, and two iron clads were burned by the enemy. Some vessels in the ship yard were also burned. Nearly all the inhabitants remaining behind belong to the poor classes.

Very respectfully.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The Post's special says that it is believed the enrollment bill will be defeated in the House, as its provisions are regardee as oppressive.

The 11th Mich. Cavalry.

CAMP 11TH MICH. CAVALRY, Mt. STERLING, KY., Feb. 16, '65.

EDITOR HERALD:

Thinking that a brief account of the whereabouts, etc., of the Eleventh Mich. Volunteer Cavalry might not be uninteresting to your readers, I append the following for the perusal of those concerned. Regimental Headquarters is still at this place, although less than half the companies of the regiment are here. Company A, under command of Captain Gilledy, late 1st Lieut. Co. G, left here nearly a week since for Owingsville, distant twelve miles, where they will probably remain some time, scouting the adjacent country, and preventing the outrages of guerrillas. Co. B, Capt. Chas. E. Simpson, is stationed at Jeffersonville, a small town about 7 miles south-east from here picketing the roads leading to the mountains, securing lost or stolen Government property, etc. Companies C and D, Captains Miles and Edwards, left about five days since on a scouting expedition towards Flat Rock, where it was reported a band of guerrillas was lurking about. Companies F and M, commanded by Major D. D. Buck, have been at Flemingsburg, a small town about 33 miles from here, for nearly a month, where it was expected they would meet with a considerable force of Bushwhackers under the leadership of the notorious Pete Everett and John T. Williams. (By the way, our Colonel has established his head quarters at Pete Everett's mansion, at this place.) They have as yet, however, made no belligerent demonstrations upon our men there, thinking it much more profitable to steal the horses and rob the houses of the citizens living in close proximity to their mountain fastnesses.

Companies H and R, commanded by 2d Lieutenants Decker and Palmer, went out a few days since in quest of some horse-thieves, heard of in the vicinity, and have not yet returned. Companies G, I, E, and L, are encamped in and about Mount Sterling, which is a town of perhaps two thirds the population of Tecumseh. Much of the better part of the town has been destroyed by rebel incendiaries and guerrillas. The Court-house, which was a very fine building of brick, is now but a mass of ruins; also a hotel, and several stores. There are many loyal people in and about Mount Storling, and a great many who are decidedly disloyal. But so long as the place is occupied by our forces they are very quiet.

About three-fourths of a mile east of the town lies the battle ground of June 9th, 1864, where the forces under Gen. Burbridge attacked the unsuspecting rebels, at daylight, on that day, and drove them precipitately, and with heavy loss, towards Lexington.

The depredations of guerrillas and horse thieves continue to be a great annoyance to the people, especially those who are known to be loyal. No section of the country seems to be sacred from their visitations. They prowled about mostly at night and we are enabled to capture but few of them, from the fact that at the approach of any armed detachment of soldiers, they instantly dissolve their organization and each man betakes himself to his mountain recess; therefore, capturing any organized band, however small, is next to impossible.

Five of them, however, were captured about ten days since, and sent to Lexington for trial, where they were turned over to Lieut. Vance, Provost Marshal General, District of K., whose known antipathy to bushwhackers gives us assurance that they will not be lightly handled.

About a week since, a happy party left here just at dark, to attend a wedding, some 6 miles distant, which passed off very pleasantly until late in the evening after a bounteous feast had been enjoyed, when the parties proposed to take a drive into the country. Accordingly, guests, accompanied by the lately wedded pair, started out in fine spirits to enjoy a pleasant sleighride. Ere they had proceeded far on their joyous way, they were accosted by about a score of sore-footed "Johnnies" who were greatly in need of horses, and who very obligingly relieved them of all their horses, watches, etc., and left the disappointed party to complete their bridal tour on foot. I have since learned, however, that some of the property taken has been restored to the owners.

There is not a great degree of sickness in camp at present, and the men are in fine spirits.

There is room for a few more men in our regiment, and any young "Michigander" who may want to serve Uncle Samuel for a short time and help put an end to the war, would do well to come here and enlist in the Eleventh. Our Regiment is well officered and equipped, and is in all its appointments, we think, a fine regiment.

We are armed with the Spencer Carbine, Colt's pistol, and also sabres. Our arms cannot be excelled in any army in the United States, or the world.

Respectfully,

OLIVER EITSON.

Interesting Questions and Answers relative to the 7.30 U.S. Loan.

MR. JAY COOKE, of Philadelphia, who for so long a time had the management of the popular 500 million 5 20 Loan, has just been appointed by Secretary Fessenden, the General Agent to dispose of the only popular Loan now offered for sale by the Government, viz: the "SEVEN THIRTY."

In entering upon his duties he desires to answer plainly the large number of questions daily and hourly propounded to him, so that his fellow countrymen may all understand this "Seven-Thirty Loan" is—what are the peculiar merits,—how they can subscribe for or obtain the notes, &c.

1st Question. Why is the Loan called the Seven-Thirty Loan?

Answer. It bears Interest, in currency, at the rate of Seven Dollars and thirty cents, each year, on every hundred dollars; making the interest as follows:

One cent	per day	on each	$ 50 note.
Two cents	"	"	100 "
Ten "	"	"	500 "
Twenty "	"	"	1,000 "
One dollar	"	"	5,000 "

2d Question. When and how can they be obtained?

Answer. They are for sale, at poor, and accrued interests, by al Sub-Treasuries, National and other Banks, and all Bankers and Brokers.

3d Question. When is the interests payable and how can it be collected?

Answer. The Coupons or Interest Tickets are due 15th of February and 15th of august in each year, and can be cut off from the note, and will be cashed by any Sub-Treasurer, U. S Depository, National or other Bank or Banker.

4th Question. When must the Government pay off these 7.308

Answer. They are due in two years and a half from the 15 of February, 1865; viz.: on the 15th of August, 1867.

5th Question. Must I recieve back my money so soon as 1867?

Answer. No! not unless you yourself prefer to do so—the Law gives you the right to demand from the Government, at that time, either your money or an equal amount at par, of the famous and popular 5.20 Gold Bearing 6 per cent. Loan.

6th Question. How much do you concider this privilege of conversation, into 5.20 Loan to be worth?

Answer. 5.20s bearing Gold Interest from first of November, are to-day worth 9 per cent. premium. If they are worth no more at the end of the two years and a half, when you have a right to them, than they now are, this premium added to the interest you receive, will give you at least 10 per cent. anumn for your money—but the opinion is that they will be worth more than 9 per cent. premium at that time.

7th Question. What other advantage is there in investing in the 7,30?

Answer. It cannot be taxed by States Counties, or cities, and this adds from one to three per cent. per annum to the net income of the holder, according to the rate of taxation in various localities. All bonds and stocks except those of the U. S. and all mortgages, &c, are taxed, not only by the Government, but by States, Counties and Cities.

8th Question. How does the Government raise the money to pay the interest, and is it safe and sure?

Answer. The Government collects, by taxes, internal revenue, and duties on imports, fully three hundred millions each year. This is nearly three times as much as is needed to pay the interest on all the debt and as soon as the war is ended the amount not needed to pay the interest will be used in paying off the debt.—Our government has twice paid off all its debt and can easily do so again. The interest is the very safest investment in the world. It is as safe as a mortgage on a good farm, and pays a better interest. It is in fact, a first mortgage on all lands, all incomes, all railroad and canal bonds, and bank or other stocks, mortgages, etc.

Nothing can be safer, for we are all bound for it, and all that we have is firmly held for the payment of principle and Interest. How foolish those people are who keep their gold and greenbacks idle and locked up, or purchase mortgages or railroads stocks and bonds, which pay only 5 or 6 per cent intirest, when thes 7.-30s pay (counting the premium on Five-Twenties,) over ten per cent., and are so much safer and surer.

9th Question. How many Seven-Thirties are there, and how much remains unsold?

Answer. There are only about three hundred and twenty-five millions authorized by law, and only about one hundred and ninety millions remain unsold.

10th Question. How long will it take you to sell the balance?

Answer. There are about 800 National Banks all engaged in selling them; also a large number of the old banks, and at least three thousand private bankers and brokers, and special agents will be engaged in all parts of the country in disposing of them to the people.

11th Question. How long will it take to sell the whole?

Answer. In less than three months they will be all sold, and will no doubt then sell at a premium, as was the case with the old Seven-Thirties, the first Twenty-Year Loan, and the Five-Twenties.

The above questions and answers, it is believed, will give full information to all. If not, the General Subscription Agent, or any of the Banks or bankers employed to sell the Loan, will be glad to answer all questions, and to furnish the Seven-Thirties in small or large sums (as the notes are issued in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000, and $5,000,) and to render it easy for all to subscribe—thus fulfilling the instructions of Mr. Fessenden, who earnestly desires that the people of the whole land, (as well as the capitalists,) shall have every opportunity afforded them of obtaining a portion of this most desirable investment.

Let none delay, but Subscribe at once, through the Nearest Responsible Bank or Bankers.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,

A Serious Accident.

A wagon containing seven persons, 4 ladies and 3 gentlemen, belonging to Justus Lowe of Ridgeway, was accidently upset about two miles north of the city on the Raisin Valley road at a place known as Bixby's Hill on Monday last. Miss Carrie Lowe of Fairfield, was quite seriously injured, a blood vessel on the left side of the head being ruptured, causing bleeding at the ear and nose. Miss Sarah Gordon and Miss Elizabeth Northup were both slightly injured and the 3 gentlemen all sustained slight injuries.—Expositor.

☞ We understand that there is a project on foot for building a telegraph line from Adrian to Jackson and Lansing. A gentleman from the East is now here canvassing the matter, who offers to build the road through, if he can get the capital stock subscribed by the towns along the line of the proposed route. There is nothing which the business men of our community need so much as a good telegraph line. It would not only be a great convenience, but also an excellent investment of capital, far superior, in our opinion, to the "ile" stock, in which many of our citizens have already invested. We think it would be advisable to call a citizens' meeting, at no very distant date, to take the matter into consideration. Our business men, especially, should put their shoulder to the wheel. Let them set the ball rolling. Another such opportunity may not present itself in some time.

Anniversary Exercises.

A very pleasant and appropriate entertainment was given at Union School Hall on Wednesday morning last, the Anniversary of Washington's birth day. The exercises consisted of the reading of essays, music, and addresses. The first essay, by Chas. Cook, was a biography of Washington, well written and very well read. The second, by Miss Mary Chadwick, was a well-written eulogy. Third, a poem, by Miss Annette Crossman, was a worthy production, appropriate to the occasion, closing with a beautiful apostrophe to Washington. It was well written and very distinctly read. The fourth, and last, an essay, of much merit, by Miss Eliza Adams, in which Washington, the boy, the Christian, patriot, and statesman, was presented as a worthy model for all aspiring youth. Reverends Wright and Wishard followed with addresses, the latter giving a very interesting description of Mount Vernon and its surroundings, which he visited last summer. The exercises were listened to throughout with marked attention by the pupils and a respectable number of citizens. In proper time let other great and good men be thus vividly presented as worthy models for the youth in our schools.

The Bridal Party.

TECUMSEH, Feb. 16, 1865.

The unusual stir observable among the younger and more fashionable portion of our community, last evening, gave indications of the near approach of some particular event not ordinarily found among the occurrences of every day life. About the hour of 7 o'clock these movements began to assume form, when they were discovered to gravitate in the direction of a certain well lighted mansion, the residence of one of our most respected citizens. To this attractive spot the living stream continued to flow from all points of the compass, until its ample walls were well filled with a gay and happy throng.

The cause of the activity noticeable at our Millinery and other fancy establishments, for several days past, and the extraordinary demand for various articles necessary to the completion of a lady's toilet for an evening party, was now apparent. The mystery was solved. George F. and Minnie B. was about to be joined in the holy bands of matrimony; the latter, the only daughter of our worthy host, the Hon. John J. Adam, and the former a son of the Rev. W. P. Wastell.

Soon after the hour of nine, the parties took their stand on the Hymeneal altar, the Bridegroom supported on his right by his twin brother, Henry Wastell, of Detroit, and the Bride, on her left, by Miss Knapp, of Adrian, all appearing in rich and elegantly arranged costume. At this stage of the proceeding a solemn stillness seemed to pervade the large assemblage, which but a moment before was all life and joy and gayety, when the reverend gentleman before alluded to, stepped forward, and in a clear voice and distinct utterance pronounced the ceremony, which was at once unique and impressive; so the twain were made one flesh.

Then came the compliments and felicitations which poured in on every side, and which continued until the door of a good sized dining hall was thrown open, which revealed to the delighted vision of the happy guests, a gorgeously spread table, loaded with the choicest luxuries—all tastefully arranged, and giving evidence that the best skill of the cuisine and kindred arts, had been employed in preparing them. Justice being done to this magnificent repast, music, sweet music, was next in order. The performance on the piano, by Aggie and others was splendid, and the songs charming. But time would fail me were I to attempt a description of the many happy incidents of the evening; the beautiful bridal presents even which lay in heaps on a pier table in the drawingroom, can only be mentioned.

The festivities of the evening were kept up until a late hour, and all passed off with great eclat. The guests on the occasion were composed, not only of the elite of Tecumseh society, but many notables from abroad were also present. Chicago, Adrian, Toledo, Detroit and other places, were represented, and, taking the whole scene le tout ensemble, it was a most magnificent affair, and one which will long be remembered by those who were present at the consummation of the happy union of George and Minnie.

The Exhibition.

The exhibition given at Odd Fellow's Hall, in this village, on Tuesday evening last for the benefit of the Soldier's Aid Society, was a complete success. The net proceeds were about $53.

The Silver Band of this place, led by Fred. Emerson, kindly donated their services and added in a great measure to the interest of the occasion.

The exercises of the evening commenced with a declamation entitled "Another Year," by H. B. Roberts, which was declaimed with true spirit. Then followed a very good tableau of "When Johnny comes marching home.

The first dialogue, entitled "Dress Reform Convention," was well played and listened to with marked attention.—Each player seeming to have had the right part assigned her. The performers were Mrs. P. W. Adams, Mrs. M. E. Conklin, Misses H. Stearns, N. J. Beers, S. E. Castle, L. Tollman, E. L. McConnel, L. Train, C. Spofford, E. M. Adams.

Next music, which was followed by a tableau, in two scenes, Dr. Syntax, advertised for a wife, and is surprised by the crowd who apply for the situation, and his selection of a partner; which was received by the audience with applause.

The next play on the programme was the "Farmer's Son," supported by D. McNair, Miss H. Stearns, P. W. Adams, Mrs. P. W. Adams, M. E. Conklin, C. Cook, and H. T. Kneeland. It would be impossible for us to mention which deserves the most credit, as they all acted their parts exceedingly well. Each performer seemed to appreciate the caste assumed and played with true spirit.

The Tableau entitled 'Faith,' was well received, being personated by Miss C. Spofford, and was followed by that old but good piece, "The Sailor Boy's Last Dream," which was ably rehearsed by P. W. Adams.

The next was a tableau in two scenes, 'The South in Rebellion, and its return to loyalty," was decidedly the best tableau of the evening.

The last play of the evening was "A Race for a Dinner," acted by G. T. Ketcham, A. L. Brewer, S. C. Stacy, H. B. Roberts, L. Van Tine, C. Cook, N. T. Burroughs and P. W. Adams.—S. C. Stacy, feels perfectly easy and at home on the stage and it would be no easy task to find his competitor in the caste assumed by him.

The tableau 'When I was a Bachelor,' was decidedly rich, and was well received by the audience. It was followed by 'Advice to Husbands,' by A. D. Stacy, in a masterly and easy style. The last on the occasion was a tableau 'Striking Oil,' on which G. T. Ketcham, used the whip.

Thus ended the exhibition, and the crowd dispersed to their home, well satisfied with the evening's entertainment.

The Pacific Monthly

We are assured the demand for this new monthly magazine is unprecedented, owing principally to the fact that every subscriber obtains an excellent work, well worth the price of subscription, and at the same time receives an article of jewelry as a present, worth from 5 to 10 dollars—compared with the prices of such articles in retail stores. The subscription list to the Pacific Monthly is becoming immense, attributable to the enterprise and liberality displayed by its proprietors. Send on your orders for the Monthly early, and secure the numbers complete for the year which make, when bound two handsome volumes.

The Subscriber having sold his Stock of Goods to A. Hanford, requests those indebted to him—also those indebted to the late Firm of Wheeler & Waring—to make immediate payment, as he is anxious to close up his business. At present said Notes and Accounts will be found with S. C. LeBaron, at Hood's Clothing Store, who is authorized to settle the same. Prompt attention will save legal costs. Tecumseh, Feb. 15, 1865.

THESE Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of over twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by their use gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from torpid liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of these Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

They strengthen and invigorate the system.
They are unequaled for general debility.
They are a sure cure for dyspepsia.
They give a good and healthy appetite.
They assist digestion.
They are the best stimulant in existence.
They are a preventive of Fever and Ague.
They relieve constipation.
They cure Nervous Headache.
They are perfectly pure and palatable

Aged persons and delicate females will find they can save large doctor's bills by the use of these Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits. The Red Jacket Bitters, are only sold in bottles with our name blown on the side, and our private government stamp across the cork. —OUR—

For Medicinal and Table uses, which are perfectly pure, and need only be tried to be appreciated. None genuine unless they have our gold label on each bottle, and our initials pressed in wax over the cork.

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stich alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleandd or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting,

They do not break the thread, skip stiches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

Before the Battle.

BY CLARA AUGUSTA.

The lurid morn creeps redly
Up the gray eastern height;
Along the west the moon hangs low,
A yellow globe of light;
The camp fires glow and flicker,
Pale in the rising day—
The tethered war steeds champ their bits
As eager for the fray.

Like lightning rung the whisper
All through the waking camp—
The cry to move has come at last—
Hark to the hurried tramp
Of armed men as hastening on
They grasp the sword and gun,
And looking in their gleaming eyes
You'd think the victory won.

Brave hearts will chill to marble
Before the day is done—
And eyes now lit with life see not
The setting of the sun;
Arms eager, strong and valiant,
Will folded lie to-night,
And faces flushed with brilliant hope
Be still, and cold, and white.

The dim mist rises slowly—
The glittering line of blue
Stands out revealed, upon the field
Yet wet with morning dew—
Across the redoubts of the foe
The first faint gun is heard—
The sacred silence of the morn
By death and strife is stirred.

Marcelline's Triumph.

Some ten or fifteen miles beyond the mountains in the immediate vicinity of Trieste, over among the rugged passes of the Carnic Alps, there is a small hamlet of huntsmen's dwellings, and among them, though somewhat isolated, is a sort of a rough inn, which used to serve as a shelter for travellers on their way to and from Layback. It was a cold, blustering evening in March, and though there was no storm, yet the blasts, as they came sweeping and whistling, whirling and howling down the mountain sides, failed not to drive the people to the cheer of the fireside.

Within the bar-room of this cheerful inn were collected some half a dozen of the Alpine hunters, who passed the mug and tankard with good zest, now breaking into a happy chorus, and anon bending a willing ear to the tale and joke, while nearer to the blazing fire sat two men, strangers in the place, who had arrived just at nightfall and engaged entertainment and rest for the night. These two travellers looked not much unlike common men, but yet there was a something about their countenances that attracted more than passing attention from the hunters. They did not behave exactly as honest men would be supposed to have behaved, for in all their movements there was an evident aim to escape a too critical observation. They had horses in the stable, and were also provided with large travelling sacks, which sacks were either entirely or nearly empty. Ever and anon one or more of the hunters would cast a furtive glance towards the strangers and once or twice they endeavored to draw the twain into conversation; but the two men persisted in remaining by themselves, and ere long they retired to the room which had been allowed for them.

'Marcelline,' said one of the hunters, a stout, middle-aged man, addressing a blooming maiden, who stood behind the bar, 'does Altzorf return to-night?'

'No sir,' returned the girl, 'he comes not till to-morrow.'

'And has your master left you alone?' asked the hunter.

'O, no. Altzorf has left Lubin with me.'

'But Lubin is only small boy—a mere lad.'

'Well, what of that?' replied Marcelline, looking with a somewhat inquisitive glance at the hunter.

'O, nothing,' said the man, evidently endeavoring to hide, as much as possible, the fears or suspicions he entertained; 'only I do not exactly like the looks of these two men whom you have just shown to their room.'

Several of the hunters immediately coincided with this opinion, but Marcelline laughed at their suspicions.

'What an idea,' she said. 'Why what do you take them for?'

'It is not impossible that they are robbers,' retuened the first speaker.

'Ha, ha,' half laughed Marcelline. 'Robbers in such a place as this! Let's see—there are about twenty groshen in the drawer, and I have exactly seventeen crutzers in my little box up stairs! What a place for robbers! My master took all the money with him to Trieste, save what I have named.'

'Marcelline,' said the first hunter who had spoken, as he stepped over and bent his head over the bar, 'do you know if your master received in trust a large wooden box an old monk—who went lately to the convent of St. Cecelia.'

'Yes, he received such a one,' replied the maiden, and it is even now locked up in his strong room.'

'That box contains the massive silver plate and ornaments of the convent. The monk left it till his return.'

'Well, 'tis not likely that these men can have heard of that,' Marcelline replied, betraying a slight surprise at the knowledge she had just received; "and if they had, they would not surely dare to rob the house.'

'I don't know about that,' returned the hunter. 'Even in large cities these robberies take place. You had better let either Justin or Roland remain in the house to-night.'

'O, no, I had rather not—folks would talk,' uttered the maiden as she looked with a deep blush upon two fair youths among the hunters, who had been thus designated to her.

Marcelline remained firm in her determination to accept of no assistance, or rather guard, from the hunters, and ere long they departed to their several homes. The maiden was left alone in the bar-room, for Lubin was still in the stable; and as she found herself thus solitary, she could not repress the feeling of fear that came over her. While the stalwart hunters had been there, she had felt bold and safe; but now that they were gone, she could not banish the sceptre that intruded upon her loneliness. The two men—the stranger travellers—had indeed exhibited anything but pleasing countenances, and poor Marcelline now began to repent herself that she had not accepted the kind hunter's offer.

Half an hour passed away and Lubin came in from the stable. Marcelline, however, said nothing to him of what had transpired, but only requested him to be in readiness to respond to her summons in case she should have occasion to call him during the night. The boy then went to his bed, and once more the maiden was left alone. Nothing broke the stillness of the night save the blasts that howled among the Alps, and for an hour longer she sat by the fast decaying embers in the fireplace. The maiden thought surely that if the strangers meditated harm, they would have been ere this on the move; and with the trobbing of her fear-laden bosom somewhat quieted, she raked up the embers upon the hearth, extinguished the lamp that hung above the bar, and then taking her candle she started for her room up stairs.

Marcelline had passed through the narrow entry, ascended the stairs, and had her hand upon the latch of her own door, when a strange sound from the room of Lubin arrested her attention. At first she thought the boy might be talking in his sleep, but the sound of hurrying feet drove that idea from her mind, and as the idea flashed upon her that the robbers were astir, she turned to flee for help; but she was too late, for hardly had she turned back towards the stairs, when she was confronted by one of her stranger guests.

'Do you want anything, sir?' asked Marcelline, hardly conscious of what she uttered, but using the phrase merely from the force of habit. 'Yes, pretty one, I do,' the man returned. 'I want Altzorf's strong box.'

'Mercy, sir! You surely would not rob us?'

'O, no—not you. It is only those baubles which belong to the convent that we want; so bestir yourself and show us where they are.'

'I shall shriek, sir! I shall cry out for help!' exclaimed Marcelline, as she essayed to start for the stairs.

'No, no, sweet one,' the villain returned, at the same time laying a rough grasp upon the maiden's arm and drawing a pistol from his pocket. 'Your stable boy is already secured, and we shall treat you in the same way. But mark me; if you are quiet and tell us where the box is hidden, no harm shall come to you; but if you do not—'

The villain silently finished his sentence by significantly raising his pistol at the girl's head, and at that moment he was joined by his companion, who had just come from Lubin's room.

Marcelline at first thought of resistance, but soon found that she could gain nothing by that, and besides, the robbers not only threatened her life, but they vowed that they would break in sunder every door and partition in the house till they found the box. Under these circumstances, the girl thought it best to reveal the hiding-place of the box, trusting, however, that something might yet turn up to assist her, and accordingly she led the way to the bar-room, back of which was a small apartment. Taking a key from the money-drawer, she unlocked the door of the back room, and pointing to a small closet in the farther corner, she said:

'There, sirs, in that closet is the monk's box, but my master has the key in his own possession, and so, if you would open it, you must needs force the lock.'

'You are ready with your wit, pretty one,' said one of the robbers, as he cast a scrutinizing glance into Marcelline's face 'I fear to trust you too far, so you must excuse us if we just secure you till after our job is completed.'

As the man spoke he led the girl back to the bar-room, and taking from his pocket a piece of stout cord, he proceeded to lash her to a chair. She stoutly resisted, and even attempted to utter a cry, but a napkin soon stopped her power of utterance, after which her hands were lashed behind her, and then she herself lashed to the chair. After this, the robbers took a few tools from one of their sacks and proceeded at once to force the stout closet door.

For a moment after Marcelline had been left alone, she almost gave up in despair; but her woman's wit soon came to her aid, and a gleam of hope lighted up her countenance. From where the villains were at work they could not look into the bar-room, and after listening for a moment or two to assure herself that they were fairly busy, she moved her chair noiselessly towards a table, upon which a candle had been left burning. By considerable exertion she managed to get hold of the candle-stick with her teeth, and then carefully set it upon a chair. A moment more she listened, and then she turned her back to the candle in such a manner as to bring the outer chord into the blaze. It required not half a minute to burn off the cord that had secured her to her seat, and then bending over she took the back of her chair in her teeth and carefully moved it away. Then she turned again and placed the cord that bound her wrists in the blaze. The lashings burned, and so did her flesh, but with a perfect self-devotion, she heroically withstood the pain, and in a few moments she was free.

Marcelline now breathed more freely. She now bent her ear, and she found the villains had broken open the door and entered the closet. She heard them prying at the box which contained the silver plate and she knew that no time was to be lost. The key was still in the lock of the door that opened into the back room, and quick as thought the heroic girl sprang forward and closed it upon those beyond. The key was turned, and Marceline then ran to the front door, unlocked it, threw it open, and sprang into the highway. It was but the work of a few moments to rouse some of the hunters, and ere long the two robber travellers were in safe custody. They not only lost their booty, but also their liberty, and on the next day were safely conveyed to Trieste and delivered up to justice. Lubin was found in his room, with his mouth bound up and his arms pinioned to his chair; but the satisfaction of being released from his unpleasant situation made him forget the indignities he had received.

That little inn is still open to travellers, but Old Altzorf keeps it no longer. Justin, the hunter, is its host, and the fair Marcelline is its hostess.

'Why, Alco-Hall, you fool.'

'John who?' queried Dick.

'Why, Demi-John, you greenie.'

Catching A Tartar.

When the Cornwallis was on service in China, Commander Fitzjames landed one day in the river Yangtse kiang, and leaving the boat's crew to amuse themselves on the beach, he, accompanied only by the coxswain of the boat, clambered upon a precipitous cliff overhanging the river, for the purpose of making a sketch of the surrounding scenery. while thus occupied, and unsuspicious of danger he thought he thought he heard a movement in the dense mass of srubs that covered the hillside in his rear and above his head; but seing nothing he continued his task

At length the sound became less equivocal and turning sharply round, he caught a glimpse of some Tartars, who, however hastily concealed themselves. Feigning that he had noticed their presence, Fitzjames called to his coxswain, and desired him to go and get the boat's crew in readiness for an immediate start, when he himself should come down. Left quite alone he awaited the attack of his treacherous foes, who steadily advanced, trusting to take their barbarian visitor by surprise. But Fitzjames, who knew that their object would be to take him alive, was fully prepared; and no sooner than the boldest, a mandrian of rank, approached within arms reach, then he suddenly grappled with him, and throwing himself and the astonished celestial on the ground, commenced rolling over down the declivity with his prisoner, amidst the cheers of his own men; and his blank dismay of his numerous opponants, who crowned the summet, trundled the captured mandarin on board, minus something more than his silken garments, which fluttered on the rocky side of the hill. The captive was well received on board the Cornwallis, and kindly treated; but the ignominy of his mode of capture must have rankled in his breast, for he took the first opportunity of jumping overboard and drowning himself.

A Passport for a Parrot.

One of the Paris papers tell the fallowing story in regard to those solumn noodles who watch over the mediæval darkness of Rome:—

A French gentleman, M——, was traveling in Italy, accompanied by his wife, who carried with her a pet parrot. On coming to the frontier of the Roman States, an official demanded their passports, and after asking them what they were going to do at rome &c., he espied the parrot.

"Ah! you have a parrot I see. Does it talk?"

"Of course it does."

"What does it say?"

"What does that signify?"

"Sir," said the official, sternly, "This is no joking matter. Proper language—seditious words, even."

"Interrogate the bird, then,' was the answer.

The officials accordingly endeavored to make it speak, but not a word could it utter, perhaps because it was fatigued, or did not understand Italian. At last the official said—

"Well, there is only one way of arranging this business; you must write down the phrases your parrot can say, and declare on your own responsibility that it says nothing else. That done, I will give you a pass for it."

There was no alternive, so the gentleman made the declaration required, and went his way. M——related the story to numerous auditory, and at the same time he showed the parrot's pass to those who wished to see the singular document which cost him ascudo.

A Fable

A raven bore away a bit of poisoned meat in his claws, which an enraged gardener had intended for his neighbor's cats. He was just preparing to devour it in an old oak, when Renard approaching, said to him, "Heaven be praised, bird of jove!"

"What do you take me for?" replied the fox. "Are you not the soaring eagle who daily ascends from the right hand of Jubiter to alight on this oak, and fed a poor wretch like me? Why do you deny yourself? Do I not see in your victorious talons the suplicated gift which your god continues to send me through you? The raven was astonished, and inwardly rejoiced at being taken for an eagle "I must not," thought he, "enlighten the fox on his mistake." Stupidly generous, he let fall his prey, and flew proudly on. The fox seized the flesh laughing, and devoured it with malicious joy; but this soon gave away to dreadful pangs, the poison commenced taking effect, and he expired.

Cautious Witness.

A farmer was called as a witness to prove the bad character of Enoch Jones, who had formerly been his near neighbor. Counsel asked—

"Well, what do you know of Jones, the plaintiff?'

Farmer: "I can't say I know much about him."

Lawyer: "Does he bear a good character?"

Farmer: "We didn't like him any too well in our neighborhood."

Lawyer: "We don't suppose you did; but would you trust him or believe him under oath?

Farmer: "He might tell the truth, if it was for his interest.'

Lawyer: "Do you think him an honest man?"

Farmer: "I never gave him a chance to steal anything from me."

Lawyer: "But do you think he would steal if he got an opportunity?"

Farmer: "Well I can't say positive; but I should rather not try him."

Lawyer: "Perhaps not; but am I to understand that you have such a poor opinion of Jones' honesty, that you would be afraid to leave anything where he could steal it, if he were so inclined?"

Farmer: "No, I shouldn't be afraid to, if I watched it!"

Well Answered.

"I will not believe anything but what I understand,' said a self confident young man in a hotel one day.

'Nor will I,' said another.

'Neither will I,' chimed in the third.

'Gentlemen,' said one well known to me, who was on a journey, and who sat close by, 'do I understand you correctly, that you will not believe anything that you don't understand?'

'I will not,' said one, and so said each one of the trio.

'Well,' said the stranger, 'in my ride this morning I saw some geese in a field eating grass,' do you believe that.

"Certainly,' said the three unbelievers.

'I also saw some pigs eating grass; do you believe that?'

'Of course,' said the three.

'And I also saw sheep and cows eat grass; do you believe that?'

'Of course,' it was again replied.

'Well, but grass which they had formerly eaten had by digestion turned to feathers on the backs of the geese, to bristles on the backs of swine, to wool on the sheep, and on the cows it turned to hair; do you believe that gentlemen?'

'Certainly,' they replied.

'Yes, you believe it,' he rejoined, 'but do you understand it?'

They were confounded and silent and evidently ashamed, as well they might be.

A Judge's Charge.

Judge Jonas Jones recently delivered following charge to the jury, in the case of Elim Crunch for stealing:—

'Jury, you kin go out and don't show your ugly mugs here till you find a verdict—if you can't find one of your own, get the one the one the last jury used.'

The jury retired, and after an absence of fifteen minutes, returned with a verdict of suicide in the ninth degree and fourth verse. Then Judge Jones pronounced on Elem Crunch this sentence—

'Elim Crunch, stand up and face the music. You are found guilty of stealing. Now, this court do sentence you to pay a fine of five shillings, to shave your head with a baggonet, in the barracks, and if you try to cave in the hands of the jury, you'll catch thunder, that's all. Your fate will be a warning to others, and in conclusion may the Lord have mercy on your soul.'

ASTONISHING.—Snook's mother and old Mrs. Stubbs were talking about babies.

"Why, said Mrs. Snooks, 'when I was a baby they put me in a quart bottle and put the lid on.'

'And did you live?' was the astonished inquiry of Mrs. Stubbs.

'They told me I did!' was the astonished reply of Mrs. Snooks.

"Well did you ever?' and Mrs. Stubbs fell to knitting like all possessed.

The News.

Monday, March 6.

We are happy to record this morning another brilliant victory by "Little Phil. Sheridan" and his invincible army. It appears that a battle was fought between Staunton and Charlottsville, last Thursday, which resulted in the defeat and capture of the rebel Gen. Early, and 1,-800 of his army.

We also learn that Sherman is at Fayetteville, as also Com. Porter's fleet of gunboats. It is expected that Gens. Sherman and Sheridan will make a junction at Lynchburg.

From Mexico we learn that the Franco-Mexican and Confederate authorities are hobnobbling together.

A skermish occurred near Memphis, on the 2d inst between 300 guerillas and 50 Federal pickets, in a block house.

From Mexico we learn that Maximilian's reason for the dismissal of our Consul from Mattamoras was the non-recognition by the Washington authorities of his Government.

Also, that all inhabitants favorable to the cause of the Union, are being arrested.

There appears to be some uneasiness at the large influx of rebel deserters into our lines. It is suspected that mischief is meant by it.

The rebel Col. Hatch, Commissioner of Exchange, has arranded to deliver up all Union prisoners in N. C.

From Nassua we learn that Gen. Preston had been unsuccessful in attempting to reach Charleston, and at the authorities had refused permission to the U. S. gunboat Honduras to anchor in the harbor. Robert Tombs, in a speech at Augusta, says that bad management and legislation is the cause of the dangers that beset the South at present, and calls for the removal of the Administration.

Tuesday, March 7.

Officers just arrived from Wilmington, state that deserters who had come in before they had left, say that Sherman by a flank movement, had compelled the rebs to evacuate Florence, S. C., and was moving on Fayetteville.

The steamship Pacific, from Oregon, has arrived at San Francisco with $87,-000 in gold.

The rebels are consoling themselves with the idea that Johnston is to defeat and check Sherman.

The rebel Treasury department is on the "beg" again, and soliciting donations of plate, etc., to raise money.

We have no authentic news from Sherman this morning.

The exchange of prisoners is still progressing.

In the House of Lords, there has been a movement made to strengthen the defences of Canada, on account of our alleged hostility.

Prospective Trouble in Utah

The Colorado News states that, recently, General Conner established a provost guard in Salt Lake City for the purpose of preventing disorder. Brigham Young demanded that they should be removed, and made preparations to attack them, and was only deterred from doing so by General Conner's turning his guns on Brigham's harem and throwing shells over the city to the country beyond, and telling him if he wanted the provost guard removed he must remove them. The guard remained, but the discontent remained also, and the News thinks it probable it will soon break out in acts of violence that will bring the Federal authorities into conflict with those of the semi-ecclesiastical government of the territory—a collision that will inevitably lead to a condition of actual war. General Conner apprehends this, and is making preparations accordingly.

A Successful Bore.—The arid waste of the Desert of Sahara under the hands of enterprisig Frenchmen is to be clad with verdure, and water is to spring up in abudance to the surface whersoever required. Five places are named where wells have been sunk on the artesian principle, and the result has been a flood of water to the surface continuous and vast. Besides this there is somthing for the epicure, who, on his travels, has tasted only dried meat, dates and dried fish, for fish have come to the surface with the stream, which flows from some mysterious source beneath the crust of the earth.

For the Tecumseh Herald.

How the Rum-Seller Talks.

1. He calls himself "A Sabbath-School Scholar.

Reply. Says an old member of the Sabbath School—"He is not a member of the Sabbath School, and has never been since he came to Tecumseh. (Lion's skin, etc.)

2. To the Word of God, which charges him with fearful crime, he answers NOT ONE WORD, nor can he.

3. He is furiously enraged because I came to Tecumseh.

Reply. I do not wonder at that: Ministers, churches and all religious people, are very much in the way of his craft. If they were all driven from the State it would be money in his pocket.

4. He pretends that all these people who tell him the truth are his enemies.

Reply. John Walters! you know better! You have never received any thing but kindness and forbearance from the Christian people of Tecumseh. But the end is coming.

5. He pretends that he has not been conversed with privately.

Reply. He knows that I have talked with him kindly and privately,—and that he then expressed as much contempt for his present occupation as any temperance man ever did. He knows, also, that he solemnly declared he never would engage in the business again.

6. He throws dirt through two columns and a half of the HERALD.

Reply. That is an old trick of the devil, but does not alarm any one. Personal abuse is not argument.

Now, let me make the Rum-Seller

A PROPOSITION.

I will meet him in public discussion, on The Iniquity of his Trafic, in Bidwell's Hall, as soon as it can be procured. And that there may be no difficulty about his accepting the challenge, the hall will be furnished him without expense. These ministers, on large salaries, will furnish every rum-seller in the village free seats, and they shall be fully and fairly heard.

Say yes, or no;—either come out and talk in the faces of the people, or forever hold your peace.

A good insurance story is told in a letter from Plantaganet, Canada, of a fire recently in a dwelling house in that region, that the sufferer had effected insurance to the amount of $3,200 upon his furniture, the first cost of which was $100 and that not paid, and that said furniture was saved and sold for cash!

One cause of the numerous "resignation" among the midshipmen of the Newport Naval Academy, is the fraud used in gaining admittance. The examination, such as it is, undergoes no change of form, and a man in Newport gets well fed for telling the candidates just what question they will be called upon to answer.

Gen. Grant believes the War nearly ended.

We have been kindly furnished by Hon. I. N. Morris a private letter received from Lieut. Gen. Grant, from which we take the annexed extract. The letter is dated "Headquarters Armies of the United States, City Point, Va., Feb. 14, 1865," and was written, not dictated, by Gen. Grant himself. The following is the extract, which will be read with interest:

"Everything looks to me to be very favorable for a speedy termination of the war. The people of the South are ready for it if they can get clear of their leaders. It is hard to predict what will become of them, the leaders—whether they will flee the country, or whether the people will forcibly depose them and take the matter in their own hands. One or the other will likely occur if our spring campaign is as successful as I have every hope it will be. Yours truly,

How to Measure Oil Wells.

A very important feature in negotiating a sale of an oil well is to know how to measure the depth of oil. We heard of a case in which everything depended upon that, and on that the bargain finally hinged. It was one of those undeveloped wells, where a hole had been dug, and water and oil struck—rather more water however than oil. But the oil, of course, was on top. The well had been dug only to the first indications of oil, and, by the measure on a stick, there were six inches of oil floating on the water in a very few hours. But the trade hitched.

The next morning the stick was produced, which showed oil a foot in depth. The oil fever in the buyer began to rage; the papers were being made out, when the seller brought in the stick again, showing still greater depth The bargain was struck.

When the buyer came to inspect his well he found an old hole, half filled with water, and about an inch of oil floating, and that had been there time out of mind. The buyer soon found how to measure an oil well, the process being only to get depth of water sufficient to permit the stick to run down, for on coming up the oil, being on top, would leave the impression on the stick just as far as the stick was inserted.

A New and Important Invention.

The Cleveland Leader says hat James E. Craig has invented and patented a new steam boiler, which will work an entire revolution in steam boilers of all kinds, and particularly where a large amount of fuel is used, in making a saving of at least nine-tenths of the fuel now required for ordinary boilers.

The mode of its operation is to start the fire by the natural draught of air, and when the coals are ignited, close the opening beneath the grate and the top of the flue, supplying air for combustion by means of a force pump, which, after passing through the fire, is injicted as flame into the substance of the water, which instantly starts the generation of steam, although the mass of the water be not above one hundred degrees Fahrenheit. On trial it was estimated that less than one pound of coal would develope a horse-power for an hour, saving something like nine-tenths of the fuel commonly consumed. The boiler, which is only six feet in length and three feet in diameter, developed, for several hours, steam enough for a thirty horse-power engine from but a few shovelfuls of coals. Its main feature is the entire economy of all the heat generated.

Unexpected Claim.

It is stated that the owners of the steamship Electric Spark, which was captured and destroyed by the rebel privateer Florida, are likely to recover the value of their vessel in an unexpected manner. It appears that a short time ago Col. Lewis Morris, of Westchester county, New York, died, leaving an estate valued at $300,000, and the commander of the Florida is one of the heirs and entitled to one-seventh of the property. The owners of the Electric Spark have attached this interest, and brought an action for damages against Captain Morris, dommander of the Florida, as a non-resident, for the destruction of their property on the high seas. Eminent counsel have been employed, with every prospect of success, to a suit that has justice and right on the side of the plaintiffs.

Bond and Assignment of Mortgage.—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue has made the following decision: When a party executes a bond to a bank for a sum of money and assigns a mortgage to the bank as security for the payment of the bond at its maturity, both the bond and the assignment of the mortgage are subject to stamp duty. The fact that stamped collatteral security is given does not exempt the principal instrument from stamp duty; neither would the stamp upon the principal instrument relieve the collateral from stamp duty.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms.

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,

WOOLSTON COMFORT.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

By authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned has assumed the General Subscription Agency for the sale of United States Treasury Notes, bearing seven and three tenths per cent. interest, per annum, known as the

SEVEN-THIRTY LOAN.

These Notes are issued under date of August 15th, 1864, and are payable three years from that time, in currency, or are convertible at the option of the holder into

U. S. 6-20 Six per cent. GOLD-BEARING BONDS.

These bonds are now worth a premium of nine per cent., including gold interest from Nov., which makes the actual profit on the 7-30 loan, at current rates, including interest, about ten per cent. per annum, besides its exemption from state and municipal taxation, which adds from one to three per cent. more, according to the rate levied on their property. The interest is payable semi-annually by coupons attached to each note, which may be cut off and sold to any bank or banker.

The interest amounts to

One cent per day on a		$50	note.
Two cents	"	" $100	"
Ten "	"	" $500	"
20 "	"	" $1000	"
$1 "	"	" $5000	"

Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions. This is

The Only Loan in Market

now offered by the Government, and it is confidently expected that its superior advantage will make it the Great Popular Loan of the People.

Less than $200,000,000 remain unsold, which will probably be disposed of within the next 60 or 90 days, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans.

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscription at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

The Lady's Friend

Another beautiful steel engraving opens the March number of this favorite periodical, just received. The engraving has no title other than the simple lines:

"O, I see them sinking, sinking slowly,
These olden dreams so pure and holy."

The design and execution of this engraving are exquisite. The steel Fashion plate of this month is a double one, and, as usual, admirably engraved. The music is "These Laughing Eyes," a ballad. Among the literary contents we note "Aunt Hester's Story," "A Death Scene," "Tracing Resemblances," &c.

Married.

In Tecumseh, at the residence of the bride's father, on the evening of March 7th, by Rev. Henry L. Hayward, George C. Stilleon to Franc A. Landon, both of Tecumseh.

We shall hold ourselves in readiness on all hours of day and night to fill orders for printing Town Meeting Ballots between this and Tuesday next. And in this connection we would earnestly urge our friends in the several Towns to forward us the results of the elections in their seveeal localities at the earliest practicable moment.

The Election

On Monday last for Corporation Officers, passed off very quiet. The day was unusually pleasant, for an election day, which probably accounts for the small number of votes polled. There was no excitement whatever, there being only one ticket in the field, that being the regular one, nominated by the caucus on Saturday last. The result was as follows:

Whole number of votes polled, 109. Of which the nominees received as follows:

President, Horace Brewer,	109.
Recorder, Chasrles Burridge,	109.
Treasurer, Thomas Cummins,	109.
Marshal, Morris Hyde,	107.
Trustees, Moses Wright,	109,
Allen B. Ward,	109,
Geo. T. Ketcham,	108,
Geo. Curtis,	107,
William Rowland,	103,
Elijah Ames,	109.
Assessors, Alonzo Murray,	108,
Enoch Tindall,	109.

In addition to the above, Amos Van-Ormer received one vote for Marshal, and Wright Saddler three. Robt. Culvertson received two, and Wm. Parsons one for Tsustees.

☞ The Old folks concert on Friday evening last was a decided success. The singing was good; the exercises were not too long and the costumes were laughable in the extreme. There were any quantity of dresses "as old as the hills," and a few which we should say were "as old as Methusalah." For a full discription of the costumes we would refer those, who were so unfortunate as not to attend, to their lady friends who were present. Among the choruses "Auld Lang Syne" and "Yankee Doodle" deserve especial mention. The songs "My father's struck He," and "He's gone to the arms of Abraham" and the Quartettes "Oil on the Brain" and "Schnaps," were among the best performances of the evening. The concert will be repeated to-morrow evening at Clinton and on Tuesday evening next, here for the benefit of the Soldiers Aid Society.

From Ridgeway.

Aaron Anten, a private Soldier, from Milan, Monroe County, was, on the 14th day of Febuary, 1865, instantly killed, at City Point, while sitting in his tent writing a letter to his family, by the discharge of a loaded musket barrel unwittingly placed as a support in the chimney of a neighboring tent. His body was sent home by express, and was interred on the 23d of February in the Ridgeway Cemetery, after an appropriate discourse by Rev. Thos. Lupton.

Died.

At Hudson, Feb. 28th, Mrs. Susan Hiller, aged 61 years, relict of Rev. Isaac Hiller, deceased, and was interred in the Lake Ridge Cemetery, March 2d, beside the slumbering dust of her once kind husband. The funeral ceremonies were conducted by Rev. Thomas Lupton, of Ridgeway.

☞ The 2d Quarterly Meeting of the M. E. Church for Ridgeway Circuit, was held at Ridgeway village on the 4th and 5th of March. Rev. George Smith, Presiding Elder, preached an effective sersermon on Sabbath A. M. and P. M. Rev. Wm. Donnelly, Pastor, will continue the meeting each evening through the week.

☞ On the 20th ult., six head of cattle, valued at $200, belonging to Sidney Hathaway, of Ridgeway, disappeared so mysteriously as to involve the presumption that they were stolen. Search for them, though somewhat extensive and thorough, has thus far been fruitless.

☞ Old Papers for sale, in quantities to suit purchasers, at Ketcham's News Depot.

The Subscriber having sold his Stock of Goods to A. Hanford, requests those indebted to him—also those indebted to the late Firm of Wheeler & Waring—to make immediate payment, as he is anxious to close up his business. SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

A healthy tonic, gentle stimulant and unequalled morning appetizer. Prepared in the old Bourbon. Being now used to the exclusion of all other Bitters in our Army Hospitals, and millions of private families, and is the only popular medicine which has been especially exempted from stamp tax by the United States government, on the ground of its having been adopted and standard remedy by the medical profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

They are made of ingredients well known and approved by the medical profession, as having powerful tonic properties, are both palatable and pleasant, with sufficient strengthening properties to correct the bilious derangement of the system, and act like a charm when taken according to direction, as a remedy for the following diseases:—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affections, Loss of Appetite, Lassitude of Spirit, Bilious Complaints.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

Headache, Costiveness, and kindred diseases, arising from a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels. Let every one try these agreeable Bitters; once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who are in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effectual tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced me to give them publicity, so that thousands who have not used them, may try them and be convinced of their efficacy.—

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

Ladies, who have tried and found most other "Stomach Bitters" too bitter, unpalatable and too highly medicated for their delicate taste, please give these a trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system. If your druggist or tradesman has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.—Remember the name, and take no other,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

The composition of Dr. Swain's Bitters, having been made public through the columns of Medical Journals, and having been adopted as a standard remedy by the Medical Profession, are by the decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, EXEMPT FROM STAMP DUTY.

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They are really a

THESE Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of over twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by their use gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from torpid liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of those Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

They strengthen and invigorate the system.
They are unequaled for general debility.
They are a sure cure for dyspepsia.
They give a good and healthy appetite.
They assist digestion.
They are the best stimulant in existence.
They are a preventive of Fever and Ague.
They relieve constipation.
They cure Nervous Headache.
They are perfectly pure and palatable.

Aged persons and delicate females will find they can save large doctor's bills by the use of these Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits. The Red Jacket Bitters are only sold in bottles with our name blown on the side, and our private government stamp across the cork.

For Medicinal and Table use, which are perfectly pure, and need only be tried to be appreciated. None genuine unless they have our gold label on each bottle, and our initials pressed in wax over the cork.

Sold by all druggists and dealers throughout the country. Call for our goods and take no other. Circulars to the trade supplied on application to

Bennett Pieters & Co.,
No. 21 River Street Chicago.

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

—o—

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stich alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stiches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

Saucy Sue—Or Men in Blue.

BY MRS. M. F. TUCKER.

I had a beau the other night,
Whose silly words upset me quite;
He talked of love and married life,
And wanted me to be his wife.
But looking down I shook my head,
And making answer simply said,—
I cannot hear such things from you,
Because I love a man in blue.

Oh then he raved, and foamed, and swore,
He loved me better—loved me more
Than ever lover did before!
He praised my eyes, my lips, my curls,
And said I was the queen of girls,
His pet, his pride—his darling Sue,—
But yet—I loved the man in blue!

He flourished with his velvet hands,
And told of houses and of lands;
Of mortgage, deeds, and bonds, and such,
(So many value over-much,)
Of jewels rare, and raiment fine,
Of splendor that should all be mine,—
But still my loyal heart was true,
Nor wavered from the man in blue.

I loved him well—I loved him here,
And held him dearest of the dear;
But when I saw him eager go
To meet the onset of the foe,
'Twas then I read the lines of Fate,
And knew how men would own him great,
And for his noble brow some day
Entwine the laurel and the bay,
In grateful love and homage due
The valor of the man in blue.

I cannot list the tender theme,—
My love is where the bayonets gleam;
Thro' shriek and shout, and din and roar,
And ghastly dead and crimson gore,
With willing feet that never flag,
He follows still the dear old flag,
The "stars and stripes" our fathers knew,
And handed down to these in blue!

Oh men in blue! oh men in blue!
What tender hearts yearn after you!
And eyes as bright as evening star,
Turn where our dear defenders are,
Beholding deeds of daring quite Outrivalling historic knight.
While Freedom rears her fane anew,
Uplifted by the men in blue.

And one more valient than the rest,
The noblest, dearest, bravest, best,
Thinks tenderly of me, I know,
Loving me faithfully,—and so
I told my "hyfalutin" beau,
I rather thought he'd better go,
For 'twas a waste of words to woo
The girl who loves a man in blue.

The moral of this rhyming prose,
Is that you never should propose,
In ordinary kind of clothes;
For all the girls worth having do
Declare they'll have a man in blue.

MACON, MICH.

The White Muslin Waist.

"Those white things that are so fashionable among the womenkind just now? Of course I know what they are—I French waists to be sure!"

"Upon my word!" ejaculated Austin Thorp, turning half round in the carriage to get a better view of the bronzed handsome face of the gentleman who held the reins, "I should like to know how on earth you found it out?"

'And you will probably be still better pleased with the information when you hear that, had it not been for the gracious interposition of the French waist, I should not now be engaged to the pretty little damsel that holds my heart in her keeping.'

'What time is it?' said Clare, glancing at his watch. 'Only six o'clock! Then I shall have time to drive once more around the Park before the hour to drive with Kate, and you shall hear all about it, old fellow.

'You know that my sister Agatha is married to a clergyman up in Snow Plains. Well, as she has no other relation residing in New York, I am often called upon to select various little items for her, such as are unattainable in that benighted part of the world. At different times I've sent her a washing machine, a patent self-rocking cradle, chests of tea, with dresses, with dresses, and cassimere trowsers for the Rev. Abel, her husband, to say nothing of forty thousand lesser matters. The other day, Aggie sent me a letter full of village gossip with a postscript at the end sweetly imitating that I was the best brother in the world, and would I just go to some fashionable modiste and order a French waist made for her? and there followed a list of measurements for the edification of the dressmaker woman.

'Now I was just about as enlightened on the matter as if she had sent me an order for a Patigonian jacket or a Kamschatkan nightcap, but do you suppose I was unequal to the emergency? No sir! I just remarked under me breath, 'Confound these females!' tossed away my cigar, and started for the first window hung with feminine frippery that I could see, with Aggie's measurement under my arm. In I walked, as boldly as you please, although I could plainly perceive that three or four ladies who were dawdling at the counter, thought I hadn't any business there.

'What can I do for you, sir?' mincingly demanded a little French woman behind the counter, and I replied courageously as became a knight errant:

'I want a white muslin wast made up by to morrow morning—here's the pattern.' 'Perhaps,' giggled the shopwoman, 'Monsieur's wife would come down to be measured, and——'

'I felt myself coloring up to the tips of my ears, vexed though I was. 'But it happens that Monsieur has no wife—only a sister, who resides out of town. Can you make it for me or not?'

'Oh, certainly—by all means! Pardon the misapprehension. How would Monsieur prefer it made—with les petite bouillions, or tucks or perhaps plain?'

'I started in hopeless bewilderment—and, if the fat lady beyond who was examining kid gloves hadn't laughed behind her handkerchief, I should certainly have confessed myself on the mercy of the shopwoman. But the faint cachination roused my sense of pride and independence. I would have died sooner han retreat! 'Will y u let me look at some, if you please?'

'They were piled on the counter before me—a soft drift of snowy fabrics. I remembered seeing old ladies put on their spectacles to inspect such goods, so I examined them with my eye glass, pawed over the delicate stuffs, examined the stitching as critically as possible, and held the thing up to the light as I would have held a yard of broadcloth, and finally decided upon one all traversed with tucks, and daintily edged around the neck with pearly lace.

'This fellow will do!' I remarked, abstractedly. 'I mean I will take this jacket.'

'Monsieur has excellent taste!' said the milliner, but how unfortunate! this waist is already engaged.'

'Well, you can make one just like it, I suppose? What's the price?'

'Seven dollars. Monsieur will scarcely—'

'I throw down the greenbacks. Let it be sent to Mrs. Abel Glenn, of Snow Plains, New York.'

'And I walked out of the Store, heartily delighted to have done with the job, and secretly wishing that that the fat lady who had derived so much satisfaction from my shepping, might split her gloves the first time she put them on! And that's the way I bought Aggie's French waist.'

'Well,' remarked Thorp, as his companion paused a moment, 'I don't see what all this has to do with the matter! You didn't marry either the French milliner or the fat woman, did you?'

'Hush up, and you'll hear! A week or two elapsed, and the August sunshine began to make town absolutely intolerable. Between the broiling sky by day, and the musquitoes by night, I began to realize the idea of purgatory pretty effectually, and a yearning hitherto inexperienced for green fields and country air, took possession of me. I decided to run up to Snow Plains and see Agatha and the babies.

There was no use writing word—she was always prepared to see me, so I stuffed my pockets with wooden soldiers for And candies for little Minnie, bought a railroad ticket, and started for Snow Plains with no other baggage than a carpet bag and a newspaper.

'The Snow Plains depot was a picturesque little structure, built after the Gothic style and painted that indescribable brown that country depos generally affect. Just in the rear rose up a wall of vine-draped rocks crested with waving summer woods, and the cool copses and green meadows all around looked almost like a glimpse of Paradise. There were plenty of people on the platform, I might have known that, for a gigantic wooden building, bearing the appellation of Snow Plain Hotel had sprouted into being since my last visit. The first person I recognized on the platform, as the shrieking engine came slowly to a halt, was my sister Agatha.

'Or at least it was my sister Agatha's white muslin waist. I should have known the tucks on that waist in Egypt, had I chanced to come across 'em there, to say nothing of the little edging of lace around the throat. She stood—the wearer, I mean, of course with her back towards me, but I was none the less certain of Agatha's identity.

"Here's a jolly chance for a surprise quoth I to myself, as I sprung from the cars, and I stepped quietly up behind the French waist, threw the arm that did not happen to be burdened with a carpet bag around it, and stole a hasty kiss.

'Pretty fairly done, Aggie, eh?'

'Hallo! instead of returning the salutation, the owner of the waist uttered a terrified little scream, and shrank away from me as if I had been an ogre instead of a tolerably good looking young fellow!—Will you believe it, it wasn't Aggie after all, but a beautiful girl with sparkling black eyes and cheeks like pink velvet? I, the most bashful of men in New York had been kissing a woman who was a perfect stranger to me.

'I beg your pardon,' I stammered, feeling very much as Mout Versuvius must feel when it is a glow with burnin glava, 'it was a mistake, I assure you. I thought—I supposed—it was my sister!'

The damsel recovered her equanimity immediately. Woman always do, I believe when, they see men in the agonies of embarasment, the little aggravating pussies.

'Pray don't apologise!' she said, smiling roguishly. 'If it was a mistake, you are quite excusible!'

'But I stand not to hear the titter that was going round the assembled crowd.—I struck off across the fields to the Rev. Abel Glenn's, as fast as possible.

'There, upon the piazza, stood my sister Aggie, dressed in a blue silk shirt, and,—was there witchcraft in the quiet vales of Snow Plains?—the very white waist I had so uncerimoniously hugged scarce 10 minutes before!

'Agatha!' said I, the minute the Reverend Able had returned to his study after tea, ahd the little folks were eclipsed in two small white pillowed cribs, 'what ridiculous piece of business do you suppose I've been performing?'

'Aggie opened her blue inecent eyes.

'I'm sure I can't imagine, Harry!—Not—not getting married?'

'Not quite sa bad as that, but, Aggie, I've been kissing a pretty girl down to the railroad atation, by mistake!'

'By mistake, Harry?'

'Yes unmitigated blockhead that I was! She had had on such a concern as this, I added, taking hold of the decorated sleeve of my sisters garment as I spoke, 'and I supposed it was you of cource!'

'Agatha sank back into the corner of the sofa, and laughed until the blue eyes were swimming with merry tears.

'Harry, you dear blundering fellow, you've been kissing Kate Wallingford! She has a French waist exactly like mine—I believe, in fact, it came from the same store! and she is staying with her family at the new hotel, for the summer. Wasn't she a black-eyed girl, with very rosy cheeks?'

'Exactly! I say though, Aggie, I might have kissed a worse-looking girl?'

'She is a pretty littlle thing,' assented Agatha.

'But what is to be done! I never can stand it, if she is sbendihg the summer here! I shall take the express train back to-morrow morning!'

'You'll do no such thing,' said my sister, authoritatively. 'Kate is a dear friend of mine. Get your hat, brush your curls, and we'll go there to-night and apologise!'

'I'd rather have a tooth out, Aggie, or fight a duel.'

'Very likely, young man, but there's no help for you. Come!'

'And Agatha led me away, sheepish and downcast, yet not altogether unwilling to get another glance into the luminous depths of those black eyes. Man is an innocent creature. I was very loth to meet Miss Wallingford, yet I should have been bitterly disappointed had she been not at home.'

'Kate was very placable, and laughed with me over the blunder, even while she blushed most enchantingly. I plucked up courage to call again the next evening, and kept calling the whole of my stay in Snow Plains. And—here we are at Judge Wallingford's! Just drive round to the hotel and give the reins to my servant, will you! I'll do as much for you some time when you are going to spend the evening with your lady love.'

'And how about the story?' laughingly questioned Thorp, as he leaned over the side of carriage.

Harry Clare's brilliant eyes sparkled archly as he made the least possible inclination of the heap toward a beautiful young face that was shily watching the new arrival, from behind the sheltering fold of the window curtain.

'Kate shall tell you the rest, after we are married!' he said.

And with that, Thorp was forced to be satisfied.

Economy

The Scientific American thus shows how time has been economized by the application of machinery:

One can spin more cotton yarn now than 400 men could have done in the same time in 1760, when Arkwright, the first cotton spinner took out his patent right.

One man can make as much flour in one day now, as one hundred and fifty could a century ago.

It now requires only as many days to refine sugar now, as it took months 30 or 40 years ago.

It once required six months to put quicksilver on glass; now it is done in forty minutes.

The engine of a first-class iron-clad frigate will preform as much work in one day as 2000 horses.

One industrious woman with a sewing machine, can do more stitching in one day than 17 woman by hand.

Greater than Niagra.

An eastern gentleman, having vistited the Great Falls of Snake River—the southern fork of the Oregon—writes home a description of this marvelous natural curiocity, in which he says:

"When we arrived at Rood Creek, one day's travel this side of Salmon Falls Ferry, we left one morning for the Great Falls, and took a straight line for Snake River. At a distance of 4 miles we came upon them all unawares, as the bluffs are over 3,000 feet high on each side; concequently you could not hear them. There we commenced the decent to the falls on horseback, to within a few hundred yards of the awful. Then fastening our horses, we soon descended to a level with the river above the falls. The sight that then broke upon the view is too sublime to be described by one so little capible of doing it justice as myself. We measured the distance that the whole volume of water falls in one sheet, and found it 200 feet. Ther above I should judge it to be 25 or 30 feet fall before it reaches the grand fall. The width of the grand fall I should judge to be about 2,-500 feet. I have visited Niagra many times, but this fall eclipses it far. Four miles further above we found another one of less note' where the water divides into two parts and falls a distance of 167 feet. Should you ever again cross the Plains, don't go by the falls without visiting them, as it is well worth one year of one's life. Our measurement may be relied upon as perfectly correct, as we started prepared for it.

The Effects of Impatience.

Nothicg can be more inpadacitates a man for the lead than imdatience. No constitutionality impatient man who has indulged his tendency, ever gets to the bottom of things, or knows with any nicety the standing disposition and circumstances of the people he is thrown, or has thrown himself amongst. Certain salient points he is possessed of, but not what reconciles and accounts for them. Something in him—an obvious shelf, or a train of thought, or liking and antipathies will always comes between him and an impartial judgment. Neither does he win confidence, for he checks the coy, uncertain advances which are the persecutor of it. We doubt if a thoroughly impatient man can read the heart, or be a fair critic, or understand the rights of any knotty question, or make himself master of any difficult situation. The power of waiting deliberating, hanging in suspense, is necessary for all these,—the power of staving off for considerable periods of time merely personal leanings.

☞ "Concience!" said Mrs. Hopkins indignant, "do you suppose no body has got concience but your self! My conscience is as good as yours—aye better too, for it has never been used in the course of my life, while yours must be nearly worn out."

☞ The fire side is a school of importance; it is important because it is universal, and because the education it bestows, being woven in the woof of childhood, gives form and color to the whole texture of life.

☞ A modern French writer says "A physician prescribing to a sick man always reminds me of a child snuffing a candle—it is ten to one but he snuffs it out."

Carbon.

There are few facts connected with carbon that merit consideration. Carbonic acid gas, entering the lungs, is a deadly poison; but entering the stomach, which lies close under the lungs, and is overlapped by them, it is a refreshing beverage. Although charcoal, when burnt, gives off the most poisonous gas it it seems to be very jealous of other gaseous poisons; for if it be powdered and set about in pans where there is a poisonous atmosphere, it will sieze hold of the poisonous gases, and by absorbing, imprison them. Even in a drob of toast and water the charred bread siezes hold of whatever impuritiss exist in the water; and water passed through beds of charcoal becomes filtered and beatifully pure, being compelled to give up to the charcoal whatever is obnoctious. If a piece of meat that has commenced putrefying be sprinkled with charcoal, it will not only object to the meat putrefying any further but it will sweeten that which has already undergond putrefaction. Although in the form of gas, it will poison the blood, and cause speedy stupefaction and death, if it be powdered, and worn before the mouth as a respirator, it will say to all poisonous gases that come to the mouth with the air, "I have taken this post to defend the lungs, and I arrest you on a charge of murderous intention." Such are the various facts connected with carbon; and they forcibly indicate that those who understand nature's works are likely to receive her best protection.—

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR. 16, 1865.

From Sheridans Army.

A returned Union prisoner, who reached Annapolis to-day, direct from Richmond communicates some interesting intelligence in relation to affairs at that place and of Sheridan's movements. He says he was confined in Castle Thunder, and through the friends of Union citizens obtained much information relative to events transpiring, about which Richmond papers are silent. On Saturday night last, Richmond was thrown into an intenc excitement by the anouncement that Sheridan was near the city. Alarm bells were rung, and all home guards and every available man that could be spared was hurried off to repel the Yankees, who were said to be at Beaver Mills Aqueduct, on James River, 20 miles from the city, destroying the canal, the main feeder of Richmond. The excitement continued all night, and increased to a panic throughout Sunday and down to Sunday, and down to Monday morning, when he left, the alarm still prevailed. It was understood Sheridan had succeeded in the destruction of the aqueduct, blowing it up with gunpowder, and it would take at least six months to repair the damage by him during Sunday afternoon. Picket's division passed Castle Thunder in great haste, on the way to meet Sheridan. There was a ferry near the aqueduct, and it was believed that Sheridan's purpose was to cross the James River and strike to Danville Railroad near the coal fields, where there is an extensive bridge, destroy that, and thus complete the destruction of communication with Richmond, and then make a juction with Grant. Movements indicating preparations for the abandonment of Richmond, have been in progress for some time.—Heavy machinery for manufacturing iron has been removed; also, the machinery of their percussion maufactory, and all the carpenters in town were at work filling large government orders for packing boxes. The high water in the James had subsided so much that the boat which conveys the prsoners from Richmond could not pass above Rockets, as she had been doing previously. From this circumstance it is hoped that Sheridan will fiud less difficulty in crossing streams in his line of march.

☞ A Washington letter of the 13th inst., states that the military situation to-night is understood to be more promising than eny period during the war. Richmond papers of to-day are filled with doleful comments on the condition of affairs which they represent as being desperate. Sheridan, they admit has played the mischief with their avenues of supply, and fears are expressed that he will reach Burk's tation unopposed, and destroy the last link between Richmond and anywhere else. It is believed here in Washington that Sheridan has already passed Burk's Station, the junction of the Petersburg and Lynchburg and Richmond and Danville roads, and gone either to Sherman or Grant. This saves Gran tthe trouble of cutting the South Side road, starving or diving his already depleted forces and open Richmond to a promebade from Grant.

☞ For many months past the rebel military authorities have been carefully gleaning every battle field for lead, cannon balls and arms, and now Lee is using his provost guards every where to gather up arms wherever they can be found, in concequence of the stoppage of blockade running and the destruction of most of the rebel military factories, armies and other warlike supplies are growin scarce.

☞ A single express company transports from Virginia City, Nevada Territory, $50,000 in silver bullions daily, and that from a tract of 25 miles square, over $20,000,000 of silver have been shipped during the past 12 months. The wealth of the silver mines of Nevada is scarcely comprehended, or its exteut estimated.

☞ Only a few bids for the three million loan lately put upon the market by the state of Mass. were at or above par by far the larger portion being below it. The News.

NEW YORK, March 15.—The Herald's Newberne correspondent, dated March 11th, says some of the heaviest fighting there has been since the Corps command by Gen. Cox reached the vicinity of Kingston, occurred on Friday. The rebels had evidently learned that Gen. Couch, with a portion of the 23d Corps, was not far off and would soon john Cox, and it urged them to extraordinary desperation. They charged again and again upon our works, making ten or twelve separate charges through the day. Generally they spent their fury upon the left, but some of the time they would charge upon the entire line, vainly hoping that the momentum of so large a body would break down everything. Our men, however, stood their ground heroically, as attested by piles of slain rebels lying before our works in various directions. The enemy also fought with valor worthy of a better cause. It was in vair, however.

The Herald's Washington special, says a letter from Scofield's headquarters, dated Newbern, March 11th, contains the following:

"This morning Hoke attempted to break our lines, but was repulsed with terrible slaughter. Our own loss is not more than 300 or 400 in killed and wounded The rebel loss in killed, wounded and prisoners, is eight times greater. We have possession of the field, and the rebel dead and wounded are in our hands."

The Sanitary Commission has sent to Newbern $100,000 worth of supplies, and is loading several more vessels for the same destination. Newbern is to be made a Depot for the Sanitary supplies of the armies in North Carolina.

NEW YORK, March 15.—Richmond papers show that the rebel Congress, which was to adjourn last Saturday, has, at the request of Jeff. Davis, postponed its adjournment. He informs them that he expected to have something of importance to lay before them.

NEW YORK, March 15.—It appears by later news, that the defense of Ft. Myres, Fla., by the Union forces, was a very brave one, and resulted in finally obliging the rebels to retreat.

There were various reports, at City Point and in Washington, concerning Sheridan's movements. One says, that he has entered Grant's lines north and east of Richmond, while another says he has kept on Southward just west of Richmond.

The Herald's Washington special says: "No doubt is entertained here that Sherman has reached Fayetteville without an engagement of any kind, except cavalry skirmishes. He will be joined at Fayetteville by Scofield, and be resupplied. The direct communication with Sherman, notwithstanding the boasting of the Richmond press, shows that they cannot stop his progress."

NEW YORK, March 15.—The Richmond Whig, of the 13th inst., says: "Though it is well known there is a Yankee cavalry force raiding through some o the country west of Richmond on the Central Railroad, yet, under the advice of the War Department, it is considered inexpedient to publish any thing concerning their movements."

Friday night and Saturday morning Couch's forces came up from towards Wilmington and effected a junction with Cox, the rebels were not slow to become informed. So they at once began to fall back, abandoning all further opposi ion this side of the Neuse river, and they are now on the north side of the river, with the bridge that crosses over to Kinston partially burned. The much talked of ram, Neuse, was also partially destroyed. Our forces followed them up vigorously and will doubtless prepare to cross over the river at once, by means of a pontoon bridge, or by relaying new timber over the old bridge for the cars to pass over. I apprehend that there will be no difficulty now in driving the rebels back from any point where they may see fit to make a stand.

Downward tendency of gold continues from the effect of our military news. The lowest point reached was 174, subsequently it rallied a half-cent.

Drafting was commenced here to-day.

A dispatch from Newbern, dated the 11th, says: The prisoners taken by the rebels in front of Kingston, have been recaptured, and that Gen. Terry has formed a junction with our forces there, and that Sherman was expected in the rear of the rebels at Goldsboro, on the 11th or 12th.

The Post's Washington special says: Gen. Schofield has placed Gen. Hawley in command at Wilmington. He is a native of North Carolina, but resided in the North for many years. He left the Hartford Press to enter the war.

Dispatches from Fortress Monroe to the Navy Department merely announces that Kingston is in possession of our forces, giving no particulars. To-day five sailors who were among the fifteen who were under Lieut. C. Cuching who blew up the ram Albemarle, were presented with medals of honor prepared by the Navy Department.

From the South.

NEW YORK, Mach 12.—The Herald prints a letter faom Sherman to Wade Hampton, stating that in consequence of foraging parties having been murdered by the rebels after being captured, and labels attached to their bodies of "death to all foragers," that he had ordered a similar number of prisoners in our hands to be disposed of in like manner, and that he holds 1,000 rebel prisoners and can stand it as long as Hampton. The rebel General responds that he knows nothing of such murders, and that for every soldier executed by Sherman he will execute two Federals, picking out officers as the first victims. He makes a long story about the barbarities alleged to be practiced by Sherman's army, and concludes by saying that he shall hold fifty six prisoners as hostages for those ordered to be executed by Sherman.

The following is Gen. Sherman's letter to Wade Hampton:

"H. Q. and Camp in the Field,
Feb. 24, 1865.

Lieut. Gen. Wade Hampton, commanding cavalry forces, S. C. Army.

General—It is officially stated to me that our foraging parties are murdered after capture, and labeled death to all foragers. One instance of a Lieutenant and seven men, near Chesterville, and another of twenty, near a ravine eighty rods from the main road, and about three miles from Frasserville. I have ordered a similar number of prisoners in our hands to be disposed of in a similar manner. I hold about 1,000 prisoners, captured in various ways, and can stand it as long as you, but I hardly think that these murders are committed with your knowledge, and would suggest that you give notice to the people at large that every life taken by them simply results in the death of one of your Confederates. Of course you cannot question my right to forage in the country. It is a war right as old as history. The manner of exercising it varies with circumstances, and if the civil authorities will supply my requisition I will forbid all foraging; but I find no civil authorities who can respond to calls for forage or provisions, and therefore must collect directly of the people. I have no doubt this is the occasion of much misbehavior on the part of our men, but I cannot permit an enemy to judge or punish with wholesale murder. Personally, I regret the bitter feelings engendered by this war, but they were to be expected, and I simply allege that those who struck the first blow and made war inevitable ought not in fairness to reproach us for the natural consequences. I merely assert our war right to forage, and my resolve to protect my foragers to the extent of life for life. I am, with respect, your obedient servant.

W. T. SHERMAN, Maj. Gen. U. S. A.

The Cleveland Herald states that owing to the breaking up and gorging of the Rocky River, two bridges—one at Mastick's and one on the Ridge Road—have been carried away. An ice gorge was formed in the Cuyahoga River, in the vicinity of the seven mile lock in the Ohio Canal, which set the water back so as to overflow the bottoms to a greater extent than ever before in fifteen years.

There is now in circulation an exact facsimile of the $100 Treasnry notes, issued under the act of February, 1862, so well executed that good judges might be deceived by it. The spurious note is smaller than the genuine one, and the coloring on the back is paler and less distinct than the genuine bill. The words "One hundred dollars" on the right hand side of the counterfeit, are smaller than on the genuine note, and the lettering around the margin is different.

Queen Victoria has just announced to the world that she maintains, in reference to the conflict of the sections, a "steadfast neutrality." Brigham Young has made an announcement precisely similar. "The North," says that uncanonized saint, "prays that their swords may strike into the heart of every rebel, and I say amen! The South prays that the North may be cut down on a thousand battle fields, and again I say amen!"

The class of duties performed by a spy makes it very rare that a man of education and high tone undertakes them. Andre and Beall were both exceptions to the rule. Both young, handsome, educated gentlemen, of good families and hereditary wealth; both brave in battle, and calm, self-possessed and dignified in view of a death which they had been taught to believe degsading; each believed he sacrificed his life on the altar of his country.

Money matters in Wisconsin are extremely unsettled, owing to the action of the Milwaukee bankers in throwing out the issues of all State institutions, and making U. S. Treasury notes and Bills of National Banks the basis of currency value. This action became necessary in consequence of an anticipated depreciation of Wisconsin 6s, which form over one-half the securities of the State banks, and which will probably be thrown on the market, as the recent acts of Congress tax the State institutions out of existence, or compel them to re-organize under the National Currency Law. Some excitement exists in consequence, as much of the currency is afloat, 35 or more banks being predicated on those securities.

Prospectus of the Jackson Daily Citizen.

On or about the 27th of March, the proprietors of the Jackson Weekly CITIZEN propose to issue a FIRST CLASS DAILY PAPER, to fill a pressing want, which has long been felt in Central Michigan, now one of the most populous and wealthy sections of the State.

We propose to issue a Journal, respectable in size, containing the full Telegraphic Reports of the Associated Press, the latest Markets, and all the General News of the day. Particular attention will be paid to Local and State News, and everything that goes to make a Daily Paper interesting to all. In fact, we propose to make a LIVE DAILY PAPER, fully up to the times, dealing fairly and squarely with all the issues of the day, and earnestly advocating those views and principles, which we believe will be for the best interests of our common country. While it will be the organ of no man or clique, it will support the administration in a vigorous prosecution of the war, until the old flag again floats over ever every foot of the Nrtional domain, and until the last vestige of armed rebellion is swept from the land.

With a Journal of this character, looking closely after, and advancing the INTERESTS of this LOCALITY, not violently partizan, but firm, independent and manly in tone, we appeal to all classes of our citizens for a prompt, hearty and generous support.

We shall issue a MORNING PAPER, that will reach, at least, six of our interior counties in advance of any other Daily.—With a new POWER PRESS, operated by STEAM, and new type, we expect to make a handsome sheet, fresh and attractive in appearance, and as a NEWSPAPER worthy the confidence and patronage of all.

Our Weekly will be changed to a quarto in form, and will contain 48 colums of matter, over 40 of which will embrace the cream of the Daily, selected with the utmost care.

With these improvements the weekly Citizen will be as valuable in any household, and will contain as much interesting matter as any of the Eastern weeklies.

The Daily Citizen will reach Tecumseh at 8 o'clock A. M., six or seven hours in advance of any other paper, and will contain the latest war news. Mr. G T. Ketcham will have charge of our circulation in Tecumseh. Subscribers are requested to hand in their names early.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to Grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms.

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,
WOOLSTON COMFORT.

Default of payment having been made in a mortgage made by Francis A. Randall to Joseph P. Lee, dated November 20th, 1855, recorded in the Register of Deeds office, Lenawee county State of Michigan, November 26th, 1855 at 10 o'clock A. ☞ G. T. Ketcham has just received a new lot of Music,—any piece which he has not on hand, will be procured on the shortest notice. It is the only place in town where Sheet Music and Instruction books can be found.

☞ We have received a communication from "Sabbath-School Scholar," which will be inserted in our next issue,—and we would here say that we shall hereafter decline publishing personal abuse to please any man or set of men. Correspondents will please bear this in mind.

SOMETHING OF IMPORTANCE TO EVERYBODY.—It is generally known that all receipts for money over $20 must be stamped to be valid, but it is not known that all letters acknowledging the receipt of money, in all sums exceeding $20, must also be stamped. If A. addresses a letter to B. saying: "Your letter of Feb. 15, enclosing $100 on account, has been received," it has been decided that there is no difference from one where he writes: "Received from B. $100 on account."—Both are receipts.

School Exhibition.

The Students of the Union School will give an Exhibition on Friday evening, March 24th, 1865, in Old Odd Fellows' Hall. The proceeds of this exhibition will be expended in purchasing apparatus to aid in illustrating the studies of Natural Philosophy, and Geography. Money can hardly be applied to a more worthy object—and it is hoped the people will be disposed to aid liberally for this purpose. The exercises will consist of Declamations, original and committed Essays, Dialogues, Music, etc.

Mud!

Be not alarmed, gentle reader, when we announce that our subject is as inexhaustible as the supply. We have no intention of getting "stuck in the mud;" but as it is our solemn duty, as Hamlet would say, "to show the very age and body of the time, his form and pressure," we must record this characteristic—this benign benefactor of blacking and brush makers. We have persistently avoided any allusion to the weather for the past month, but like the weather during that time, we have been preparing for the grand finale—mud! We have envied the privileges of "ye Local," of the city daily, who has such ample space to expatiate on this plastic subject, and lest we have mud "on the brain," as well as on our brogans, we must relieve ourselves.

We affirmed that our subject was inexhaustible; but as we are persuaded that our readers will not demand a demonstration of it in the Herald, we will confine the subject to a few general remarks. Mud may be contemplated philosophically, reasoned upon logically, and studied chemically. As our experimental chemistry is as yet rather limited, we have not yet seen it made a subject of test by the retort, but we daily hear it made a subject of retort by those who know nothing of its chemical qualities. It may also be considered concretely, abstractly, protractedly, distractedly, and extractedly. We have in mind several beautiful extracts on the subject, and if we knew that the man who got stuck with his load of wood, in town the other day, would not stop his subscription, we would favor our readers with one. But we must stop and wash our hands.

☞ A spirited war meeting was held in Ridgeway on Friday last, at the English School House. The township was largely represented, and a new and more permanent military association was formed, by the election of Peter Sharp President, C. B. Sutton Vice President, Joshua Waring Secretary, Samuel Linn Treasurer, and Geo. Exelby, David Edmunson, W. R. Wilson, Geo. Smith Jr., C. S. Warne, W. W. Sanford, and B. F. Patterson, managers—the whole to be an executive board. Considerable had already been done: Three substitutes and two volunteers had been obtained; more than $2000 were on hand, and a subscription was put in circulation to increase that amount. Scoville C. Stacy, of Tecumseh, was present to address the meeting, and aid in giving legal form to the proceedings. Justus Loree also addressed the meeting. Some differences of opinion were explained and reconciled, and the meeting finally closed in great harmony upon the importance of saving the honor and patriotism of the town, by manfully meeting the exigencies of the pending draft—Still requiring twelve men.

NOTARIES PUBLIC.—The Governor has nominated and the State Senate confirmed the following as notaries public in Lenawee county:

Wm. Derbyshire, Judson R. Hyde, Wm. A. Whitney, David Carpenter, Leysander Armsby, Norman B. Carter, Fred G. Beagle, Fred L. Eaton, Geo. E. Pomeroy, Fitch Dewey, Geo. W. Westerman, Rollin Robinson, Jas. C. Freer, Rob. R. Beecher, Collin C. Coates, Milton N. Halsey, Norman Geddes, Chas. E. Thompson, Joseph Howell, Cornelius Quick, Nathan B. Eldredge, Chas. M. Walker, Rufus Baker, Hiram Raymond, Nathan Spencer, Nathan J. Kidder, Ephraim D. Kidder, Augustus W. Ocobock, Enos Caniff, Jas. M. Spear, Seneca M. Burgess, Daniel H. Van Wie, Lyman E. Montgomery, Gideon D. Perry, Jarvis Fleming, W. Richard, Fleming McMath, Richard B. Robbins, Alex R. Tiffany, Daniel D. Sinclair, Clement E. Weaver, Henry Underwood.

☞ We clip the following extract from a correspondence of the 18th Regiment to the Hudson Gazette:

"Gen. Granger's staff are mostly from the 18th; Lieut. Kneeland and Lieutenant Delos Le Baron, of Tecumseh, and Lieut. Hall, of Hudson, are on his staff. Lieut. Kneeland, is A. A. A. G.; Lieut. Hall is A. D. C.; Lieut. Lebaron is A. A. D. C. Lieut. LeBaron is a fine officer; much beloved by all that know him, and always pleasant and familiar with both soldiers and officers. Lieut. Kneeland is the same, and both discharge their duties with ability and credit to themselves, and the service of Uncle Sam. They speak well for Tecumseh, and their friends at home may well be proud of them, as well as the 18th.

☞ The business man who puts his sign in the newspapers does a much wiser thing than the man who fastens it over the door, and who would think of neglecting that? Where one person reads over the door, hundreds would read it in the paper. No matter how well a business is known, he can always pick up new customers if he will take the pains to advertise; and by neglecting this means of securing trade he losses the best of profits.

☞ The Dog law that passed the House of Representatives at Lansing on the 3d inst., makes it necessary for every owner of a dog to take out an annual license, at a cost of one dollar and offering a premium of fifty cents for the killing of every unlicensed dog running at large.

☞ R. C. Moore has a large and choice selection of Goods, just arriving from New York, to which he would call the attention of all buyers of Dry Goods. They were all bought for cash, when the prices were at the lowest ebb in New York—and customers will receive the benefit of it. Do not fail to look at his Dress Prints, Delaines—Brown and bleached, Cottons, or any thing else you may want in his line of Goods.

New Store.

New Goods, New Firm. Messrs. Wastell & Adams started for New York on Monday last, to purchase a stock of Dry Goods. When George and Charlie return, their advertisement will appear in the Herald. They buy wholly for cash, and will sell cheaper than the cheapest. Rush for their Store when they get their stock opened.

☞ We would call the attention of our readers to the new advertisement of J. Potter & Co., in another column. We would advise our farmer friends if they are in need of any farm implements, to call on them, instead of buying eastern-made work that will fall to pieces the first time it is used.

☞ Mrs. J. C. Eddy desires to announce to the citizens of Tecumseh and vicinity that she is now selling a Superior Article of Family Sewing Machine. She also keeps constantly on hand a full assortment of Machine Needles and Barnum's Self-Sewers, at her resience, just west of this village.

☞ We shall be under obligations to our friends if they will furnish us any items of news that may come under their observation, and that we may not be likely to hear of. Any fact in relation to town matters, that will be of general interest, or that will benefit the town if left at the office, will be thankfuly received.

☞ Those of our subscribers, who are intending to pay their subscriptions in wood, potatoes, butter, eggs, lard, &c. should bring it along now.

☞ Wanted immediately at G. T. Ketchams ten tons of paper rags, for which the highest market price will be paid.

For Sale.—I offer for sale my House and Lot on Pearl Street, near the Depot; also a First Mortgage on Real Estate, (bearing seven per cent. interest,) of $800; and some First Class Paper, to the amount of $300 or $400.

The present high prices have induced all kinds of experiments, and every kind of substance has been tried as a substitute for Coffee; The vilest trash, under Showy and Taking names, has been thrust upon the public Bogus and Spurious Coffees, whose chief merit is found in their Labels and wrappers, have proved alike injurious to the consumer, as also to the retailer. These Villainous Compounds have about had their day, and the public taste is fast returning to its first love, and nothing less than a

There is a great and increasing demand for Good Coffee, and our design is to supply this demand.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints.
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 6 boxes for $1.

RED JACKET Stomach Bitters

THESE Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of over twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by their use gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from torpid liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of these Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

They strengthen and invigorate the system.
They are unequaled for general debility.
They are a sure cure for dyspepsia.
They give a good and healthy appetite.
They assist digestion.
They are the best stimulant in existence.
They are a preventive of Fever and Ague.
They relieve constipation.
They cure Nervous Headache:
They are perfectly pure and palatable

Aged persons and delicate females will find they can save large doctor's bills by the use of these Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits. The Red Jacket Bitters are only sold in bottles with our name blown on the side, and our private government stamp across the cork.

Lock Stitch

SEWING MACHINES

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superseding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stich alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted, and kept in order without taking apart or using a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted for run two years without requiring to be taken out, adjusted or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work, will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stitches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most reliable machines for sewing, owing to their always working in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

Communication.

Wake Snake, and Jums huge come to judgment. The mountain has labored! Well, neow you don't say so! Yes, tis true as preachin', and—would you believe it—nothing but a ridiculous mouse has been brought forth! What's this mice, cries a hundred voices. Be patient all till we a "tale unfold," calculated to create within the human breast sympathy for one who has missed his mark. In our intercourse with the world, we always endeavor to steer clear of all obstacles, as near as we can, and in doing so often permit many small actions in reference to ourself to pass by unnoticed; but the exhibition of ill-breeding and undisguised vindictiveness on the part of one man from whom we look for better things, in the Herald of the 9th inst., is more than we can exempt in our calculated clemency. A certain gentleman (?) not a thousand miles from our goodly village, has seen fit to drag my name before the public, in the columns of the Tecumseh Herald, and to cover it all over with the slime of bilingsgate. The unpardonable sin which I have committed was the publication of some structures which he charges to me, on a certain article which appeared in the Herald of the 9th ult., entitled "A Scene No. 1." Oh! what a fall was there, my countrymen! Did poor mortal ever err so basely—nay, so foully—in the eyes of this most mighty intellectual giant—this "Head Centre" of moral rectitude—this quintessence of Christian perfection, as to call into question any thing which he may say or do? The "Teacher," in reviewing the School. ar's production, has discovered a "mare's nest," containing a goodly number of eggs as large as pumpkins, which we will now proceed to break, leaving it to the public to decide whether they are good or bad. The game, we admit, is small, but with us small favors are always thankfully received, and large ones in proportion. The first egg is that I am not a Sabbath-School Scholar. Now, I am an old Sabbath-School Scholar. Tecumseh does not contain all the Sabbath Schools which exist or ever have existed; and, furthermore, I am a reader of the Tecumseh Herald and our dear teacher propounds "Bible Questions" weekly through the colums of said paper, which questions I study and try to solve on the Sabbath,—therefore I claim I am a Sabbath-school scholar. The next egg is that I do not answer to the word of God, which he says "charges me with fearful crime." It was not my intention in writing the article in question to endeavor by any system of reasoning (as many ministers do) to explain away the obvious meaning of the word of God. I know that sin in multitudinous form exists in this world. The word of God threatens sin in all its forms. I am not selected by that word, as by you, as a scapegoat, to bear the sins of all. I am a sinner; so are you. The anathemas of the Divine law stand recorded against the sanctimonious hypocrit, as well as against the beldest sinner; against the minister who who preaches for the honor, the ease, the thousand dollars a year, or for any purpose other than the love of God and his fellow men. The third egg is that I am "furiously enraged" because he came to Tecumseh. Samuel Wishard, "you know better!" Your advent into this village was a matter of so small note that I never gave it a thought one way or the other. No doubt you look through angry eyes, and think because you are angry that others are so. From any thing which I eves have said or ever have written, whence could you draw any such inference? As far as I am concerned, calmly and with an unruffled temper I could see you come or go; coming, I could bid you welcome—going, I could say as did Uncle Toby to the fly, "Go thy way, poor devil; why should I hurt thee? the world is large enough for thee and me." As regards the driving of ministers and churches from the State, which you intimate I would like to see, I can say in all honesty and with due regard for truth, no one would mourn such a calamity more than myself. But at the same time I firmly believe that through the gross materialism of many of our ministers, and the improprieties of the great mass of her members, the church has lost her pristine power. That the course pursued by both ministers and members, generally speaking, (of course I make honorable exceptions,) is doing more to impede the progress of pure Christianity, and to make more infidels, than all the writings of a Bolinbrake, a Payne, or all the infidel writers who ever have lived. No! instead of banishing ministers and churches, I would have the ministers pattern after that meek and lowly Savior, whose followers they profess to be, and whose life was a pattern of meekness and love, and who did not assail those whom he wished to save, in a spirit of vindictiveness. Instead of having a desire to drive ministers away, I yearly contribute what I am able to the support of the ministry. Perhaps you are "furiously enraged" because I don't pay the money into your pockets.

In regard to the kindness of the people of Tecumseh, I will say: I haue been the recipient of a great many kindnesses from the people of Tecumseh. I have passed a good many years of pleasant intercourse with them, the recollection of which will ever cluster around my heart in a halo of sweet remembrances. I take it that you, too, have received your share of forbearance and kindness from the people of Tecumseh, notwithstanding that portion composing the congregation over which you preside. Coming, as you did, to take charge of that congregation, immediately after the ministrations of a minister who soars above you in dignity and intellectual capacity, as high as the highest peak of the Andes towers above the most insignificant mole hill on the plain,—that congregation must certainly exercise a vast amount of Christian forbearance to feed so long on the "weak dilution of mental pap" which you furnish them, after previously having feasted on the "fat things" of a highly polished and intellectual mind. The fourth egg to be broken is, that I pretend that all the people who tell me the truth are my enemies. Why, Samuel Wishart, how can you make such an assertion? Where is your proof? Certainly this charge is a hallucination of your own brain, or else you make the charge without due regard to truth. I am always open to conviction, making it a point "to prove all things" and reserving the right of judging whether they are true. This charge is as false as it is malicious. Oh! Teacher, how could you so degrade that sacred calling in which you are engaged as to stoop so low as to make the third and fourth charges in your bill of indictment? Indeed I feel more pity for you than anger. We will now proceed to the fifth egg; it is this: He says I pretend that I have not been conversed with privately, or in other words, that I have not been in his confessional. Oh! what condescension on the part of this great Teacher, to have bent his dignity so much as to have granted me a private audience! Had such an event taken place, I should have marked it as one of the great epochs in my life's history, and should have had it engraved on a tablet of soft putty to have handed down to the remotest generations of my posterity! That I ever made you a promise not to engage in any business, to use the mildest term, is not so. He says I threw dirt through two columns and a half of the Herald. Judging from the way he winces, there must have been some sharp sand mixed with the dirt. After abusing me most effectually, as he no doubt thought, he informs the public that "personal abuse is not argument." Why, dear teacher, no sane person would entertain, for one moment, the idea that there is any argument in your last extraordinary effusion, but would at once set it down as the ravings of a maddened brain.

I have noticed the teacher's charges in as brief a manner as possible, so valeant quantum valere possunt. The remarkable production of "Sabbath School Teacher" in the Herald of the 9th inst., certainly cannot be the production of a Christian heart! Let any one read it and he cannot fail to see at once, that it was indited when the writer was in an angry mood. They are not the words of a friend—a Christian who loves his enemies, and who laments the errors of those going estray, and who would draw them from the slippery paths of sin by the gentle influences of love and kindness, but rather they are the words of an avowed adversary who has declared war, and who means to drive the defending party to the wall and hold him there till he is utterly crushed or cries for quarters.

Just imagine the Rev. gentleman, after having been to the Office for his Herald, and having seen the "two columns and a half of dirt" which it contains, tearing down the street toward his study at a two-forty rate, his bristles all on end, his teeth set, his fists clenched, and coat-tails streaming in the wind, to write the charges and "proposition" contained in the Herald of the 9th. Yes, there

Our dear teacher again appears,
And fairly shows his full length "ears."
We've drawn him out, his tones are fine,
The "ears" stick out at every line.
He's attacked us in so gentle manner,
And rudest form with tongs and hammer,
And says in terms quite haughty,
That we are awful bad and naughty.
The fact is plain, the proof is ample—
He shows it by fair example;
The boy who stole the cheese and pie
Was the first to cry "it wasn't I."
Taking offence at some of our 'dirty' bits,
He rubs the place where should be wits,
And bids us meet him at Bidwell's Hall
There to "talk in the faces of the people" all;
Or failing to "come to time" to hold our peace forever—
Which of course would be nice and clever.
The truth's as old as Noah's ark—
The smallest puppies loudest bark;
And babies of the smallest size
Will often raise ferocious cries.
Well, should the little babies squeal,
Another and another peal,
Just pat them gently on the back
And give them a little Hobensack;
Or "dirt" tea is sometimes very good
For those in their mentalities bad.

Now to the "proposition."

The proposition may be addressed to me or to some one else; however, if you mean me, I will say the proposition is too flimsy not to be seen through at once. Being well aware that of yourself you cannot attract an audience, you wish to induce me to speak in connection with yourself, knowing that by that means a crowded hall would be the result. Now, in all candor, would it be honest and fair for me to have anything to do with getting a crowd together for you to bore?

However, waiving the above question, I will say: According to the rules of the "Code of honor," I being the challenged party have the right to appoint the time and place,—therefore, as Bidwell's or any other hall would be far too small to hold even a fractional part of those who would be drawn together to hear us, I shall postpone the time of our meeting until the weather gets warm—say about the time that saw logs are ripe,—and the place shall be on the Globe Mill Pond. By so doing we shall give the crowds who, of course, would be drawn together to hear us, a better chance, and you would not be at the expense of having to furnish the hall. I have no doubt the gentlemanly proprietor of the Globe Mill would furnish us the pond without expense.

Now, don't let your angry passions rise because I don't see fit to hold my peace forever. By the way, who are you who commands me to hold my peace forever? Whence comes your authority? Sir, I am an American citizen, and who shall forbid me exercising a right guaranteed to every individual over whom the Ægis of the American Constitution is thrown. Hold my peace when I am assailed in a ruffianly and ungentlemanly manner! No, sir! So long as I can wag my tongue or wield my pen in self-defense, I shall do so, though the d—d stand at the door.

DEAR PUBLIC:

I beg your pardon for appearing before you again, but justice to myself demands that I should disabuse you in regard to the charges preferred against me by "Sabbath School Teacher." And to you "ministers, churches, and all religious people," when any one tells you, be it "Sabbath School Teacher" or not; that no doubt I would like to have you driven from the State, set it down as false, false, false. And to you "teacher," I would say, "be courteous, be kind." "Let not the sun go down on your wrath." And now dear "Sabbath School Teacher" allow me to sign myself your most affectionate

SABBATH SCHOOL SCOLDER.

☞ A juvenile began a composition on moonlight as follows:

'Twas a calm, still night; the moon's pale light shone soft o'er hill and dale.—Not a breeze stirred; not a leaf stirred; not a dog stirred; not a horse stirred; not a man stirred; not an owl stirred; not a hog stirred; not a cow stirred; not a sheep stirred; not a cat stirred; not a hen stirred; not even a goose stirred.

Here the teacher interrupted with the observation that the composition appeared to him to relate more to agriculture than to moonlight.

☞ The difference in men's social ability lies not so much in what they think as when they think it, whether they have the thought at the right moment or not.

☞ A boy will perspire as freely in playing cricket or foot-ball as in turning a crank or a tread-mill, and with far much better results both physically and mentally.

The Last Day of School.

Yesterday was the last day of School, and I walked forth in the bracing atmosphere, to meet in the School-room with the dear children and her with whom we had entrusted the care and education of these precious germs of manhood and womanhood, we call "our children."—Bright eyes, pleasing smiles, and clean faces greeted us on every side—and it seemed as if our souls had broken loose from the ice bound barriers of worldly care and sped gently back o'er the past, down into the sunny nooks of childhood.

The last day of school! Oh what slumbering memories are awakened at the rehearsal of those few words. There stands the log schoolhouse, and just east and over the fence, is the meadow where we used to play goal or fox and geese; turning southward I behold again in the [illegible] most catch the music of its waters as it riffles on toward the sea, unmindful of the two grassy mounds under the shade of its willows whose sleepers once played upon its margin,—met and parted with us on that last day.

Farther up the summit of yonder hill, where the tall, old fashioned church-spire glistens in the noonday, almost under its shadow is the country Academy, taught by "Mr. Strict" as he had been graciously nicknamed; who gave us our first lessons in oratory and compositions. Oh! well do I remember the lack of versification in my first production. It began as follows:

"I will be soundly whipped,
Before I will write a bit,
For old master Strict."

But writing and speaking were both stern necessities under his tutorship, so there was no alternative but to write; the last day also came and found us all prepared, thanks to the indefatigable efforts of the worthy master. What a proud day it was for us all. Let's see, there was Minnie Atwood, she presented the book of essays to our patient teacher. I remember her brown eyes filled with tears as she read the motto: "May we live to repay our debt of gratitude." Yes, and Jimmie Parsons, how natural he spoke "The way to die for my county," and Johny Buela eyes glistened as he recited the piece; Oh I love my native land." They were both representations of scenes in Revolutionary days. The former has proved the truth of his words for he closed his eyes under the folds of the "dear old flag" at Malvern Hill. The latter is still in the ranks. God protect him and restore the Union.

From this school many of the older girls emigrated to the Female Seminary in the city of C———, where were new trials in store for us; besides all the different branches, common, were Music, Drawing, French and Latin—in the teacher of this last, the adage was certainly verified of "Malum per se" for I always breathed freer when leaving her presence; but our principal was one of the soulful beings which we so often read about but seldom see, a model of true womanly greatness and at that last day there were very few eyes undimed by the dews of affection. Unworthy tribute this that falls from my pen to one, so wholly worthy. Soon after, she left her labors for resuscitation and rest, which the inscription upon a marble slab in the city of C———, tells us she found. It reads thus:

"To the memory of Fanney L. Guilford, who departed this life in the Autumn of 1850; aged 24 years." Below are the words, "erected by her pupils."

But I have wandered from my subject. Yesterday was the close of the winter term in school district No. 8, of Tecumseh and the exercises would have done honor to schools of a higher grade. The familiar dialogue of "all for good order," was enacted and which for the lesson it teaches, might be of inestimable value to both parents and children. Next followed single pieces of a moral tendency, showing well for the tastes and inclinations of the speakers, interspersed with now and then a mirthful selection. There was one towards the close of the exercises which, for beauty of thought struck us forcibly. It was that of four young Misses, each representing the place her nativity and bearing tokens of the realm in which she was queen. The first was a country maiden, with bounding elastic step, crowned with a wreath of flowers and myrtle and bearing in her hand a basket of wood mosses entwined with wild flowers, waiting you back, far o'er the hills of care, to the moss grown rivulet dotted with its daisies and violetts. The second was a maiden fair and full of grace coming from the seaside, bearing in each hand a beautiful sea shell and crowned with a wreath of the same and again we went forth basket in hand as of yore, to gather up those precious relics of bygone days. The third came from the city and acted her part. The fourth was from a secluded alley where penury had taken lessons. The moral was, that we are all equals in the inheritance and rights of this life and rest and beauties of the upper world. And the whole was interspersed with essays by the girls, each adopting the course of delivering her own, thereby giving confidence and self-reliance. The most perfect order was maintained throughout the entire exercises.

We then listened to some very fiting remarks by P. W. Adams, followed by O. P. Remington, and latterly by the teacher Miss C. N. Colvin, who is of your village, and whom, if the sculptor [illegible] orous could exclaim; "but this is my work," we think that Miss Colvin might affirm without arogating anything to herself that teaching is her work, for she possesses all the necessary qualifications combined with large human nature or the perceptive organs; can see at glance the wishes and feelings of her pupils, judge clearly of their ability and adaptability; with very large mentality is alive to all the finer feelings, possesses great power of will and energy, of character and capacity for carrying forward and managing her undertakings; a thorough going spirit, which takes right hold with all its might and would teach a good school in spite of opposition or obstacles. With a reflective, discriminating cast of mind, with talents more solid than brilliant or dashing; taking great interest in the natural sciences and thinks more of the deep, solid branches than fashionable literature; and has a pleasant way of making others happy and at ease; loves children just enough not to spoil them; and with very large conscientiousness is impartial in her efforts as teacher and could not condescend to any little meanness to suit the desires of the opulent or wealthy, but would meet any approaches towards it with the most effective rebuke; a model of the true woman! God give you strength for the work; Teacher—Friend—more than one good wish went out after you at the close of our school.

The Tecumseh Herald.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR. 23, 1865.

The News.

We have two singular reports from Richmond—one that Lee has given up all hope of a successful defense of the rebel cause, declaring further efforts useless, and the other that Jeff. Davis has abdicated his power as President, and given over to Lee, as supreme dictator, the full direction of what remains of rebel resources, with instructions to make the most he can of them. It is safe to say that neither of the reports is true; and it is no doubt equally safe to say that the result which these things would indicate is near at hand. The collapse is near—probably very near. The pardon of two negroes under a sentence of death for burglary, on condition they enter the rebel army, is a telling fact of the utter desperation of the rebel cause—showing as it does, not only the pressing need of soldiers, but great difficulty in obtaining [illegible] not be sought, if other negroes could be had.

The report that Sherman had occupied Goldsboro seems to be incorrect. It is now said that he left Fayetteville on the 14th, and was expected to reach Goldsboro on the 20th. Before leaving the former place he destroyed the extensive arsenal and other valuable property.

It is thought the rebels will make a stand against Sherman at Goldsboro, if at all, Johnston having been reinforced by Bragg and from Richmond for that purpose. Unless the Union forces can be checked at that place or Raleigh, it is difficult to see where it can be done at all, as, with those points in our possession, the field for obtaining supplies for the rebel armies will be so effectually circumscribed that they cannot possibly hold out.

Sheridan has arrived at White House, on the Pamunkey river, about 25 miles east of Richmond, where he was met by vessels with supplies. His expedition has been one of the most important and successful of the war, having wrought incalculable damage to the rebels, and with the loss of but 50 men and 2 officers. His troops are in exbelfent condition having been well supplied on the march. The Danville Road is now the only outlet from Richmond, and the only one that can be used for a length of time, far beyond the endurance of the rebels therein.

Scouts from Sherman's army report that he captured Goldsboro without opposition, having connected with Schofield. This comes by passengers from City Point to Washington, and not being corroborated from other sources, may not be correct.

Sheridan is well supplied at White House, where his troops are being rested, preparatory to a new and important movement.

The steady but rapid decline in Gold is beginning to have its effect upon all departments of trade, and threatens no small panic among large holders. Up to this time, there has been a prevalent feeling that a reaction would take place, and that Gold would go up again, and hence the desperate efforts of the "bulls;" but the experience of the past four days seems to have taken the startch out of that class; the result is a sudden depreciation, as shown by our repocts It has been a common remark for some time that 'Gold can't get below 150" and yet the breakers will have to be put down very soon to stop it there.

Deserters from Lee's army report the abandonment of Richmond as a thing recognized as inevitable, since the destruction of the canal by Sheridan. It is now impossible to feed the army and citizens. Prices have doubled within a week. Flour is selling there at $1,500 per barrel; meat at $10 per pound; $400 per gallon, and other things in proportion. Board at Hotels is $100 per day. The result of this state of things is great wait among the poor, many of whom are reported as actually starving. Added to this, is a constant apprehension of attack from Grant. Every man or boy able to carry a musket is thrust into the ranks of the army.

The Tribune's James river correspondence says sefunees from Richmond report great consternation prevailine in that city. They say that the city for some time has been in the course of evacuation, in the way of sending government material machinery, &c., to Lynchburg and Danville, Sheridan, they also say, has put a stop to this, in a great measure, by destroying the Richmond and Lynchburg canal. The main means of communication left is the Danville road, which is all most worn out, with no material or men to repair it. These men think Davis, Lee and other leaders have lost all hope, and already have their eyes on Mexico as an asylum.

The Tribune's Washington correspondent Says a Senator just from the front says it is Gen. Grant's opinion that Richmond will be evacuated within the next 10 days.

Rebel Atrocities.

The rebels have but one way of dealing with the true stories of their inhuman butcheries and other horrible outrages, which is by denying them point blank.—The rebel press set the example by sneering at, and giving the lie to all the charges of murder and outrage upon Unionists, whether prisoners or otherwise, and their soldiers and ruffians generally follow the example. Recently the miscreant Forrest declared that Senitor Wade's report upon the murderous atrocities at Fort Pillow, was, in his own characteristic language "a d—d lie." The ruffian Mundy or Clark, while standing on the gallows in presence of the multitude assembled to witness his execution, in the very face of death, solmnly declared that he had taken many a prisoner during his wild career in Kentucky, but had always treated them kindly. The Louisville Journal says of him: "We do not know what Sue regarded as kind treatment, yet we do not believe that a single person who was ever taken prisoner by him can be found to come forward and testify to the falsity of this statement. We do no believe a single one can be found for Munday acted upon the principle, 'Dead man tell no tales,' and he brutally murdered every Federal soldier or Union citizen who was so unfortunate as to become his captive. The friends of the murdered men alone come forward and contradict the statement, for the lips of the dead are mute. Sue Eundy treated prisoners kindly! A [illegible] them in in cold blood, and left the mangled bodies where they fell, without giving them the poor shelter of eqen a rude and shallow grave."

—A most pitable stat of affairs exists along the shores of the Mississipdi, from Cairo to Memphis, in concequence of the high water which is overflowing the whole country. A steamer on her upward trip was frequently hailed by families along shore, who had been driven from their houses by the flood, and had constructed rafts of rails upon which they had placed their families and megre effects, and were riding at the mercy of a flimsy clothes-line or bed-cord. Often they found the family yet in the cabin surrounded with water, and having a horse on board, they sent a man out on horseback to bring off thd wife and children, while the husband, with a canoe, brought off tse effects. The stock was wading in the fast rising water, the poultry having sought the roof of the house or stable, were quietly awaiting the slow process of starvation, and the stock, nearly the entire wealth of the poor people, had to be abandoned.

The Recent Flood.

The Pittsburg Chronicle of Saturday says the Alleghany River, during Friday afternoon, rose 14 feet, and one part of the city was completely under water. The river washed the steps of the Scott House, at the foot of Irwin street, and the lower part of Pennsylvania streets was rendered impassable by the flood. The first Ward of the city was flooded, and communication with all the bridges cut, except for vehicles. Cellars, as far up as Laycock street, were filled with water, and the first floors of buildings were invaded by it. Mechanic street bridge was closed to travel, in consequence of the fear that it would be swept away, the water having risin to its braces. At 10 o'clock it was reported the water was slowly falling; by this evening it will doubtless be within its accustomed banks, and the danger passed.

By dispatches from other cities we learn that the aqueduct at Freeport, and the bridges at Kittaning and Oil City were carried away, and that Oil City was quite inundated. Franklin, Pa., was also flooded.

The damage to the railroad will, no doubt be immense. Every stream and tributary to the Alleghany or Monongahela is swollen fearfully. On the Pennsylvania Road, two bridges are reported to have been away. The Fort Wayne Road is under water in several places.—The Alleghany Valley Road has been immensely damaged, both by loss of bridges, and the destruction of the track; and the Connellsville Road, although not yet much injured, will no doubt be. The Binghamton, South and West Hillsburg mills, have had to suspend operations, and residents of the houses near the river have been driven up into the second and even third stories.

Naval News.

The Navy Department rec. the following from Admiral Lee:

Flagship Gen. Burnside,
Off Bridgeport, Ala., March 4.

Sir—I have the honor to inform you that I took advantage of the late rise in the Tennessee River, and crossed Elk River shoals with the flag ship and the Gen. Thomas, and went down to mussle Shoals. I came across Gen. Roddin's comp and drove them off, I then penetrated Elk River, I am meeting with good success in encouraging loyal feelings on the south side of the river. Citizens are constantly coming in and taking the oath. From intervews I have with prominent men, I think there is no doubt that Ala. will soon return to her allegiance to the Government.

Very respectfully,
(Signed) N. C. FORREST.

A new Orleans date of March 11th, says: The news from Dauphin Island, headquarters of the army operating against Mobile, Gen. Granger commanding, in the absence of Gen. Canby, is rather meager in a military point of view. Operations may be delayed some two weeks from reasons which are contraband.

Letters from Key West say that the blockade runner Ruby was captured on the 27th ult., off the Tortugas, by the Proteus, after a chase of two hours, during which 36 shots were fired at the Ruby. The prisoners belonged to Malone's regiment, of Lyon's command, and were scouting for hostages when they were "gobbled." Some of Lyon's men are prisoners at Clarksville, and the rebel General has been trying to get "even" with us.

The passenger train which left Louisville on Tuesday afternoon for Nashville, was attacked and captured a few miles below Glasgow, by guerrillas under Gen try. The train was thrown off the track and several of the passengers were wounded. The newsboy on the train was shot severely in the leg. The passengers were robbed of money, watches, etc., after which the train was set on fire, and six passenger cars and the baggage car were destroyed.

A fire in Winona, Minnesota, on the 11th inst., destroyed $50,000 worth.

Foreign News.

A Paris correspondent says that at a rebel council in the city it is understood that a decision was come to authorizing Page, commander of the ram Stonewall, to attack the United States fleet in the harbor of Ferrol, Spain. The fleet is composed of the Niagra, Sacramento, and it is presumed, the Iroquois. The Stonwall carries a 300 pounder, and a thick cuirass, which leads to some apprehensions as to the result, as our vessels are not cuirassed. The Spanish authorities, however, have mounted a heavy battery, and are determined to have their neutrality respected.

The Secret of Youth.

There are women who cannot grow old—women who without any special effort, remain always young and always attractive. The number is smaller than it should be, but there is still sufficient number to make the wide difference between this class and the other. The secret of this perpetual youth lies not in beauty, for some women possess it who are not at all handsome; nor in dress, for they are frequently careless in that respect, so far as the more arbitrary dictates of fashion are concerned; nor in having nothing to do, for these every young women are always busy as bees, and it is very well known that idleness will fret people into old age and ugliness faster than overwork. The charm we imagine, lies in a sunny temper—neither more of less, the blessed gift of always looking on the brightest side of life, and stretching the mantle of charity over everybody's faults or failings.

The Decline in Gold.

There is a prospect that the continued decline in gold will create quite a panic among produce dealers and gold operators, and will, perhaps effect other branches of business. It is reported that several New York dry goods and grain dealers have invested largely at 200 and will be ruined if gold does not reach that figure this week, which there is but little prospects of its doing.

The cause of the rapid decline in the prices of gold is to be found in the rapid concentration of Federal armies around the rebel capital and the army defending it, and the rapidly growing impression that there will be but little to check the victorious March of the Union armies till the last armed opposition to the national government ceases. The announcement that the new Secretary of the Treasury intends to inaugurate a contraction of the curency also has its effect on the gold market.

Will those merchants who were so ready to "mark up" goods as gold advanced mark them "down," now that gold is falling? "It is poor rules that don't work both ways."—Watchtower.

LEE DISCONCERTED.—The Washington Star, of Monday, contained the following paragraph, in blazing double leads:

"There is information from Richmond to the effect that Lee's project for future military operations of the Confederacy, was to make a defensive military quadrangles, with Richmend as one of its angles. The four points of the quadrangle were to be manned with 60,000 negro troops, who could, it was thought be relied on for defense duty, leaving Lee at liberty with his white army, a movable one, to march in any direction threatened. The failure of the rebel Congress to promptly pass measures filling the army the rapid advance of Sherman, and Sheridan's victory, have now made Lee's plans impracticable."

SPOTTED FEVER IN INDIANA.—The spotted fever is very prevalent in Palestine, Ind., proving fatal in almost every case, and creating more alarm than the cholera. The sudden attack upon the brain and nervous system—the very mainspring of life—and the inability of the medical attendant to form even a correct diagnosis of the disease, invest it with mystery and terror, such as was attributed to the plague of olden times. This terrible malady is also raging with fatal effect in the vicinity of Rosedale, on the line of the railroad between Terre Haute and Rockville. Several deaths from the disease occur daily within the effected neighborhood.—Exchange.

THREE CENT COINS.—A law was passed by both Houses of Congress during the closing hours to authorize the coinage of three cent pieces to be composed of copper and nickel. The law also provides that the three cent piecas shall be a legal tender to the amount of sixty cents; and that the one and two cent copper coin shall be a legal tender to the amount of 40 cts. It also prohibits the issue of any paper fractional currency below the denomination of five cents, concequently, the now three cent paper notes being illegal must be withdrawn from circulation.

TRAVEL TO THE EAST.—The vexations passport system has at length been abolished, between this country and Canada and travels will not be subjected to delay and anoyance when they require to cross the line. The system while in operation, had the greatest effect on travel on those routes to the east, through Michigan and Canada, by the Michigan Central, and Southern, and Great Western and Grand Trunk railroads.

Prospectus of the Jackson Daily Citizen.

On or about the 27th of March, the proprietors of the Jackson Weekly CITIZEN propose to issue a FIRST CLASS DAILY PAPER, to fill a pressing want, which has long been felt in Central Michigan, now one of the most populous and wealthy sections of the State.

We propose to issue a Journal, respectable in size, containing the full Telegraphic Reports of the Associated Press, the latest Markets, and all the General News of the day. Particular attention will be paid to Local and State News, and everything that goes to make a Daily Paper interesting to all. In fact, we propose to make a LIVE DAILY PAPER, fully up to the times, dealing fairly and squarely with all the issues of the day, and earnestly advocating those views and principles, which we believe will be for the best interests of our common country. While it will be the organ of no man or clique, it will support the administration in a vigorous prosecution of the war, until the old flag again floats over ever every foot of the National domain, and until the last vestige of armed rebellion is swept from the land.

With a Journal of this character, looking closely after, and advancing the INTERESTS of this LOCALITY, not violently partizan, but firm, independent and manly in tone, we appeal to all classes of our citizens for a prompt, hearty and generous support.

We shall issue a MORNING PAPER, that will reach, at least, six of our interior counties in advance of any other Daily.—With a new POWER PRESS, operated by STEAM, and new type, we expect to make a handsome sheet, fresh and attractive in appearance, and as a NEWSPAPER worthy the confidence and patronage of all.

Our Weekly will be changed to a quarto in form, and will contain 48 colums of matter, over 40 of which will embrace the cream of the Daily, selected with the utmost care.

With these improvements the weekly Citizen will be as valuable in any household, and will contain as much interesting matter as any of the Eastern weeklies.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have theroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to Grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for grinding Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms.

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,
WOOLSTON COMFORT.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

By authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned has assumed the General Subscription Agency for the sale of United States Treasury Notes, bearing seven and three tenths per cent. interest, per annum, known as the

SEVEN-THIRTY LOAN.

These Notes are issued under date of August 15th, 1864, and are payable three years from that time, in currency, or are convertible at the option of the holder into

U. S. 5-20 Six per cent. GOLD-BEARING BONDS.

These bonds are now worth a premium of nine per cent., including gold interest from Nov., which makes the actual profit on the 7-30 loan, at current rates, including interest, about ten per cent. per annum, besides its exemption from State and municipal taxation, which adds from one to three per cent. more, according to the rate levied on their property. The interest is payable semi-annually by coupons attached to each note, which may be cut off and sold to any bank or banker.

The interest amounts to

One cent per day on	a $50 note.
Two cents " "	" $100	"
Ten " "	" $500	"
20 " "	" $1000	"
$1 " "	" $5000	"

Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions. This is

The Only Loan in Market

now offered by the Government, and it is confidently expected that its superior advantage will make it the Great Popular Loan of the People.

Less than $200,000,000 remain unsold, which will probably be disposed of within the next 60 or 90 days, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans.

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country, have generally agreed to receive subscription at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

JAY COOKE,
Subscription Agent, Philadelphia.

Subscriptions will be received by the First National Bank of Ypsilanti, and the First National Bank of Detroit.

THE NINTH NATIONAL BANK

OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

Capital, $1,000,000, Paid in.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES, AND SPECIAL AGENT FOR JAY COOKE, SUBSCRIPTION AGENT,

will deliver 7-30 Notes, Free of Charge, by express, in all parts of the country, and receive in payment Checks on New York, Philadelphia, and Boston, current bills, and all five per cent. interest notes, with interest to date of subscription. Orders sent by mail will be promptly filled.

This Bank receives the accounts of Banks and bankers on favorable terms; also of individuals keeping New York accounts.

J. U. ORVIS, President.
J. T. AILL, Cashier.

Business cards of five lines, or less, inserted one year, $8 per year.

Job Work neatly executed at this office. Charges reasonable.

☞ Our township elections take place on Monday, April 3d. Trot out the candidates, and we will elect the whole crowd.

☞ Read the advertisement headed "Sale of Real estate at Auction." It will afford a grand chance to buy good property.

☞ The largest stock of Paper and Envelopes ever in this place can now be seen at G. T. Ketcham's Book and News Store, in the Post Office.

☞ J. D. Robbins is now preparing to go East for a stock of New Goods. Any person wanting goods in his line, can have them at a bargain. Try him.

☞ Jonesville has been visited lately by burglars, who have broken into several shops and taken considerable money and goods.

☞ If you want a good Piano, Melodeon, or an American Organ, leave your orders with Dr. E. Hause, at his Dental Rooms. He will furnish an instrument cheap. Second-hand Melodeons for sale very cheap.

☞ The attendance at the quarterly meetings of the Methodist Church in Adrian on Monday was very large. The revival interest heretofore reported in that church is still increasing. Between 200 and 300 persons have expressed an awakening of feeling, and over 60 have already joined the church.

Another Exhibition for the Soldiers' Aid Society.—The Young People who took parts in the Exhibition a few weeks since, are now making arrangements to give another exhibition for he benefit of the Aid Society. We presume the exhibition will be given some time next week, probably on Friday evening.

Union School Exhibition.

The Students of the Tecumseh Union School will give an Exhibition in Old Odd Fellows Hall, on the evening of Friday, March 24th. The proceeds of this Exhibition will be applied in the purchase of Philosophical and Geographical apparatus for the School. Doors open at 6 1-2 o'clock. Exercises commence at 7 1-2. Admission 25 Cents.

The Results of Advertising.—The proprietors of the Pacific Monthly are pursuing a liberal and extensive system of advertising, and the result is an extraordinary and unprecedented demand for the Pacific Monthly. The fact is, no magazine offers the same inducements as this. Every subscriber is the recipient of a valuable present, as well as a magazine for a year, alone well worth the price of subscription.

☞ They do say that P. N. Curtis is selling Groceries a little cheaper than any body else in town. We doubted it a little at first, but after investigating the matter, we became convinced that this is a fact. His Sugars have been bought since the great fall in goods. He is aware that goods are rapidly falling, and he is bound to keep up with the decline. Be sure and try him. Not to be undersold is his motto.

☞ Work on the new Union Hall, in Adrian, will be resumed as soon as the weather will permit. When finished, it will be one of the finest and most commodious halls in the State. The walls measure 64 by 114 feet inside, and the audience room will be 31 feet high; the basement will be 10 feet between joints, the audience room being on the ground floor. It will have a self-supporting gallery capable of seating 500 persons, and the entire building will seat nearly 2,000; the ceiling is to be frescoed. The entire cost of the building will fall but little short of $30,000.

The Wind.

On Friday evening last about 8 o'clock an exceedingly furious storm broke upon this village, and for an hour or so it was almost an impossibility to remain on the streets. Sign boards were torn from their hinges and fastenings, window shutters blown off, and boxes etc. blown about in a promiscuous manner. The rain poured down in torrents, umbrellas were worse than useless, they being torn from the hands of those who carried them, or turned wrong side out, and all who happened to be on the street were soon drenched to the skin. It was amusing the next morning to see those who were out the night before around looking for hats, bonnets, &c., which were scattered by the wind.

R. C. Moore,

The leading Dry Goods merchant in Tecumseh,—he deals in Dry Goods exclusively, and keeps his stock well assorted the year round,—is now receiving his stock—bought in New York at panic prices—and is offering it at lower figures than have been known here for two years past. Look at his large and beautiful assortment of Dress Prints, Delaines—Brown and bleached, Sheetings, and Shirtings,—fancy Dress Goods, Balmoral Skirts, Towellings, Table Linens, French Flannels, Shirting Flannels, Shirting Stripes, Denims, Apron Checks,—in a word, call there for anything you want. He always sells you goods at the lowest market value—and at the lowest price that any one gets them. He sells to all at one price. No Jewing on prices. Moore allows the young "bosses" to blow, swell and explode over their goods, while he keeps busy selling his. Mr. Anderson and Mr. Taylor are always on hand, ready and willing to show goods—hence the Ladies are specially invited to call and look at his stock. It matters not whether you wish to buy or merely look at Goods, that are freely and willingly exhibited to all; for this is the only way for customers to get posted on values, viz., by asking for the prices.

N. B. A very handsome line of Ladies' Dress Buttons, and Bugle and Bead trimmings just received.

The Local Machine.—An Editor sat in his sanctum one day, smoking his pipe in a furious way. He appeared quite as mad as any "wet hen," as he looked at the papers and threw down his pen. "I've got it," he cried in very high glee, "I've got it, old boy, and you shall serve me; and as long as I edit a political, neutral or what not paper, that to public opinion is bound to cate, I'll never more trouble my head or my brains, to write those troublesome locals, that aint worth the ink, or paper, or pains, that it takes to indite them. I'll invent a machine with very large crank, that will write all the locals, tell all the news, and settle my notes at the bank—three things that fill an Editor's life with troubles and trials, vaxations and strife." The machine was invented and put upon trial; it worked like a charm, and as smooth as a dial. It told all the news, paid all the bills, and is said to have cured several people of chills. It wrote poetry and music, sweet as a concert of vocals, but it did not, it would not, it could not write Locals.

Rich Churning

Considerable merriment has been excited over an occurrence which recently took place in the town of Fairfield, in this county. A well-to-do farmer residing in that town, recently sold his farm, receiving in payment $1,100 in greenbacks. This was, he opined, too large an amount of money to be careless of. He was afraid to leave it in any place where he was accustomed to leave money, so he placed it in a churn. The next morning his wife placed her cream in the churn and churned it until the butter "come;" and while working it over, discovered in the butter a greenback. Surprised at this phenomenon she pursued her research and found another, and another—in fact a large quantity. Just then her husband entered, explained the mystery, and the two were soon busily engaged in scraping the butter from the greenbacks. Luckily none of the money had been injured, but our friend has learnt, that though a useful household utensil, yet a churn is not exactly the place to hide money in.

Died,

Jan. 9th, 1865, in one of the branches of St. Mary's Hospital, at Detroit, Mich., Israel Pennington, eldest son of Joseph and Amanda Pennington, of Macon, Lenawee Co., Mich., aged 17 years, 4 months and 27 days.

Son, and Brother,
Lone are the paths, and sad the hours,
Since thy loved spirits gone;
But O, a brighter home than ours,
We trust is now thine own

But O,
Affliction is a stormy deep,
Where wave resounds to wave;
Though o'er our hearts the billows roll,
We know the Lord can save.

Mourner.

Nothing but Green backs.—The merchants of this city are inaugurating a movement to refuse all money but greenbacks, treasury notes, and U. S currency after the 1st of April. This proceeding is forced upon our merchants and business men by similar action being taken in other cities, driving bank notes into sections where no such prohibitions exists. A vast quantity of the bank notes in circulation are worthless and should long ago have been repudiated, and our merchants could not longer refrain from taking this action. We believe, however, that none of our business men contemplate the refusal of gold or silver in payment for goods.—Wate to er

Would it not be well for our business men to adopt something like the above.

☞ See the business directory on our first page. It is the duty of every man in town to have his card inserted—thus letting the world know what business is going on in Tecumseh.

Very Blue!—Ten dollars a quart for skimmed milk in Richmond. That takes the cream off the Confederacy. Everything looks blue in that direction.

☞ Mrs. O. McCoy has just received one of the largest stocks of Millinery Goods ever brought to this county. It is no wonder that one-horse shops are obliged to close doors, with such competition in the field. Her goods are of the nicest kind and she sells them as cheap as they can be bought in the State. Give her a call.

Spring is the Seed-Time of Disease.—All who are suffering from indisposition to think, languor, fatigue after walking, palpitation of the heart, distress after eating, heartburn, depression of spirits, desire for solitude, sick and nervous headache, and a number of other affections of this class, rendering a person unfit for the society of his friends or the world, we say, take the Red Jacket Stomach Bitters, which are sold by all druggists throughout the country.

☞ Extra copies of the Herald can be procured at Ketcham's News Depot.

☞ We shall be under obligations to our friends if they will furnish us any items of news that may come under their observation, and that we may not be likely to hear of. Any fact in relation to town matters, that will be of general interest, or that will benefit the town if left at the office, will be thankfuly received.

☞ Those of our subscribers, who are intending to pay their subscriptions in wood, potatoes, butter, eggs, lard, &c. should bring it along now.

☞ Wanted immediately at G. T. Ketchams ten tons of paper rags, for which the highest market price will be paid.

For Sale.—I offer for sale my House and Lot on Pearl Street, near the Depot; also a First Mortgage on Real Estate, (bearing seven per cent. interest,) of $800; and some First Class Paper, to the amount of $300 or $400.

Wm. A. Peck.

Tecumseh, March 16, 1865.—w3

The Subscriber having sold his Stock of Goods to A. Hanford, requests those indebted to him—also those indebted to the late Firm of Wheeler & Waring—to make immediate payment, as he is anxious to close up his business. At present said Notes and Accounts will be found with S. C. LeBaron, at Hood's Clothing Store, who is authorized to settle the same. Prompt attention will save legal costs. Tecumseh, Feb. 15, 1865.

DR. ROBACK'S
and
BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled
for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

THESE Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of ever twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by their use gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from torpid liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of those Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

They strengthen and invigorate the system.
They are unequaled for general debility.
They are a sure cure for dyspepsia.

Psalm of Oil.

Tell me not in mournful measure,
Oil is but a hidden show;
For 'tis earth's deep hidden treasure,
And a pump will make it flow.

"Oil is greasy," "Oil doth smell bad"—
So say those who have it not;
So of old, the poor fox felt bad,
When the grapes he had not got.

Not to stay at home and grumble
Is the way to make your pile,
But in hearty rough and tumble,
Dig and bore till you "strike ile."

Rods are long, and wells are sinking,
And the earth, half full of holes,
Shows the signs of constant drilling,
Shows the faith that fills our souls.

See at Oil Creek how they rally,
See at Mecca's mud domain,
In the Alleghana valley,
All have oil "upon the brain."

Trust no agent's specious story,
Go yourself, get you a lease,
Drill—drill deep in search of glory,
Find it when you find the grease.

Hits of greenhorns oft remind us
We, perhaps, by patient toil,
Can, departing leave behind us
Quite a striking "show of oil."

Such a show as that another
Boring after without luck;
Some forlorn and fainting brother
Seeing, may keep up his pluck.

Let us, then, be busy boring
With the means at our control;
Keep on drilling, keep exploring,
With a pump in every hole.

Highjinks on Skates.

Everywhere in all sorts of newspapers, I had read of the glorious skating fun—Central Park skating—Schuylkill and Schuylkill Park—Diamond ditto—private ditto—the grand fun—men on skates; splendid sylphides in scant skirts, steel shod, and shirring away over the ice—the—thunder! the very reading gave me the ice fever, and, in the delirium consequent upon the sud len attack, I resolved upou taking an ice-cruise myself.

Why not? What was to hinder? I had never navigated that sort of craft before, 'tis true. But then I'd been on the water and under the water all my life, and on the ice, too, some. Hadn't I killed seals and chased white bears for weeks together on the ice?

Women could skate—so the papers said. So did everybody else, when I inquired of 'em. I could skate! What was the reason I couldn't? The only thing I'd ever seen a woman do that I couldn't, was to hook her own dress aft, and, carrying six feet breadth of crinoline, sail through a twenty inch doorway. Yes, sir; I could skate, and I was bound on an ice cruise.

There was nothing to prevent the expedition from being fitted out at once. I was lounging about the Navy Yard, detatched from everything—all acquaintances included—waiting orders. Disgusted with bar rooms, detesting theatres; what was I to do for amusement? Why skate, of course! Ah, yes! the very thing, by Jove! Why hadn't I thought of that before? I'd have a cruise directly; or sooner if possible. No, I must have the tools first, and I startad off up town to find them.

I brought up in front of a big window on the starboard side of Chestnut Street, going towards Schuylkill, where they had more different rigs of sliding machines than you can see national flags at Gibralter. Knowing about as much of the qualifications of the different patterns as a cow does of chronometer time, I went inside and asked for a pair of skates.

"What kind do you prefer, sir?"

"O, I have no preference. Give me the best you have got."

"Yes, sir;" and the clerk passed out for inspection a pair of brass clad, steel clippers, with more gilgies and running rigging to 'em than there is to a French sloop of war.

"These are the best, are they?"

"Yes, sir, decidedly! Just get on them, sir, and you'll go anywhere and everywhere, like patent lightning! If you don't find it so, bring them back, sir, I'll return your money."

"What's the price?"

"Fourteen dollars! Very cheap, sir."

Didn't believe that, of course; but invested the amount and started for Fairmount.

Found superb skating. Everybody said so. There was a regiment of men, a battallion of dimity, and a whole brigade of small craft, on skates—skivering, scooting and cutting all sorts of fancies on the ice; everybody laughing, chattering, whooping, skylarking and flying in all directions! and I didn't wonder new-sappers, and everybody else, called skating glorious fun.

"Have yer skates strapped, sir?" said an itinerant boot black about the height of a walking stick.

"Do you understand it, bub?"

"O, yes, sir. I strap all the ladies' skates for 'em."

"Ah ha! Do oh? Must have a jolly time of it! Would like that berth myself. There you are. Go ahead, old boy!" and I sat down on Blackie's box, about a couple of fathoms or so out on the ice.

Whiz! like a rocket, went a great strapping, long-legged chap, with a cigar flying jibboom, and swinging his arms like a frigate's headyards in a hurricane, with the braces all adrift.

"Oh, ho! So they can smoke on skates, eh, boy?"

"Lord! yes, sir. Everybody smokes on the ice."

"Exactly." So I fired up a Principe, and shipped it for a cruise.

Urchin announced skates all ataunto, and took a fifty cent 'fractional' fee.

"Here boy! here's another fifty. Just allow me to sit on your box a few minutes until I get the run of the navigation."

"Yes, sir—you can set there till I get somebody else to strap."

So I sat there studying ice navigation by dead reckoning, till directly a little petticoat craft in yellow trousers, skirts to her knees, red belt, Russian cap, and arms akimbo, swooped down, and checked up right in front of me. There she hung for a minute, quivering and balancing, just like a fish hawk does over his prey; and all the time eyeing me with a jolly twinkle in her dancing black eyes.

"A challenge for a race, sir! Catch me if you can!"

Little Diminity lifted her left foot a trifle, made a great curve, the bottom of her skirt just brushing my nose; and off she went like a flying fish—ze-ee e-st—zit—swinging from side to side, her tartan skirt swaying hither and thither, like the folds of of a spanker brailed in with a ship-head to wind.

"So ho! That's a challenge, is it? And that's the way to skate? Thunder! I can skate! Anybody can skate."

But I couldn't, though, whatever anybody else could do. I accepted Dimity's challenge, however, and her practice on ice. So I bounced up from the box, lifted left foot a little, bent right knee, and struck my arms akimbo. But I didn't cut a curve. I did the next best thing, however, and cut a "spread eagle." Port foot slid due southeast, and starboard one nor'west, till I realized these spread out pictorial impossibilities on circus bills. I wondered if my boots and skates would ever become shipmates again.

"I say, Mr. Saltwater, couldn't yer lift yerself amidship a bit, so we can sail 'tween your legs?" piped a young scamp, file leader to a string of twenty juvenile skaters.

"Don't try to skate on both feet at once, my dear sir!" advised a sensible, christian-looking young man, who came to my assistance, and set me on even keel once more. "When you lift one foot, sir, you must throw all your vigor and muscle into the other limb. And always remember, sway your body so that your weight will always be upon the foot which has the ice. 'Tis very easy, sir—just this way!"—and away he went, my Christian mentor, with a long, striding, graceful swing.

"O yes—that's very easy. All the vigor in the other limb. Yes—I can do it." So I made a prodigious scoot, and—did it.

I stuck out left leg, like a musquitto when he's blood-sucking. Put all my vigor and muscle into right limb, and couldn't get it out again. Went off on foot like a shot, crooking right knee a little twice a minute, just as little Dimity did. Saw a crinoline craft crossing my course, under convoy of a big double-banked chap, both skating a streak. Tried to sheer to port, and go clear of 'em. Missed stays, and went afoul of Crinoline. The toe of my Port skate hooken Miss Somebody's skirt, which gave me a broad sheer to starboard, and I rammed big convoy, butting him square on his cutwater, and drove the fire-end of my Principe down his throat. There was an everlasting tangle and all hands went sprawling on the ice, like a nest of Ineauga land crabs.

"Look here, sir! What do you mean?" yelled the big convoy, scrambling to his feet and maneuvering for a broad-side.

"Beg pardon, sir. I couldn't help it!" I replied.

"Couldn't help it! Why didn't you stop?"

"Didn't know how."

"O, ho! green on skates, eh?"

"Yes, greener'n a cabbage!"

That mollified the big chap, and, setting me on my pins again he volunteered to educate me into checking up.

"Turn your toes up and dig the heels of your skates into the ice—this way." And he illustrated.

"O, yes! I can do that." And I did directly. Off I shot again on one leg, steering this time for the shore—for I'd skated enough.

Half way in, and there slid right down in my course a crowd of forty or so—girls and men, and women and boys. I tried "down brakes" according to directions—and broke too much. Up toes, and digging my heels into the ice, I staggered back like, and doubled amidships as if I was going to take a seat—and did. I went down, stern foremost, with a whang, that broke the ice like a pane window-glass shivered by a stone hurled through it. I had an idea just then that such a bump as that would have started the armor on any iron-clad afloat.

I sold those infernal skates, just as I sat, for four dollars, under a strong conviction that ther's no fun in skating. It's all a humbug. I can't skate—I don't want to.

☞ The following is decidedly the neatest little mathematical puzzle that ever came to our notice. It occupied the attention of one of the clubs, the other evening, until a late hour, and some of the members are said to be puzzling over it yet:

A man has 60 apples; he sells 30 for 15 cents, which is a half-cent apeace, or 2 apples for 1 cent. He sells the remaining 30 for 10 cents, which is a third of a cent apiece, or 3 apples for 1 cent. Thus we see for 5 apples he gets 2 cents; now, how many cents does he get for 60 apples. The problem seems plain enough, and the rule of three gives the immediate result of 24. But, on the other hand, if he gets 15 cents for 30, it seems pretty evident that he gets 25 for the 60."

It is said to be a poor rule that won't work both ways, but this one seems utterly to refuse to. Nevertheless, the solution of the problem is easy; who will reconcile both its seemingly conflicting ends?—[Californian.

Nice Nautical Points.

'How's her head there, Ben?' sung out Captain Gus. North, of the U. S. transport 'Franklin,' to Ben. Arden, an old shell-back man-o'-war's-man, who had hold of the wheel.

'Northwest by north, half north, north 'ardly,' promptly responed Ben.

'Good! capital! Don't you can bettrr that, Ben.'

'Better guess I can, Cap'n.'

'Well, try it, my man; and, if you do you shall have a bottle of grog and a day's liberty.'

'Well, here goes, sir: Northwest by north, half north, northerly, Captain North.'

'That'll do, Ben. Yon shall have the grog and liberty.'

An Inferrence.

Z. Q., who had been enlightening the citizens of Boston upoh their bumps, is a tall specimine of human genius, and abounding in self-conceit, so much so that he sometimes mistakes impertinent interrogations for wholesome inquiries and and kake them accordingly.

Sitting in the Parker House one morning, he observed our friend Barrel quietly smoking a cigar.

"Young man," said he, in a severe tone, "don't you know that the mau who uses tobaco is a fool?"

"Gentle, Jemmy."

Sir James Mackintosh once invited Dr. Parr to take a ride in his gig. After going a short distance, the horse become restive.

'Gentle, Jemmy,' said the doctor.—'Don't irretate him. Always soothe your horse, Jemmy. You'll do better without me. Let me down, Jemmy."

Once on 'terra firma,' the doctors view of the case was changed.

"Now, Jemmy," continued he, in a more lively tone, "touch him up. Never let a horse horse get the better of you.—Touch him up, conquer him, don't spare him, Jemmy; and now I'll leave you to manage him yourself: I'll walk back!"

An Anecdote of a Fat Man.

Reade, peruse the following "good un:" "Bridget," said a lady in the city of Gotham one morning as she was reconnoitering in her kitchen, "what a quantity of soap grease you have got here. We can get plenty of soap for it and we must exchange it for some. Watch for the fat man, and when he comes along, tell him that I want to speak to him."

"Yes mum," said Bridget.

All that morning, Bridget, between each wisk of her disd cloth, kept a bright look-out of the kitchen window, and no moving creature escaped her watchful gaze. At last her industry was about to be rewarded; down the street came a large portly gentleman, flourishing a cane, and looking the very picture of good humor. Sure there's the fat mag now, thought Bridget—and when he was in front of the house, out she flew and informed him that her Mistress wished to speak to him.

"Speak to me my good girl?" replied the old gentleman.

"Yes sir, wants to spake to you, and says would you be good enough to walk in, sir."

This request, so direct, was not to be refused: so in a state of some wonderment, up the steps went the gentleman, and up stairs went Bridget, and knocking at the mistress' door, put her head in and exclaimed:

"Fat gentleman in the parlor, mum." So saying, she instantly withdrew to the lower regions.

"In the parlor," thought the lady. "What can it mean? Bridget must of blundered," but down to the parlor she went, and up rose our fat friend, with his blandest smile, and most gracefully bowed.

"Your servant informed me, madame, that you would like to speak to me—at your service, madam."

The mortified mistress saw the state of the case immediately, and a smile wreathed itself about her mouth in spite of herself as she said: "Will you pardon the terrible blunder of a raw Irish girl, my dear sir? I told hor to call in the fat man to take away the soap grease, when she saw him, and she has made the mistake you see."

The jolly fat man leaned back in his chair, and laughed such a hearty ha! ha! ha! as never comes from any of your lean gentry.

"No apologies needed, madam," said he; "It is decidedly the best joke of the season. Ha! ha! ha! so she took me for the soap grease man did she? It will keep me laughing for a month. Such a good joke!"

And all up the street and round the corner was heard the merry ha! ha! of the old gentleman, as he brought down his cane, every now and then, and exclaimed 'such a good joke.'

How Soldiers Bury.

There is, of course, no parade made in the putting away of our dead, but everything is done 'decently and in order.' A plain coffin is procured, and the deceased placed in it, prepared as decently for his eternal sleep as his habiliments will allow. In the coffin with him is put a bottle and tightly corked, and within it is a scrap of paper telling his name, rank, company and regiment, and date and cause of his death. Every division hospital has its plat of ground for burial purposes, and in this the wornout soldier is put to rest. The ceremony is always simple, always brief, but always touching, for around the grave are always gathered some few friends, and no matter how few, to them is read by the chaptain some of those terse passages which make up the Great Book. For them and for him, who is gone, a prayer is said, and then the earth reverently takes him to its bosom.

The practice of burying with the deceased the bottle containing information priceless to his surviving friends has grown into habitual usage at the third division Fifth Corps hospital, presided over by Dr. Reamer, and I am informed is fast becoming universal in the army. In addition to this precaution, a headboard is always pleced at the grave, giving the same footer, and a recent excellent order from General Meade has prescriped the minutæ of burial, all the provisions tending to inculcate respect for the dead, and consideration for the survivors, by giving the latter every possible facility for future identification.—Letter from the Army of the Potomac.

The Wise Men of Helbon.

Once upon a time the inhabitans of Helbon declared themselves independent, and were going to establish a government of their own, but found themselves unable to carry out their intention, because there were not men enough in the place to fill all the public offices. Another time, it is said, the good folks of Helbon wished to drag a little on one side a mountain which kept the midday sun from their village. With this object, they tied a rope to a large oak tree growing on the mountain, and pulled at it till the rope broke, and gave many of them so severe a fall, that they were content to postpone the removal of the mountain till some more fitting opportunity. On another occasion, when there was a total eclipse of the moon, the inhabitants of Heloon took it into their heads that the people of a neighboring village had stolen that planet. Accordingly, they all turned out armed against their neighbors, to force them to give them back their moon; but, before they had quite reached the village, the eclipse was over, and the moon re-appeard in full splendor. On this they returned home in triumph, boasting that their neighbors had given them back their moon for fear of them. A native of Helbon was once driving to Damascus a donkey, laden with wood for sale: when, the load being too heavy for the poor animal, he considerately took it off, and put it on his own shoulders; and then, mounting the donkey, he rode on it into Damascus. Another of these Syrian Gothamites, who wanted to purchase a cradle for his child, measured the length of it with his two hands, and so went to Damascus, keeping his hands stretched out at the exact distance from one another. In passing through the crowded streets, first one arm and then the other got knocked out of its place by the passers by, so that the good man lost his measure. On this he hurried back home, and tied between his outstretched hands a stick the exact length of the cradle, and thus succeeded in reaching the carpenter's shop, and giving him the correct measure. A boy once thrust his hand into a narrow-necked pitcher containing walnuts, and, having filled his hand with them, was unable to draw it out again. He cried very bitterly; the whole village assembled to deliberate on what was best to be done, and the wise-men of the village gave it as their opinion that the boy's hand must be cut off; when, fortunately, a stranger, who happened to be passing by, freed the boy from the danger he was in, by telling him to let go the walnuts, and so draw his hand out of the pitcher empty, as he had put it in.

Joke on a Contractor.

A Baltimore friend relates the following good one:

Mr. Jones, a contractor, was delivering hay subject to government inspection. As every every bale was weighed, Mr. Jones soon found out that each bale fell short about five pounds; so he placed himself opposite to the weigher, and, putting his foot on each bale as it was placed on the scale, pressed down until he tho't he got the required weight. He was surprised, after the hay was delivered, to find that it fell short considerable, but was enlightened by a story the inspector told of a little circumstance that happened in "York State." He said a contractor was delivering hay, and, finding it did not hold out in weight, placed himself at the opposite side of the bale from the weigher, and, placing his foot on each bale as it rested on the scale for weighing pressed down three pounds. The weigher, seeing the game, put his foot under the bale, and pressed up six. The contractor turned the color of a beet, and commenced talking about Stonewall Jackson; but he soon broke down, and left.

☞ Even the business mind may not be a stranger to those moments of repose when the clock of time clicks drowsily behind the door, and trifles become the amusements of the wise and great.

☞ Some persons are not suspected of being rascals because they are known to be. They are not above suspicion, but below it.

☞ One of my neighbors died some few days ago; and the landlord allowed he died in rather bad time, for, if he had expired before the first of the month, he could have rented the house to better advantage. That landlord didn't strike ile, did he? I guess, when he dies, he will know how it seems to live in the basement.

The Town Meetings.

On Monday next the Annual Town Meetings for this County are to be held, and we wish to add a few words of caution and admonition in regard to them. The immense amount of new and important business connected with Town and County affairs, created by the war, gives additional importance to most of these offices, and renders the selection of the best men to fill them more essential than ever. The interests of the people are so much affected, for better or worse, by the action of the Supervisors, that no words are necessary to point out the importance of electing capable men—men of experience, integrity and sound judgement—men who "know the ropes;" yet a clear-headed, quick-witted man, with brains behind his eyes, even if he have no experience in County Legislation, makes a better officer than a nullard or trickster, whose experience is his only recommendation. The canvass has generally commenced so early, and people are so fully alive to their own interests, that we doubt not one of the best men in each Town will be chosen.

Civil and Military.

There is a very erroneous opinion entertained by some people about the status of a drafted man in his relation to civil and military law. It is said by some—and we find that the opinion is entertained by many—that the moment a man is drafted he is absolved from civil obligations or restraint and is subject only to military authority. This, we think, is a grave error, and leads to wide liberties. Because a man has had a notice served upon him that he has been drafted into the military service of United States is no proof whatever that he is a soldier. There are some qualifications attached to the law requiring him to appear; in short, if he is physically qualified in the strict interpretation of the law for the military service of the United States, he then is sworn into said service. Otherwise he is discharged and is and always has been subject to civil authority. The law contemplates this, and does not transfer him by the mere act of drawing his name or serving the notice to the position of a soldier from that of a citizen; to be re-transferred if the law be not fulfilled, and thus during the interim, be subject to neither military nor civil authority.

Again, military rule takes the place of civil rule only when the latter is subverted or overpowered by mob or violent uprising of the masses in a maddened career, and is for the sole purpose of re-establishing the civil dominion. When this is completed the military power subsides and its sway is at an end, when the civil code steps in and reigns supreme. Thus, for a citizen to be beyond the control of civil government and away from the reach of ordinary law, the district or precinct wherein he resides, must be in rebellion or open revolt against the ordinary workings of power. We think that upon the thoughtful contemplation of this subject, the reader will come to this conclusion.

KENNEDY, THE REBEL SPY.—Of Kennedy, the rebel spy, who was to be hung at Fort Lafayette on Saturday, the N. Y. Tribune says:

"On Sunday night the officer of the day detected Kennedy in an attempt to escape. He had, after heating straight his red-hot poker, made a number of holes about the latch of the door which leads into the parade ground. It is supposed that his plan was to remove the lock, open the door, and confront the sentry who paces up and down in front of it. With his poker he could easily kill him, and, as the meat house shut out the view from the guard house, he could have donned the soldiers' outer clothing, and taken his chance at escape. The risk would even then be great, as he would be compelled to pass the guard house filled with soldiers, open and pass the salle porte, elude the vigilance of two outside sentries, and plunge into a rapid current of icy water. Of course he was willing to take all the chances, but he was caught in the act and prevented.

IMPORTANT TO MEN LIABLE TO DRAFT.—The following is a copy of the twenty-third section of the amended enrollment act. It will be found important to those liable to the draft:

SECTION 23. And be it further enacted, That any person or persons enrolled in any sub-district may, after notice of a draft, and before the same shall have taken place, cause to be mustered in the service of the United States, such number of recruits, not subject to draft, as they may deem expedient, which recruits shall stand to the credit of the persons thus causing them to be mustered in, and shall be taken as substitutes for such person, or so many of them as may be drafted, to the extent of the number of such recruits, and in the order designated by the principals at the time such recruits are thus as aforesaid mustered in

☞ The report that the Government had recently lost $2,000,000 worth of stores at Eastport, Miss., by a flood, is officially contradicted. The loss was but trifling.

MR. EDITOR:—

Since the recent articles in the Herald on RUM SELLING, pro and con, I have had a conference with your correspondent, in which HE SAYS HE HOLDS THE SAME VIEWS WITH MYSELF, RESPECTING THE TRAFIC IN INTOXICATING LIQUORS. To other parts of his article I make no reply—as they sufficiently answer themselves,—and the position which he now assumes vindicates what has been said respecting the trafic.

A SABBATH SCHOOL TEACHER.

BURIAL OF A REBEL OFFICER.—On Saturday last Trinity Church, N. Y., was crowded by a most respectible congregation—the majority being ladies—assembled to witness the funeral ceremonies of the rebel General Whiting, who died at Governor's Island on Friday. The mother, sister, and brother together with a large number of the personal friends of the deceased were present. Among the last named was the rebel General Beale, agent for supplying the Southern soldiers with blankets in exchange for cotton; and five paroled Confederate officers who acted as pall bearers. There were also several of our own officers in uniform. The body, dressed in a shroud with black silk necktie, was enclosed in a handsome rosewood coffin, on the silver plate of which was the following: "Major General W. C. H. Whiting C. S. A.—Born in the State of Mississippi. Died March 10th, 1865, aged 40 years, 11 months, and 18 days." On the coffin was placed by ladies two crosses of white camelias, and while it was being bourne up the aisle a young lady laid some white flowers, and a white ribon on it. The impressive funeral cerimonies of the Protestant Episcopal Church were read by the rector, Rev. Dr. Dix, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Ogilby, after which the remains were removed to Greenwood Cemetery where they will be kept until an opportunity to send them to the South is offered. Many present remarked upon the contrast between our burial of a rebel and the manner in which they treat our soldiers, dead or alive.

NOTICE TO THE FRIENDS OF PAROLED AND EXCHANGED PRISONERS.—In view of the great anxiety felt throughout the country for the welfare of our prisoners now arriving at Annapolis, Maryland, Miss Clara Barton, by permission of Gen. Hitchcock, Commissioner of Exchange with the sanction of the President, has kidnly undertaken to furnish information by corrspondence, in regard to the condition of our returned soldiers, and especially those in the hospitals at Annapolis; and, so far as it may be possible, to learn the facts connected with all Invalids and with those who have died in prison and elsewhere. All letters addressed to Miss Clara Barton, Anapolis Maryland, will meet with prompt attention. Editors throughout the country are requested to copy this notice.

The latest personal anecdote of General Grant is told of a recent journey of his in a railroad train, where he displayed, as usual, none of his insignia of his rank. A youthful book peddler traversed the cars, crying "Life of General Grant." A mischievous aide pointed to the General's seat, suggesting to the boy "that man might like a copy." Gen. Grant turned over the pages of the book, and casually asked, "Who is all this about?" The boy, giving him a look of indignation and disgust, replied, "You must be a darned greeny not to know General Grant.

EMIGRATION TO MISSOURI.—The passage of the Emancipation ordinance has been followed by a rush of Eastern capitalists and others to the State of Miscouri. Heavy purchases of lands have been made, and a revival of emigration on a large scale is confidently predicted. It is stated that in Clark and Adar counties more lands has changed hands in the last three months than in the previous four years. Trains and hotels are becoming crowded, and, altogether, Missouri appears to be entering upon a new career of prosperity.

☞ The Richmond Examiner of March 21st says: The conscription of negroes in Richmond and Petersburg is carried on with difficulty Guards are posted at every avenue of escape and a camp of instruction is established at Belle Island, where the colored soldiers are kept under strict surveillance; but many get away in spite of all precaution. There is a great panic among the blacks, and much reluctance among whites upon the question of arming the slaves.

☞ The Ohio Farmer says it is informed that certain parties residing in Michigan, are procuring sheep and coloring them with a composition of lampblack, tallow and gum arabic, and perhaps with other materials, and driving them into Ohio, and selling them at most fabulous prices—and that a large sum has already been realized by this outrageous swindle.

SWORD TOURNAMENT.—A grand sword tournament is in contemplation at the headquarters of the army of the Potomic, for the purpose of deciding who is the best swordsman in the armies of the U. S. A prize of $1,000 is being raised. The first premium for the champion swordsman will be a sword worth $250. The second will be a purse of $300; the third a purse of $200. The affair promises to be very interesting.

☞ The Pacific Montnly is rapidly gaining ground with the public, affording a new style of literature, deviating from the old trodden paths of general magizine publications, and officers inducements to the public equaled by none. In fact, we think the best way to go into modern jewelry trade, with a rich and varied stock, is to subscribe liberally for the Pacific Monthly—for every subscription brings with it avalsable present.

The News.

We have for sometime been aware that the 4th Corps, o Thomas' Army, had gone through Chatanooga to Knoxville, in anticipation of important events in that region. It is now said the design is for Gen. Stanley, with this Corps, numbering 15 to 18,000, in co-operation with 6,000 Cavalry under Stoneman or Gillem, to open a campaign in Southwestern Virginia, both offensive and defensive in its character and object. By this means Lee will be effectually precluded from escape into Tennessee or Kentucky, which he undoubtedly would seek to accomplish, if the way were open to him; and at the same time the elbow room of the rebels will be materially circumscribed. This movement is undoubtedly a part of Grant's grand spring campaign, by which the last vitals of the rebellion are to be crushed out. In other words, it is one of the coils of the great loyal anaconda.

Gen. Grant reports our total loss in the fight at Fort Steadman on Saturday morning, at 119 killed and 1,102 wounded, and the number of prisoners captured from the enemy at 2,877. There is no doubt that this movement of Lee was induced by the belief that Grant had so weakened his right to strengthen his left and reinforce Sheridan, as to open the way for an easy passage into our lines and perhaps to the immense stores at City Point. He very soon discovered his grevious error. Gen. Grant was not "caught napping."

It turned out that Lee was found in just the condition that he thought to catch Grant—having weaked his own right to concentrate a large force on Fort Steadman. Gen. Grant was sagacious enough to apprehend such a state of facts and prompt to take advantage of it, as the result of his advance from his left shows. His lines were materially advanced and held.

Saturday's fighting around Petersburg, has shown that the starch has been taken out of Lee's men. They don't fight with the will that has heretofore characterized them. On the contrary, they appear quite willing to become prisoners and be relieved from all further contest in a cause no longer holding out to them the slightest hope of success. The same fact has shown itself in nearly all the fighting since Sherman's arrival at Savannah and Thomas' glorious victories over Hood.

"Druid," the Baltimore correspondent of the WORLD, now gives it up and says that in a few weeks the Southern Confederacy will be numbered among the things of the past, and the rebels will have neither army, capital nor government. He says the news from rebeldom has produced a deeper feeling of depression among Southern sympathisers than any previous events of the war. The Southern army is only 92,000 strong, and no more men can be raised. Richmond will be held as long as the rebel army consists of 80,000 men. One-half of the Southern army have deserted since the fall of Wilmington and Charleston. The ruin of their railroads renders it impossible for the South to make use of its resources. The closing of the last port cuts off all supplies from England. They have few munitions of war, and limited and reduced means of manufacturing them, and all hopes of foreign intervention have been finally dispelled.

Advices from Chihuaga, Mexico, to the 3d of February, of semi-official character, report a French defeat: The Government has just received authoritative intelligence that Gen. Covena, after having caused the French force which marched from Durango to Mazatlan, through Sierra Nevada, some loss, defeated it entirely at the village of Veranos.—Later advices state that the French forces at Durango advanced to Chichusola, and on the 29th of January were at Rio Florida. Next day, however, they returned to Durango, the Mexicans being prepared to receive them. General Logue had left Chihuahua with all the available force there, to meet the French.

It is reported that Gen. Sherman said at Fayetteville, that if he formed a junction with Scofield and Terry at Goldsboro without much trouble, the game of the rebels would be up, as he would then be strong enough to meet anything they could bring against him.

It is said Johnston had his entire force at Smithfield, confronting Sherman, when the latter drove the rebel commander towards Raleigh. Johnston must make good time, fight or surrender.—[TOLEDO BLADE.

☞ The President has ordered Brevet Major General Anderson, to raise over Fort Sumter, at noon, on the 14th of Apr. the same U. S. flag that floated over it at the time of the rebel assault, and that it be saluted with 100 guns from Sumter and from every fort and rebel battery that then fired upon Sumter. Also that suitable military serimonies be performed under direction of Major Gen. W. T. Sherman, whose operations compelled the evacuation of Charleston, or in his absence, by Gen. Gilmore; and also that the naval forces at Charleston be directed to participate in the serimonies, and Rev. H. Ward Beecher be invited to delver an address on the occasion.

From the Potomac Army.

The number of prisoners brought in by the 9th corps was reported yesterday correctly at 1800. The loss in this corps is not less than 600, the official figures being not yet ascertained. After the fighting ceased at this point of the line, it was thought that the attack might have been made to cover a more important move on the left, and consequently the entire army was put under arms, to be ready for any emergency. Gen. Humphry was ordered to make a reconnoissance, develop the enemy's strength, and ascertain their movements. This was done shortly before noon, and the picket line was driven in or captured, for a considerable distance. Our men continued to advance, and part of the division marched and took possession of a second line of works, but the rebels soon after charged the latter in a line of battle and forced our men back to the line first taken. This was principally caused by the fire from the two batteries which they were enabled to throw along this advanced portion from this line.

Until 4 P. M. the fighting was not very severe, the enemy having retired to their works leaving a stong picket line to hold their pits. At this hour the signal to fall in was sounding along the rebel line, and soon after a heavy column appeared, and forming a line of battle, advanced in charge on Gen. Miles' Division, who soon drove them back in disorder, with heavy loss. Twice they repeated the attempt to break through the line, and failing in this they endeavored to turn the right flank, but Gen Miles was as ready to receive them here as at other points, and they finally fell back and disappeared leaving their dead and many wounded on the field. The roar of musketry on this ground was as severe and continuous for two or three hours as ever heard, and was not supassed even by that heard at the Wilderness. Gen. Miles and his officers and men, particularly the Irish Brigade, received the highest praises for their gallant behaviour on this occasion. The 3d Division, under Gen. Mott, held the center of the line, and repulsed each attack of the enemy with spirit, although the contest here was not so desperate as in front of the first Division held the entrenched left off the line toward Hatcher's Run, the brigade commanded by Gen. Smyth only being engaged. This advanced at the same time with the rest of the line, and took part of the enemy's works and a number of prisoners. The losses in the 2d corps, as far as can be ascertained, are about 6,000, with probability 100 missing.

The number of prisoners in our hands as the result of the day's operations, is 2,271 enlisted men and 88 officers, beside about 50 wounded in our hospitals. An order is being issued to the army congratulating the officers and men on the splendid victory achieved over the enemies of the country, and thanking them for their behavior on the occasion. To-day a good deal of picket firing has been kept up along the lines, but without any casualties as far as known. About 25 deserters came in this morning, bringing, however, no news.

The engagement between the 6th corps and the enemy was not severe, and at other points of the line where the 2d and 9th corps fought, the object of the attack was to feel the enemy, and ascertain if the works were occupied in force. Some of the troops finally reached the rebel pickets and took about 547 prisoners, driving the remainder back to the main works. The enemy's batteries were pretty active here and did a good deal of mischief. Firing was kept up till dark, with attempts on their part to regain the lost ground.

STEPHEN GIRARD'S RULE.—"I have always considered advertising, liberally and long, to be the great medium of success in business, and prelude to wealth. And I have made it an invariable rule, too, to advertise in the dullest times, as well as the busiest, long experience having taught me that money thus spent is well laid out, as by keeping my business continually before the public, it has secured me many sales that I would otherwise have lost."

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit), that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,
WOOLSTON COMFORT.

By authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned has assumed the General Subscription Agency for the sale of United States Treasury Notes, bearing seven and three tenths per cent. interest, per annum, known as the

SEVEN-THIRTY LOAN.

These Notes are issued under date of August 15th, 1864, and are payable three years from that time, in currency, or are convertible at the option of the holder into

U. S. 5-20 Six per cent. GOLD-BEARING BONDS.

These bonds are now worth a premium of nine per cent., including gold interest from Nov., which makes the actual profit on the 7-30 loan, at current rates, including interest, about ten per cent. per annum, besides its exemption from State and municipal taxation, which adds from one to three per cent. more, according to the rate levied on their property. The interest is payable semi-annually by coupons attached to each note, which can be cut off and sent to any bank or banker.

The interest amounts to

One cent	per day	on a	$50 note.
Two cents	"	"	$100 "
Ten "	"	"	$500 "
20 "	"	"	$1000 "
$1	"	"	$5000 "

Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions. This is

The Only Loan in Market,

now offered by the Government, and it is confidently expected that its superior advantage will make it the Great Popular Loan of the People.

Less than $200,000,000 remain unsold, which will probably be disposed of within the next 60 or 90 days, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans.

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscription at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

JAY COOKE,
SUBSCRIPTION AGENT, Philadelphia.

Subscriptions will be received by the First National Bank of Ypsilanti, and the First National Bank of Detroit.

THE NINTH NATIONAL BANK
OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.
Capital, $1,000,000, Paid in,
FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES, AND SPECIAL AGENT FOR JAY COOKE, SUBSCRIPTION AGENT,

Will deliver 7-30 Notes, Free of Charge, by express, in all parts of the country, and receive in payment Checks on New York, Philadelphia, and Boston, current bills, and all five per cent. interest notes, with interest to date of subscription. Orders sent by mail will be promptly filled.

This Bank receives the accounts of Banks and bankers on favorable terms; also of individuals keeping New York accounts.

J. U. ORVIS, President.
J. T. AILL, Cashier.

☞ No advertisement considered less than one square. Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance. Advertisements unaccompanied with directions for the number of insertions, will be continued until ordered out, and charged accordingly. Business cards of five lines, or less, inserted at $8,50 per year.

☞ Work neatly executed at this office. Charges reasonable.

☞ Small Pox has made its appearance in Hudson.

☞ The Lansing and Jackson R. R. Company has determined to commence laying the rails as soon as the iron can be purchased.

☞ We would say to those wishing anything done in the barber line to call on John Brown, at his shop over Bidwell's Store. He keeps his tools in good order.

☞ A. Hood has purchased the stock of Boots, Shoes and Gents' Furnishing Goods formerly belonging to A. Hanford, and is now offering some rare inducements.

☞ We were shown some of the finest samples of Sewed and Pegged Boots, at E. H. Hoag's, that we ever remember of having the pleasure of gazing upon.

☞ Rev. Mr. Ray, of Chicago, will preach at the Episcopal Church in this village, on Sunday next, at the usual hour—morning and evening.

☞ G. T. Ketcham has just received a fine lot of Plain and Colored Lithographs and Steel Engravings, which are offered at reduced prices. Call and see them.

☞ J. D. Robbins says he won't be beat on Wall Paper. He has one of the largest stocks, on hand, in town, and a large bill on the road; also a very fine assortment of Window Shades.

☞ M. Wright has just received from New York a large and well selected stock of Groceries, Medicines, Paints and Oils He has the cheapest Sugars and the best Teas, in town. Also a large stock of Wall Paper, of the latest patterns. Drop in and see them.

Mrs. O. McCoy has now on exhibition one of the largest and best assortments Bonnets, Hats, Ribbons, &c., ever brought to this place. Follow the crowd of ladies and you will be lead directly to her establishment—for they all go there.

☞ An advertisement of one of the oil companies is headed, "Is the earth a huge whale?" We cannot answer that question; but one thing we can confidently state—that those who take shares in some of the oil companies will see a great deal of "b ubber."

☞ Spring has come, and with it—warm weather! Now then has come the season to clean up, pick up, and hoe out, in front of residences and in the rear of blocks. Do not breathe the air arising from the accumulation of much bad material during the winter months, but fix it as it should be—neat and cleanly.

The Draft in Ridgeway.

The following are the names of the men drafted in the town of Ridgeway. 104 names were enrolled; 6 to be furnished; 12 drawn:

Geo A. Hunley,	James Linn,
Daniel Miller,	Geo W Pilbeam,
John Pool,	James Vasburg,
Henry F Coats,	James I Ran,
George Biggs,	George Dakyin,
Robert Oaks,	Sylvanus B Curtis.

☞ The Quarterly Meeting of the Methodist E. Church in this village will be held next Saturday and Sabbath. Services on Saturday at 2 o'clock P. M. and at 7 1-2 in the evening. The Monthly S. School Concert will take place on Sabbath at 2 o'clock P. M. All are invited to attend.

☞ The Jackson Daily Citizen is now received at Ketcham's News Depot, at 7:08 A. M. It contains all the news found in the Detroit Dailies, and it is received 11 hours in advance of them. Those who wish a morning paper should subscribe for it. Ketcham is sole agent for this section of the country.

☞ Home Amusements at Odd Fellow's Hall on Friday Evening, March 31st. We understand that the young people have devoted considerable time in preparing for this exhibition, and intend to give an exhibition that will suit everybody. Remember that this exhibition is for the benefit of the "Soldiers' Aid Society." Let there be a general turn out.

☞ They do say that P. N. Curtis is selling Groceries a little cheaper than any body else in town. We doubted it a little at first, but after investigating the matter, we became convinced that this is a fact. His Sugars have bought since the great fall of goods. He is aware that goods are rapidly falling, and he is bound to keep up with the decline. Be sure and try him. Not to be undersold is his motto.

Exhibition.

The Annual Exhibition to be given by the students of the Union School, came off according to notice, last Friday evening. The exercises lasted about two hours, and, judging from the close attention paid by the audience, interest in the exercises did not flag during the whole evening. Owing to the unusually large fee taken at the door, all those who usually attend and disturb such entertainments, were absent, and though the Hall was well filled we think not a word was lost from inability to hear.

The first speaker, Geo. T. Pencil, of Tecumseh, delivered a good selection, on "The Strength of the Union." This was George's first appearance before an audience, and a very creditable one. He has many of the elements necessary for a good speaker.

Thomas O. Perry, of Franklin, for some reason, failed to appear during the evening.

"The Battle of Pittsburg Landing," by Henry T. Wisner, was a very good declamation. There is some defect in his vocal organs, which prevents him from producing clearly some sounds, and which, of course, to some extent, detracts from his oratory. Yet his speech was among the good ones of the evening.

"The Power of Early Impressions," was well discussed, in an essay by Miss Addie A. Ford, showing the order and developement of our ideas, and the importance of preserving the mind pure in childhood, till the intellect gain maturity, and, hence, strength to resist evil. The essay was good and well read.

Mr. Augustine C. Wright's manner upon the stage is easy and natural, but he needs to enter a little more into the spirit of his piece to give it its full effect.

Marcus S. Cook, of Dexter, recited a poem, entitled "Old Times and Men," of a humorous character, very well. His manner and gesticulation were good, but he should be careful to avoid speaking in a monotone.

"The End is Coming," by Charles A. Slayton, was one of the good declamations of the evening. Manner and enunciation were both good.

"Passports," an essay by Miss Fannie E. Sherman, was next, going to show that we all carry about with us, in our faces, voice, manner, and even in our walk, evidences of character; that these are our passports by which we are judged socially and morally. The essay was a good one, containing good thoughts, and those well expressed, and was well received.

Chas. A. Cook, of Raisin, has a calm, deliberate style of oratory, and always makes a good impression. His declamation, "War with England," was very good.

Eugene C. Norcross, of Franklin, gave us an original piece, entitled "Aaron Burr." Mr. Narcross confined himself too closely to the events of Burr's life, to give many reflections upon his character and influence. But the piece was very creditable, and secured very close attention throughout from the audience.

The next, was "A Ward's trip to Richmond," given by A. D. Stacy. It is useless to criticise or describe the manner of this speaker. It is sufficient to say he always makes a sensation, and a decided hit.

"The Forgotten State," by Miss Myra C. Gilbert, was a sparkling, humorous description of the school surroundings, i s earlier history and present condition. The puns and play upon words in which it abounded were all good and apparently appreciated.

The "Lament for Sister Caroline," was finely recited by Miss Josie M. Train.

"The Call to Duty," by Henry T. Kneeland, was perhaps the best delivered oration of the evening. Summoned to the stage, and occasionally interrupted, by the stirring call of the drum, he spoke earnestly and with well modulated voice; showing him to possess fine oratorical powers, which he should not neglect to cultivate.

"Hope," by Mr. Francis M. Bell, was an original declamation. It was an excellent composition: the thoughts were good and well expressed, showing Mr. Bell possessed of more than ordinary ability as a writer. He entered fully into the spirit of his piece in its delivery, giving to it force and power.

The last piece of the evening, was a comic dialogue, entitled "Bad Company." It was very well rendered, and caused much amusement.

The exercises were varied throughout the evening by music from the Tecumseh Silver Band, and from a quartette led by Mr. J. S. Strong.

The proceeds of the exhibition go towards the purchase of apparatus for the school. The sum realized, after deducting expense, was about thirty-five dollars.

☞ Stop in at Ward & Strickland's and see what you shall see—Goods bought for cash—Goods bought within the past ten days, during the great downfall of gold. Remember, they are sold much cheaper than those bought four to six weeks ago. Call and see them before spending your money elsewhere. Notice Bradley's Duplex Hoop Skirts, Ladies' Hats and Bonnet Ribbons that have not been sold by them before.

R. C Moore,

The leading Dry Goods merchant in Tecumseh,—he deals in Dry Goods exclusively, and keeps his stock well assorted the year round,—is now receiving his stock—bought in New York at panic prices—and is offering it at lower figures than have been known here for two years past. Look at his large and beautiful assortment of Dress Prints, Delaines—Brown and bleached, Sheetings, and Shirtings,—fancy Dress Goods, Balmoral Skirts, Towellings, Table Linens, French Flannels, Shirting Flannels, Shirting Stripes, Denims, Apron Checks,—in a word, call there for anything you want. He always sells you goods at the LOWEST MARKET VALUE—and at the lowest price that any one gets them. He sells to ALL at ONE PRICE. No Jewing on prices. Moore allows the young "bosses" to blow, swell and explode over their goods, while he keeps busy SELLING his. Mr. Anderson and Mr. Taylor are always on hand, ready and willing to show goods—hence the Ladies are specially invited to call and look at his stock. It matters not whether you wish to buy or merely look at Goods, that are freely and willingly exhibited to all; for this is the only way for customers to get posted on values, viz., by asking for the prices.

N. B. A very handsome line of Ladies' Dress Buttons, and Bugle and Bead trimmings just received.

☞ There were sent from Tecumseh to the Freedmen and Refugees' Fair at Detroit, fifteen barrels and a half of provisions, which were very gratefully received, and acknowledged through the Detroit papers. Fifty-eight dollars and sixty cents, in money, was paid over to Mr. Campbell, of the firm of Campbell & Linn, which was al o acknowledged in the Detroit papers. There were, besides, about forty dollars worth of fancy and useful articles. C. BILLS, Sec. F.A.S.

Boy Lost.

Jas. Henry Koon, aged about 12 years, left his home, in Hudson, on or about the 23d ult., since which time no clue has been had of his whereabouts. He is about the usual size of boys of his age, light complexion, face a little freckled, brown hair and eyes, large scar on the thumb and three fingers on his left hand, had on dark pants, gray coat, and soldiers' cap. His father is a prisoner of war. Any information concerning his whereabouts will be thankfully received by his mother, who will pay all expense incurred in keeping him until she can come or send for him. Address, Mrs. Prudence A. Koon, Hudson, Mich.

P. S. Our State exchanges will confer a great favor upon Mrs. K., who is in moderate circumstances, by giving this a place in their columns.

☞ The following are the candidates nominated at the Republican Caucus, held in Clinton yesterday:

For Supervisor—Henry C. Conkling.
" Town Clerk—J. C. Satterthwaite.
" Treasurer—F. W. Savage.
" S. Inspector—Cyrus B. Thomas.
" High. Com.—Walter V. Wimple.
" Constables—Chas. H. Conklin,
Linus F. Stevens,
J. W. Stevens,
J. D. Sholes.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER
and
BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled
for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work Like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half-dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

THESE Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of over twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by their use gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from torpid liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of these Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

They strengthen and invigorate the system.
They are unequaled for general debility.
They are a sure cure for dyspepsia.
They give a good and healthy appetite.
They assist digestion.
They are the best stimulant in existence.
They are a preventive of Fever and Ague.
They relieve constipation.
They cure Nervous Headache:
They are perfetly pure and palatable

Aged persons and delicate females will find they can save large doctor's bills by the use of these Bitters.

TO THE RETAIL TRADE.

The present high prices have induced all kinds of experiments, and every kind of substance has been tried as a substitute for coffee. The vilest trash, under Snowy and Taxing names has been thrust upon the public. Bogus and Spurious Coffees, whose chief merits are found in their Labels and Wrappers, have proved alike injurious to the consumer as also to the retailer. These Villainous Compounds have about had their day, and the public taste is fast returning to its first love, and nothing less than a Good, Pleasant and Wholesome Cup of Coffee can prove Satisfactory.

There is a great and increasing demand for Good Coffee, and our design is to supply this demand.

Prospectus of the Jackson Daily Citizen.

On or about the 27th of March, the proprietors of the Jackson Weekly CITIZEN propose to issue a FIRST CLASS DAILY PAPER, to fill a pressing want, which has long been felt in Central Michigan, now one of the most populous and wealthy sections of the State.

We propose to issue a Journal, respectable in size, containing the full Telegraphic Reports of the Associated Press, the latest Markets, and all the General News of the day. Particular attention will be paid to Local and State News, and everything that goes to make a Daily Paper interesting to all. In fact, we propose to make a LIVE DAILY PAPER, fully up to the times, dealing fairly and squarely with all the issues of the day, and earnestly advocating those views and principles, which we believe will be for the best interests of our common country. While it will be the organ of no man or clique, it will support the administration in a vigorous prosecution of the war, until the old flag again floats over every every foot of the National domain, and until the last vestige of armed rebellion is swept from the land.

With a Journal of this character, looking closely after, and advancing the INTERESTS of this LOCALITY, not violently partizan, but firm, independent and manly in tone, we appeal to all classes of our citizens for a prompt, hearty and generous support.

We shall issue a MORNING PAPER, that will reach, at least, six of our interior counties in advance of any other Daily.—With a new POWER PRESS, operated by STEAM, and new type, we expect to make a handsome sheet, fresh and attractive in appearance, and as a NEWSPAPER worthy the confidence and patronage of all.

Our Weekly will be changed to a quarto in form, and will contain 48 column of matter, 20 of which will enhance the value of the Daily, selected with the utmost care.

With these improvements the weekly Citizen will be as valuable in any household, and will contain as much interesting matter as any of the Eastern weeklies.

The Daily Citizen will reach Tecumseh at 8 o'clock A. M., six or seven hours in advance of any other paper, and will contain the latest war news. Mr. G T. Ketcham will have charge of our circulation in Tecumseh. Subscribers are requested to hand in their names early.

Reflections.

Rough and wild, the past four years,
Oceans ebb from woman's tears;
Orphans mourn, whose sires have died,
And sons sleep with them, side by side.
Mothers bent with tearful eye,
Trembling, ask the reason why,
Of sages who are standing near,
This once bright world—why now so drear?
Lovers complain the birds don't sing
So sweet as when they took the ring—
As on that bright and sunny day
When spring had stepped in winter's way,
And they together, side by side,
Talked of the coming future wide.
Oh! no; their voices seem to mock
Or of some wayward fancies talk.
They are not like that sweet sweet sound
That echoed from us far around.
War can tell the reason why
Those dew-drop sounds, once sweet, now dry:
For Oh! Those many bodies cold,
That sleep in Southern graves, we're told—
Those eyes that once with glitter gleamed,
And naught could dim it clearly seemed—
Are now in death's cold fetters bound,
While Southern wild flowers blooming 'round
And then will ever, ever lay,
Until the coming judgment day,
When God shall call from near and far,
And all shall stand before his bar—
There to receive their awards just,
Which we sincerely hope and trust
Will place them far on Jordan's height,
Where glittering day exceeds the night.
They died—all soldiers, brave and true;
They died, my countrymen, for you.
And, Oh, could many with them sleep—
They'd rather far than stay and weep.

A Clever Case of Cut Out.

It is many years since I fell in love with Jane Jerusha Shriggs, the handsomest country girl by far that ever went on logs. By meadow, creek, and wood, and dell, so often we did walk, and the moonlight shone on her melting lips, and the night wind learned our talk. Jane Jerusha was all to me, for my heart was young and true, and I loved with a double and twisted love, and a love that was honest, too. I roamed all over the neighbors' farms, and I robbed the wildwood bowers, and tore my trowsers and scratched my hands, in search of choicest flowers. In all my ove I brought all these to my Jerusha Jane—but I know I shouldn't be so foolish now, if I were a boy again. A city chap then came along, all dressed up in store clothes, with a shiny hat and shiny vest and a mustash under his nose. He talked to her of singing schools (for her father owned a farm)—and she left me the country love, and took the new chap's arm. And all that night I never slept, nor could I eat next day, for I loved that girl with a fervent love that nought could drive away. I strove to win her back to me, but it was all in vain; the city chap with the harry lip, married Jeursha Jane. Then my poor heart was sick and sore until the thought struck me, that just as good fish remained, as ever was caught in the sea. So I went to the Methodist Church one night, and saw a dark brown curl peeping from under a gypsy hat, and I married that very girl. And many years have passed and gone, and I think my loss my gain; and I often bless that hairy chap that stole Jerusha Jane.

The Student's Revenge.

The fire in the wide log chimney rose and fell in unison with the storm of rain that was falling without, borne in great sheets against the cabin by the boisterous easterly wind that had found its way from the bosom of the broad Atlantic to the far wilds of the northern wilderness of Maine, and was now rocking the rude home of the logmen with its strong arms. Down the wide-mouthed chimney came fierce gusts of wind and rain, battling with the red flames; and sometimes it would seem as though they would gain the victory, for the fire would sink low as if dying out. At such times the storm would give a great shout, as if in triumph; and, when the glowing embers heard it, it would seem to rouse their courage, and they would resume the battle for a while with renewed vigor, only to sink down lower again as if unable to combat with its strong, vigorous opponent.

There was no doubt but what, if the fire had been left unaided, it would have had far the worst of the battle: but it had a faithful ally in the shape of a little bent-up old man, with hair as white as the snow; who no sooner saw that it was like to get the worst of it, than he came to its aid, and piled high the dry wood that was heaped in the corner. The flames, taking heart, would spring up anew, and again join battle with its blustering opponent.

The red firelight, as it danced about the cabin, rested upon a score of rough-looking men, who all that winter had been piling up the great logs on the bank of the river that flowed but a little way from the cabin; and whose waters, miles away through the forest, mingled with the clear tide of the Penobscot. Their winter's work in the forest was over, and the rain-storm now raging without was a signal that on the morrow they would commence their arduous labors on the river, floating the logs down to the mills, that, miles away towards the ocean, were waiting with their iron teeth to devour them.

We have said that there was a score of rough-lot king men; but we shall have to exempt two, as that description will not apply to them. To be sure, their garments were as coarse and strong as were those of their companions; but they were whole and clean, and showed that as yet they were unsullied by contact with the great piles of timber without. If this would not have shown that of late they were unused to labor, their fair faces and hands, white as a woman's, would have shown this conclusively. But, without further description, we will say that for two years they had been inmates of Bowdoin College; and, being straightened in means, they had left it to gain, by manual toil, enough whereby they could finish their course of studies.

To the man who had contracted for the delivery of the timber, John and Edward Stacy had applied for work; and he, knowing them to be energetic men had employed them, and sent them, to report to his head man, Jim Chamberlain, which they had done.

For a moment Jim Chamberlain gazed with something akin to scorn at the white hands extendended towards him, and was calculating how long it would take, after they had come in contact with the handspike, for them them to bluster; but a glance at their compact forms and broad shoulders caused him to somewhat modify his opinion of their abilities; and tho somewhat sarcastic reply that he was about to make died away on his lips, and he made them a civil rejoinder, and roughly introduced them, to some of the men standing round, as their brother logmen.

Among the men, who had formed the same opinion of their abilities as Chamberlain had at the first glance, the remarks had been anything but complimentary to the young men; and more than once their cheeks had burned at some remark that they could only think was made expressly to hurt their feelings. Especially was this the case with one Sam Robson, the acknowledged bully of of the gang, and who more than once during the winter had made an enemy of every man at the camp. Several fights had taken place, but Sam was always victorious, owing to his great strength; and at last the men, finding that there was no remedy, concluded to pay no attention to his remarks, and he was allowed to abuse everybody to his heart's content without any attention being paid to it. More than once Chamberlain had been tempted to dismiss him from his employ; but the services Sam rendered had deterred him from so doing. Strong as a lion, and as feerless of danger, he was worth any two men in the gang. There was a dangerous place in the forest or river, there Sam was ever willing to go. He seemed to court danger for the purpose of showing how much braver than his companions he was. This trait in his character rendered him almost invaluable to Chamberlain, for there was hardly a day but what he went where others shrank from venturing. This, and this alone, was why Chamberlain tolerated him in the gang.

Tired of warring upon his old companions, Sam hailed the advent of the younu students with delighi; and, though the afternoon and evening of their arrival they were the butt of his jokes, uttered in the caarsest manner possible.

The evening wore away, and still the battle raged as fiercely as ever between the fire and the storm; and, had it not been for the constant exertions of the former's faithful ally, it surely must have succummed. But, with the help it received, it still fought bravely with its antagonist.

"We shall have water enough by morning, boys, if it rains like this all night. Hark! how the rain comes down!" and then the men held their breath to listen to the wild tempest that was raging like a demon through the forest; causing the great trees to sway and groan and sending more than one of them with a thundering crash to the ground, overborne by the fierce wind that roared like an angry fiend.

"I hope that there will be enough to carry the logs smoothly over Dead-Man's Falls," said one of the men. "I always dread a jam there ever since Billy Brown went over them never to be seen agin."

"Is working there very dangerous?" inquired John Stacy of the man who had made the remark.

"Dangerous for schoolboys and old wamen?" exclaimed Robson, before the one addressed could open his mouth to make a civil answer. "Say, Bub; why hadn't you brought your books along with you? You might get a chance to study a bit now and then!" and he gave a coarse laugh at what he had concidered his witticism.

A flush of anger mounted to the forehead of the young man at this insulting speech. For a moment he hesitated to reply, at first not deigning to answer him: but, observing all eyes bent upon him, he quietly said,—

"I almost wish I had, for perhaps I might have learned some of your manners becoming to gentlemen".

With a horrid oath, Robson sprang to his feet.

"Did you intend that for me?" he exclaimed his voice hoarse with anger.

"It the coat fits, put it on," said the young man quietly.

A loud laugh at the expense of the buily rang through the camp, and then all was silent as death. Never before had Robson been answered like that, and they knew that a fight was inevitable unless the young mar retracted the words he had uttered. Most of the men not knowing of what the stuuent was made of, expected him at once to make a humble apology.

The range of Robson was terrible as he sprang to his feet, and confronted Stacy.

"Eat your words, or I'll mash your head to a jelly," he cried, clenching his huge fist, and striking it menacingly towards the young man, who had risen coldly to his feet, with no sign of anger upon his countenance, except a bright spot burning upon either cheek.

"Never, sir!" replied the young student firmly, as he placed himself in an titude for defence.

"Then, d—n you, take that!" and he aimed a blow at the head of the young man, with such force, that, had it descended where he had intended it should, it would have felled him to the earth.

By a dexterious movement, John Stacy evaded the blow; and, while the bully was off his guard by his unsuccessful attack, he dealt him a blow between the eyes that sent him realing almost into the fire.

For a moment the logmen were silent with astonishment; and then they burst into a shout that must have astonished even the storm raging without, for it paused as if to listen to what was going on within the cabin. Never before had the logmen seen science placed against brute strength.

Though Robinson had been unable to keep his feet, from the force of the blow, he was not stunned in the least, and the next moment was upon his feet ready to renew the battle; but at that moment the sound of bells were heard outside the cabin, and Chamberlain exclaimed,—

"No more of this now, men. You can finish the quarrel some other time.—The owners of the timber have come, and, while they are with us, I want you to behave yourselves."

The combatants resumed their seats, though Robson did it unwillingly; and a moment afterwards two men, the owners of the timber, entered the cabin, while the teamsters went out to care for their horses.

Of course nothing was said of the quarrel that evening, nor during the next day, as their visitors did not leave until afternoon. The storm had blown away, and all hands were rolling the logs into the river, which was just at the right height for driving; but it was understood that the fight would be had out that night when the day's work was over.

Down the river some four miles was a place known as Dead Man's Falls, where the waters dashed over a precipice fifty feet in height. It had derived its name from the fact, that, in three successive drives, a man had lost his life there; and it was no wonder that the spot came into ill-repute among the log men. From the brow of the falls on either side rose a jagged cliff to the height of thirty feet; and the bed of the river was filled with portions of rocks that had gone crashing into the water in times long ago, and which lay, some of them submerged, while others showed their black heads above the water at all times except when the river was the highest during some great freshet, when they were hidden, but still making known their whereabouts by the foaming, eddying water.

The worst of the rocks were upon the very brow of the precipice, which were seldom covered; and, while working off jams from this spot, the men that we have referred to had lost their lives.

Chamberlain was doubtful if the water was high enough to carry the logs smothly over the falls, and at noon he had despatched a man down the river, who returned about three o'clock with the intelligence that a large jam had formed upon the very brow of the precipice. No sooner had the man made the report, than Chamberlain ordered the men to cease their labor there, and to provide themselves with some strong ropes and handspikes and axes, and go with him to Dead-Man's Fall; an order which of course was obeyed, but very reluctantly by many of the gang.

The sun was hanging low in the heavens when they arrived at the falls, and from the summit of the cliff they gazed in awe upon the scene that lay below them.

On the very brow of the falls the logs were jammed ten or fifteen feet in height, beneath and among which the water was pouring with a sound like thunder. Up the river, as far as they could see, the logs were pilled, while the waters roared and hissed and plunged among them. It was a scene—that dark gorge at that hour—that was well calculated to make the bravest heart tremble with something akin to awe.

The logmen knew that the vast, struggling mass below them was held by a single log, and, if that particular one could be found and removed, the whole mighty throng would go plunging over the falls with a power nothing could resist, owing to the water that had been held back by the logs. To find this one, one after another was lowered upon the jam, and the search was begun.

The search was not of a long duration. The particular log was found, and it was judged necessary that it should be cut in to. This decided upon, the entire gang returned to the summit of the cliff by the means of the ropes which they had descended.

When they were assembled again upon the cliff, not a word was spoken by any one; but they looked in each other's faces, and waited for the words that they knew would fall from the lips of Chamberlain.

"Boys," he said, "that jam has got to be broken, and it will need but two of you to do it. Those that will go shall have ten dollars apiece for their day's work! Who of you will undertake it?"

For a moment there was a silence, and then Sam Robson stepped forth.

"I will go, for one," he said.

"And I, for the other," said John Stacy, steping to his side.

"You are a green hand, and perhaps are not aware of the danger you incur in venturing upon the jam. It is my dut to warn you," said Chamberlain earnestly.

"Yes: the boy ain't fit to go there. He can't learn manners on a jam, you know!" and Sam looked scornfully at the young man at his side. He had not forgiven his humiliation and partial defeat the night before, and was waiting impatiently for a chance to punish him, as he meant to do that night, though the men doubted if he was able after the exhibition they had had of the young man's science.

"Give yourself no uneasiness, gentlemen. I am well aware of what I am about to do, and am perfectly capable of taking care of myself. There is danger below us, but I do not fear it."

Saying so, the young man maved towards the rope that was dangling over the cliff.

Chamberlain gazed keenly at the young man; and, when he had done speaking, he interposed no further objection to his going. Robson descended first, not very well pleased, as can be imagined, with his companion, who closely followed him with a couple of handspikes, while he carried an axe. The two men proceeded to the spot where the key log was wedged among the rocks. Soon the sound of the axe as it buried itself into the heart of the wood, under the strong hands of Robson, came to the ears of the group upon the summit of the cliff.

No need was there hanspikes John Stacy carrid, with which to pry out the portion of the log when it was severed; for, before the bit of the axe had reached its heart, it broke with a loud crash, and the huge mass of logs and water began to move—slowly at first, then with accumulated speed—over the brow of the precipice.

With a crash and a roar, the mighty logs took the fearful leap, and the two men sprang towards the cliff, where the ropes were lying, held by strong hands ready to pull them up to a place of safety. None but the most agile could keep foot a footing upon the rushing, whirling timber; and the spectators on the summit of the cliff gazed with astonishment at the nimble manner in which John Stacy sprang from log to log, apparently unconcerned. [illegible] solid cliff, [illegible] above him, and some distance in advance of Robson, who had always been ascribed a swift hand upon a jam in motion.

John Stacy had almost reached the side of the cliff, when a cry from behind him, that rang out loud above the roar of the waters, arrested his steps. Turning round he saw, to his horror, that Robson had slipped between two logs, which had immediately closed together again, clasping his feet as if in a vice of iron. His cry of distress was echoed by those on the cliff; but no sound came from John Stacy as he turned, and, regardless of his own safety, sprang back to the pinioned man, and with his handspike endeavored to pry apart the logs that confined him.

In vain were his efforts. So closely were they wedged together, that he could not move them; and faster and faster they moved onwards to the terrible death awaiting them below.

"For God's sake, save yourself" exclaimed Robson. "You cannot aid me. My time is come. But say that you forgive me for my ill-treatment of you. Say that, and I shall feel better, and it won't be so bad to go over there!" and he indicated with his hand the falls they were so rapidly approaching.

"I forgive you freely; but I shall not leave you yet. There! I can start it. Thank God! your feet are free again!"

"O God, I cannot walk!" exclaimed Robson in agony. "To die now, after I am free!" and his emotion was terrible to see.

"I'll try and save you yet!" said John Stacy; and lifting the crippled man in his arms, showing a strength that was surprising, he bounded over the logs, which, owing to some obstruction, were now moving slower. To the joy of every one, he reached the ropes, and both were drawn in safety to the summit of the cliff. It was many days before Robson could resume his work; but, when he did, he was an altered man, and a fast friend to John Stacy ever afterwards.

☞ A gentleman not long since in one of his rides in South Illinois, sought to make himself interesting to a good-looking mother of a sweet baby, occupying the next seat in the car. After duly praising the baby he remarked to the mother, "He is a real sucker I suppose?" "No sir," said the lady blushing, "we had to raise him on the bottle." The gentleman resumed his reading and has not bracged of any strange baby since.

TECUMSEH, MICH., APRIL 6, 1865

The Fall of Richmond.

The Rebel Capital has fallen, and the victorious Grant now holds his headquarters in the Executive Mansion of the Rebel President.

We have all felt that the end was approaching, but it came so suddenly, and so crushingly upon the rebels, that we can hardly yet realize it.

Its importance we cannot fully comprehend. It must be left to future ages to develope, and the pen of history to record, its momentous relations to the future prosperity of this great nation, and the cause of human liberty throughout the world.

All honor to those noble heroes, the gallant officers, and brave soldiers, by whom this priceless victory was won. All honor to those wounded suffering champions, and the brave heroic dead, who hesitated not to bare their bosoms to the strife, and pour out the red current of their precious lives—that a Nation might be free—that the surging devastating tide of war might never reach our fair fields and homes, and that no parracidal hand might ever be allowed in its mad, fiendish frenzy, to trample down the strength, or stain the fair escutcheon of our Nation's glory.

We rejoice in victory, and we should rejoice; but let us not forget that it is the price of blood. The peals of ringing bells, the roar of cannon, and the hurrah of the gathered multitudes as they meet to celebrate it, cannot but fall sadly upon many a bleeding heart, whose noblest, dearest treasure now gone forever from their weeping eyes, is a part of the undying purchase paid to secure it.

But while they can but mourn, let it be with rejoicing also, not only that undying liberty is won, but that their heroic dead, whose life blood was freely poured out upon their country's desecrated altars, can never be forgotten. That they shall not only live, enshrined forever in the hearts of a rescued and grateful people, but live also in the proud annals of a [illegible] demi-gods of fame, an honor and pride to them and to their children's children.

The tyrants and the thrones of Europe may well tremble and stand aghast. The old taunt, that anarchy and despotic power can alone guide and protect a people in the hour of danger, that a free republic cannot survive the test, but must necessarily fall from its own inherent weakness, will never be heard again.

The free republic of the United States, in a well organized and carefully prepared civil rebellion (the severest of all tests) embracing nearly one third of its entire population, has met the issue fearlessly and unflinchingly, and, being in the right, has, thanks to the God of armies, conquered in the strife.

Without appointing any dictator, as the old Roman republic was used to do, without running in debt to neighboring governments, as England and Europe have always done, without hired Hessians or soldiers from abroad—she has raised such armies as the old world never saw, every private fit to command, and feeling that he is a part of the government he has rallied to defend, and even now, when the strife is substantially ended, there are still coming 300,000 more—every public Loan taken by the people, so that the old governments of France and England who thought to embarrass us by refusing to take them, cannot get them if they would, and more still called for at the rate of $3,000,000 a day, more than enough to meet all the government expense, enormous as it necessarily is, we have met the crisis in such a way as may well convince all future ages that an intelligent Republic is capable of taking care of itself in any emergency, and needs no despotism to protect or defend it; that the greatest good to the greatest possible number, is something more than a beautiful theory, that it is really attainable, and may be enjoyed and perpetuated by any virtuous and intelligent people, who have the manliness to assume, and to defend it.

Old England in her eagerness to divide and destroy a commercial rival, armed pirates to prey upon our commerce, built vessels to defy our blockade, and took the Confederate Loan for munitions of war to be used against us. But she has come to grief. Her pirates have often preyed upon her own commerce—her blockade-runners be dead upon her hands, and her Confederate Loan is lost. Not more desolate and wholly ruined are the rebel traitors of the South to day than are the secession sympathizers of England with their ships and stocks.

Napoleon too, upon his throne, will hear these peals of victory as the death knell of all his darling schemes of Mexican usurpation. The old Monroe doctrine will be restored, never again to be disturbed with impunity.

Let us, then, as a grateful nation give thanks to the God of justice, for this triumph of the right and crushing out of a stupendous wrong, whereby Republican liberty, freedom to the Slave, and freedom to the world, have been so gloriously vindicated, not only for the present but, as we trust, for ages yet to come.

From Sheridan's Army.

The World has a graphic account of Sheridan's battle of Five Forks, which was the turning point in the giant conflict, and which, under Sheridan's Generalship, will take rank with anything on record. It appears that Grant was not satisfied with the day's business on Friday, and placed Sheridan in supreme command of the whole of Warren's corps, and all the cavalry. Sheridan at once manœuvered with his cavalry, dismounting it, and gradually pressed them back into their works, under the most desperate and terrible fighting of the war. While this was being done, and done slowly, Sheridan set about forming the infantry, showing the same genius in infantry tactics that he has in cavalry. It was a marvel to see so paltry a force of cavalry press back and hold in check 16,000 rebel infantry; still they did it in such a manner as to completely hide the movement of our infantry. They were driven back, step by step into their works; then the signal was given, and the infantry closed on their works like a huge barn door. The rebs saw their situation, but did not appreciate how desperate were their circumstances. They fell back to the left only too see four close lines of battle to drive them across the field. At the right horsemen charged them in their attempt to fight out, and in their rear foot and cavalry began to assemble. Slant fire, cross fire, and direct fire by file and battery rolled perpetually, cutting down their bravest officers, and strewing the field with bleeding men. Their own artillery was turned upon them; bodies of cavalry mounted their parapet and poured in their volleys, and charged down upon them, slashing and trampling them into concision. They had no commanders to lead out, and a few more volleys, a new charge, and a command to die or surrender, and 5,000 muskets were thrown upon the ground and 5,000 men are Sheridan's prisoners. They who escaped were pursued by the fiery Custer, and they were pressed far into the desolate forest.

NEW YORK, April 4.

The Commercial says: It is reasonable to suppose that we may hear soon of a movement against Augusta, up the Savannah River. Immediately after Sherman's departure a line of couriers was established between Augusta and Columbia, and by this means communication re-established between Richmond and the western portion of the Confederacy. The occupation of Augusta is necessary to complete the isolation of Western Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi.

The Commercial's special says it is reported by military men as impossible for Lee to escape with any considerable portion of his forces. It is believed Weitzel has pushed down with his colored Corps on the railroad line from Richmond to Burkesville Junction, to co-operate with Grant in leading off Lee.

The special to the World says: When the messenger brought Davis the dispatch from Lee anouncing the turning of his right, he refused to believe it, and accused the messenger of attempting an April fool trick.

Davis and his family and other rebel officers and their families, did not leave Richmond until Monday morning Had Weitzel's troops pushed on to the depot on entering the place the whole party might have been taken.

Danville will be the capital of the future Confederacy.

NEW YORK, April 5

A Herald correspondent gives an account of the condition of Richmond when Gen. Weitzel entered the city: Negroes flocked about him, thanking the Lord that the Yankees had come. He found a bridge burning and sent the negroes for a fire engine, which they bro't and he put them to work to extinguish the flames and finally turned his superintending over to a white man. Most of the railroad property had been destroyed and large quantities of tobaco burned.—Immense quantities of commissary stores were piled in store houses in the heart of the city, and if fired would have destroyed the City. But this was not done.

Shells fired into the city had done but very little damage, here and there a chimney was maimed and a hole punched in a house but people continued to live in the exposed parts of the city. By six o'clock the town was awake. Troops pouring in from all directions cheering, singing, etc., The citizens showed themselves in such large numbers that it seemed very few had left, they all appeared hungry. Provisions having been handed among them The business streets looked thrifty, and the stores had considerable stocks of goods in them.

Gen. Lee acknowledged his inability to hold Virginia any longer, and seemed very much depressed.

FORT MONROE, April 3, via. Baltimore, April 4.—The mail steamer Dictator, arrived from City Point 4:30 this a. m., and brings additional particulars of the great struggle.

Petersburg was occupied by our troops at 3 o'clock Monday morning. Our gunboats were well up the James and it was thought that a fight had taken place with the rebel-clads. Large fires were seen up the James River last night towards Fort Darling and in the vicinity of other rebel works, from which it was inferred that Lee was abandoning his works and retreating from his long established lines. An immense number of prisoners have been captured, from 15,000 to 18,000. Prisoners are continually arriving at City Point, and it was estimated that there were 15,000 there this a. m. When the Dictator left a salute was being fired by all war vessels at the Point.

The steamer Cossack arrived here today with a large number of Union prisoners, including Gen. McLaughlin and men of his brigade, captured with him by rebels in the assault on Fort Steadman. Such was the haste of the rebels in hurrying the Union prisoners through Richmond on Sunday, that in many cases many were not even paroled. The returned prisoners say that in coming thro' Richmond on Sunday, they saw manifest indications of the evacuation of the city. The streets were alive with people of all classes, conditions and ages, manifesting intense excitement. All the Union prisoners in Libby were ordered to be exchanged by the rebel authorities, and were hurried through the city of Richmond towards the Varina Landing in the greatest possible haste.

NEW YORK. April 4.—Of Saturday's operations, the Tribune's correspondence says:—At 7 A. M., the 5th Corps was again in motion, passing to the left along White Oak road to join Sheridan, executing the difficult movement of marching by flank in the presence of the enemy, withdrawing Divisions in the rear of each other and marching them off successively from right to left, the left Division, Crawford's executing the same movement by Brigades. While this was taking place the 2d Corps moved towards White Oak road by a direct route and established connection with the right of the 5th Corps Meanwhile, Sheridan with four cavalry Divisions, passing around the left of the whole army, went through Dinwiddie C. H., and towards the South Side R. R., with his usual rapidity. The force which drove Crawford and Ayers across Gravelly Run, however, at once turned their attention to him, moving rapidly to the right, and after a desperate conflict, he also was forced back within a mile of Dinwiddie C. H., but being joined by Warren's Corps, he again took the offensive and in turn drove the enemy and captured a position known as Five Forks, together with about 4,000 prisoners and several batteries of artillery. He was then joined by Miles' Division, 2d Corps, and pushed westward for the South Side R. R. This he soon reached and took position upon it. The 5th Corps, supporting the cavalry, also took 15 guns and about 2,000 prisoners enabling Sheridan to drive back the force which on Friday afternoon checked his advance near Dinwiddie C. H.

On receiving this news, it was determined to give the enemy no time to send troops to their right, and at once a simultaneous attack was ordered all along the lines by the 9th, 6th, 24th, and 2d corps. An order was given about 9 o'clock at night, and in less than an hour a furious assault began on the rebel entrenchments in front of their several commands, resulting in the enemy being driven in confusion from their first into their second line of works, with the loss of over 5,000 prisoners, several forts and about 20 pieces of artillery. The 2d corps were engaged all day in the front; and, in spite of the terrible fire of musketry poured into their ranks behind the works, succeeded in maintaining their new line several hundred yards in advance of the line they occupied in the morning. The 24th corps occupied the centre of our line, its left connecting with the 2d at Hatcher's run, and its right going to the left of the 6th corps. Before daylight, Sunday morning the rebels made a furious assault on the position of this line, driving a portion of the 3d brigade from their breastworks, and capturing about 100. Their success, however, did not last long, the 20th Pennsylvania, by a gallant charge, driving them back beyond their battle line.

A sharp fire was kept up all day by both sides. Owing to the hot fire by our sharpshooters, the enemy was unable to work his guns, consequently very few casualities occurred to our side from shells. Our batteries, however, rained incessant fire into their entrenchments. There was little fighting in front of the 6th Corps.—Quiet also reigned in front of the 9th Corps.

So matters stood until 10 o'clock, when the 2d Corps was started to sharper attention by a few shots on their front, soon swelling into battling volleys. The batteries joined in the clamor. The firing spread rapidly to the front of the 24 Corps and on to the 6th therewav to the right, till it reached the 9th about 11 o'clock, at which time the fighting was at its height. Presently cheers broke out on the front of the second, as the fire slackened.

By 2.30 the fire had nearly ceased along the whole line, but at 4 o'clock in the morning, it suddenly broke out again nearer than ever to the 2d Corps, while sharp artillery practice was heard far to the right, and again the crash of battle sped from end to end of the line. At 6 o'clock the battle was raging fiercely, but our colors are advancing all along the line.

The World's correspondent recounts the attack on the Petersburg defences.—It was to take place Friday morning at 4 o'clock, but the failure on the left was doubtless the cause of the postponement. The plan of this last phase of the action was this: Gen. Grant, on recipt of the news of Sheridan's victory at Five Forks, immediately dispatched courier in conjunction with the telegraph leading to his headquarters to each of the Corps commander, desiring them without loss of time to open both artillery and infantry upon the works of Petersburg. Sheridan it will be remembered, attained his succes by half-past 7 Saturday night, at 9 Grant hearing it, and before 10 our columns had passed the picket line and were on their way to the rebel entrenchments. Parke on the right, Wright in the center, and Ord on the left, marched almost at the same instant. The 6th Corps (Wright's) were arranged in double line of battle, and without ceremony threw themselves en masse into the ditch and up the parapet. The contest was short, though terrible. Hand-to-hand conflicts occurred, the deadly bayonet lunge, the impressive and fitful crashes of musket and revolver, the crossing of swords, the volley now and then when our troops poured enfilading fires down the inside of the parapet, the yells and groans, the galloping of couriers to and fro from end to end of the lines. In places the ditches were heaped with living and dying combatants tumbled together promiscuously, but every now and then the Northern cheers told how the conflict went. On each side of the 6th Corps the scene was the same. Opposite Fort Hell the rebels had a fort called Fort Heaven, at which they fought like Satan's legions.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit,) that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and ground or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat flowed and packed on reasonable terms.

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,
WOOLSTON COMFORT.

☞ No advertisement considered less than one square. Transient advertisements must be paid for in advance. Advertisements unaccompanied with directions for the number of insertions, will be continued until ordered out, and charged accordingly. Business cards of five lines, or less, inserted at $8.50 per year.

☞ Work neatly executed at this office. Charges reasonable.

☞ Extra copies of the Herald can be procured at Ketcham's News Depot.

GREAT REDUCTION.—E. H. Hoag has "marked down" his Fine and Coarse Boots and will not be undersold.

☞ Those of our subscribers, who are intending to pay their subscriptions in wood, potatoes, butter, eggs, lard, &c. should bring it along now.

Remember that Ketcham will take all good State money at par. No distinction between good Bank Bills and Greenbacks.

☞ Be sure and attend the exhibition at Union Hall, on Friday evening April 7th, for the benefit of the Soldier's Aid Society. It will be a good thing.

☞ Alf. James started for New York on Wednesday to buy New Goods.—When he returns we expect to buy Groceries very low.

☞ E. H. Hoag has just received a large invoice of Gaiters &c., which were bought since the "decline" and will be sold at Gold prices for Greenbacks.

☞ J. D. Robbins has just received a large assortment of Wall Paper and Curtains, which he is selling remarkably cheap.

☞ The friends of the Rev. D. C. Wright, will pay him a complimentary visit at the Church, next Tuesday evening. All are invited to attend.

A. MURRAY.
S. C. BLINN.

☞ Mrs. Addie Williams, landlady of the Cross House, at Adrian, was arrested Monday on charge of stealing $100 from Mrs. Malinda Buck, one of her boarders. She was released on bail.

At a wedding the other day one of the guests, who often is a little absent-minded observed gravely, "I have often remarked that there have been more women than men married this year."

☞ See the advertisement of Wastel & Adam in another column. They have a nice stock of goods and are selling them off at remarkably low rates, we should judge by the way people carry them off.

☞ M. Wright has just received from New York a large and well selected stock of Groceries, Medicines, Paints and Oils. He has the cheapest Sugars and the best Teas, in town. Also a large stock of Wall Paper, of the latest patterns. Drop in and see them.

Decline in Price.

The Detroit Daily Advertiser and Tribune, on the 1st of April, reduced their price to $10 per year.

I am now furnishing it at the old price, viz, at 25 cents per week, $1.00 per month, or $2.30 per quarter.

G. T. KETCHAM.

NOTARIES PUBLIC.—The County Clerk has just received Notary Commission for Danforth Keys, Burton Kent, William Brown, A Wilcox J I Knapp, James H Parker, A J Comstock, John Barber, C A Jewell, A H Crane, Chas. Brown, Stephen R Mann, Charles C Morse, George V Bailey, LeGrand Smith, and Moses S Worth.

☞ Gold is down and so are Groceries. If you don't believe it call on A. James and look at his goods. He is the man to suit us, for he comes down on his goods when gold falls. He is selling sugar 2 cents per pound cheaper than any man in town. Tea is also down about two shillings and everything else in proportion. If you want anything in his line do not fail to call on him before you buy or you may have to pay "old prices."

☞ We have had the pleasure of seeing some first class pictures which were taken at the Photograph rooms of Mrs. C. M. Bissell, by her Artist, R. P. Cooper formerly of Ann Arbor. Any one in want of pictures will do well to call at her rooms before going elsewhere. We give place to the following recommendation which speaks for itself:

"Mr. R. P. Cooper is a Photograph Artist whose skill in his profession is unsurpassed by any one of my extensive acquaintance. Though young, he has had more practical and thorough instruction in the business than the majority of men at twice his age. He has spent the whole of the past year under the instruction of one of the best, if not the best Artists in the State. Any one who will grant him a fair trial of skill will say my language is not to strong!

Respectfully,
CHAS. E. OCKFORD,
Photographic Artist.

Important News.

Editor of the HERALD:—Subjoined is an item of news for your "Local"—which you may not have heard of. We know that you are always "on guard" in relation to "war news" like the following—Richmond has fallen,—is evacuated—nothing there—not even a doleful sound is heard from the Toombs. The confederate War Pilot has dropped Lee-ward; the "Old Flag" is planted in the very heart of Rebellion. That Sherman and Sheridan and the valiant Gen. Custer are knawing at the vitals of poor "Dixie—Philibuster."

But this is to inform you Gen'l. Moore, assisted by Adj. Gen. Anderson and Lieut. Fred Taylor, has completely vanquished Old Price and captured his entire stock of Dry Goods—which is now on exhibition and for sale at panic prices, at the Dry Goods Emporium of R. C. Moore of this village. Reader do not fail to visit this establishment and ask for prices of goods—they will astonish you by the GREAT REDUCTION in values. If any reader has been drowsy for the last month, he will conclude that he has "waked up" clear back in the year 1858, when prints and sheetings were selling for a "mere song,"—now, the song of a "quarter," will buy all you want. Reader, (if the crowd don't keep you out) "go in"—at Moore's and buy yourself rich.

Ridgeway, March 28, 1865.

MR. EDITOR:

Having noticed in the Herald of March 16th, that a spirited War Meeting had been held in the English School House, I beg leave to offer a few remarks in connection with it. It was stated that considerable had been done previously—three substitutes had been obtained and two volunteers. But had the enrolled men acted together a little more unanimously, the whole number of substitutes might have been obtained, and the town avoided the draft. The substitutes who were credited to the town were procured by the principals, (who after repeatedly trying to induce those liable to form a club and assist each other to place men in the field,) at last gave it up and went in on their own hook. A club was afterwards formed, and subscriptions raised offering a local bounty of from $150 to $200 for one-year men, and the proposal of those (whose substitutes were already in for three years) to join the Club and receive the benefit of the Bounty, as well as the others, was rejected with disdain by the majority, on the principle of every man for himself and the d—l take the hindmost.

AN ENROLLED MAN.

EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—Thinking perhaps some of your readers, who have not heretofore been in the habit of attending the Sunday School Union Concerts, held at the different Churches in our village, would be interested in knowing what the order of the exercises are, I will give a discription of the one held last Sabbath, at the M. E. Church.

The exercises were opened by singing, prayer and reading the scriptures. Then the history of David was given in questions and answers by Miss Fannie Sherman's class—another hymn followed, and then Miss Lucy Train's class told us in scripture language, what the bible says of drunkenness,—this was followed by Mrs. Richard Ford's class of small girls, who gave us a discription of the love of God in quotations from the scriptures. Remarks from Mr. Bills of this village and Rev. George Smith of Adrian, were followed by the Sunday-school hymn, which has no equal, "Marching on" which closed the exercises. It was good to be there. Come out the 1st Sunday in May, at the Presbyterian Church and see for yourselves. S. S. ATTENDENT.

Dialogue.

Mr. A meets Mr. B, two miles from Tecumseh. Mr. A is on the way home; Mr. B, going to Tecumseh:

Mr. A. Good morning, Mr B.—how is your family? and how is that sick child?

Mr. B. My family are all well except Jane, the baby; she has been very sick, but we are in hopes she is a little better. I have been to town to get a little Sherry Wine for her.

Mr. A. Where did you get your wine? I tried to get some a few days ago, but could not find any that was worth much.

Mr. B. I got the wine at Dr. Curtis Drug Store. I always buy my medicines at his store. Our Physicians advised me to go there; he always keeps a large assortment of the best kind of goods.

Mr. A. I used to trade there a great deal, but found it very difficult to get waited on. There is always such a crowd there, you cannot get what you want under half an hour, particularly in busy days, and lately I have been trading at other places some, but I think I shall go back. I think I got better suited there than any where else.

Mr. B. I have been troubled some in the same way about getting waited on, but this is an objection to all popular stores. Merchants who are favorites of the people will always have a crowd around them.

Mr. A. They say goods are falling rapidly.

Mr. B. They have fallen rapidly. You would be surprised to see how low Curtis is selling sugars, teas, and other groceries; and what a large assortment he has on hand.

Mr. A. I see you have a few bundles of Dry Goods; where did you buy them?

Mr. B. I get my Dry Goods at Ward & Strickland's. I always get my Dry Goods there.

Mr. A. That is another store where you will always find a crowd, and although they have a number of accommodating clerks it is sometimes quite difficult to get waited on.

Mr. B. I know that's so, but where I like to trade I don't mind some little inconvenience of that kind. Strickland has just arrived from New York. He was there during the panic in prices, and purchased goods astonishingly low. He was detained three days, on the way, by the great flood. He told me about the loss of life and terrible destruction of property which he saw in many places. At one place he saw large old trees that had been torn from their roots and were floating through the principal streets of the city. At another place a house was floating down the current with a little child in the chamber. The residents had all escaped except this little child that was floating quietly down the river. The parents were almost frantic about it, but could not rescue it. Mr. Strickland did not learn whether it was rescued, but thought it probable that it was. Mr. Strickland said their goods were detained some on the way, but they are now coming and they have a splendid assortment which they are selling remarkably low, even for the present low prices.

The Subscriber having sold his Stock of Goods to A. Hanford, requests those indebted to him—also those indebted to the late Firm of Wheeler & Waring—to make immediate payment, as he is anxious to close up his business. At present said Notes and Accounts will be found with S. C. LeBaron, at Hood's Clothing Store, who is authorized to settle the same. Prompt attention will save legal costs. Tecumseh, Feb. 15, 1865.

WM. H. WARING.

Last Call.

I would say to all those having unsettled accounts with the late firm of A. James & Co: if you do not call and make some arrangement for the settlement of your accounts I shall have to put them into the hands of an officer for collection.

Tecumseh, April, 4, '65. A. JAMES.

For Sale.

4,000 cultivated Apple Trees, of four years growth, and choice varieties. As people have got about done buying high priced farms, I think it is a good time for them to do something for the rising generation.—The subscriber will sell, for $12 per hundred. His Nursery is situated two miles west of the village of Tecumseh.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

THE LARGEST, BEST AND MOST POPULAR NEWSPAPER IN MICHIGAN.

CIRCULATION, 90,000 COPIES.

With 1865 the Detroit Advertiser and Tribune enters upon its 31st year. It is now by far the most popular and most extensively circulated newspaper in the State, and its Proprietors are determined that, cost what it will, it shall maintain its leading position.

Their political aim will be to make it, as heretofore, a faithful exponent of the Loyal sentiments that have been and will still be very full and complete. In addition to the dispatches of the ASSOCIATED PRESS, it is now receiving daily SPECIAL DISPATCHES, prepared at great expense by able and reliable reporters. Every Michigan Regiment is represented in the Advertiser and Tribune by a capable correspondent, and full returns of all casualties are promptly published. This feature alone has has made it indispensable to every family having friends in the Union army. Particular attention is given to STATE NEWS, which always appears at the earliest moment in the Advertiser and Tribune. Indeed, the paper is beginning to be have a fame throughout the West for its

Items and Summaries,

to prepare which an able corps of assistant editors is maintained. We also maintain intelligent and vigilant CORRESPONDENTS at all the principal points in our State, and at Washington, and have recently secured a European writer to keep us posted in regard to affairs in the Old World. The Correspondence of this paper will be a feature never yet attempted in the State. Now that the Presidential campaign is over, and the Union victory secured, we intend to give even more space than formerly to LITERARY MISCELLANY, including Poetry, Stories, anecdotes and choice Selections.

THE COMMERCIAL DEPARTMENT is conducted by a gentleman of large experience and indefatigable zeal, and who, from his relations as Secretary of the Detroit Board of Trade, possesses advantages enjoyed by the Commercial Editor of no other paper. Politically the Advertiser and Tribune will adhere closely to advocating the vigorous prosecution of the War till the last Rebel has laid down his arms and submitted to the legally constituted Government and Laws of the land. All other issues may be held in abeyance until this great one is settled, and until indemnity for the past and security for the future are gained by the entire abolition of Human Slavery in this goodly land. RELIGION AND MORALS, will find a ready faithful exponent in the Advertiser and Tribune, which frankly avows itself on the side of Christianity, Order Education, and Progress generally. The Industrial interests of the State will recieve close attention and stimulus, both as regards Agriculture Manufactures, Mining, Railways and Navigation. We believe that wealth is a good thing when honorably earned, and shall do all in our power to help the people prosper.

Freedom and Union,

A Young Lady's First Ball.

My first partner was peculiarly trying. He was a terribly athletic partner. He held me with a grasp of iron, plunged headlong into the dance, used me as a missle of wrath with which he cleared away all obstacles, and, by falling down, involved me and some others in a disgraced heap. Never shall I forget my sensations on rising. I scarcely heard the breathless apologies of this fatal man; and, hurrying to a seat in a deserted corner, I bowed a dismissal to him, and felt I could never again appear in a dance.

Scarcely had he left me when the hostess came in with a particularly bright dapper-looking stranger, whom he presented, and with whom I presently found myself dancing. What a contrast! This was perfect delight, and by some marvelous contrivance, although the ball was crowded, we never seemed to come near any one, and always had plenty of room. With the zeal of a young dancer, I did not often want to rest; yet, whenever we did stop, I always found myself securely sheltered behind a very broad pair of shoulders. That was my first experience of true dancing—a never-to-be-forgotten sensation.

My next portner was of a different order. He was pale and bald, with spectacles, and very red bony wrists; and, after a few turns, he asked me if I had seen that week's "—— Review," which contained an able article on the late outbreak of cholera, giving the statistics for the last ten years, and whether I was disposed or not to accept the author's views. This was a severe matter for a ballroom, and my excited spirits were unable to cope with it. From this, he passed to the last census returns, and we soon became so scientific, and danced so dreadfully out of time, that I was forced to plead fatigue. He was succeeded by a very timid young man, who held me at arm's length, lost me several times, and who had nothing further to say after he asked me if I walked much in the park or whether I preferred driving. Later, I danced with a nautical gentleman, who was very good-natured and amusing, told me some wonderful tales, which I implicitly believed, and whose company I thoroughly enjoyed, in spite of feeling so much as if on board ship while dancing with him. His mavements were charmingly light and smooth; but it was surprising how often we were nearly off our balance, and recovered again, what unlooked for lurches occurred, and how freequently one of his legs intruded into other couples! I liked him better than my next partner, who was an "elderly young man," about forty years of age, thoroughly determined to be no more than twenty-five. He presented a weedy appearrnce and a general stiffness of joint, had a disappointing way of continually twisting round on the same ground, and, whenever we were knocked against by passing couples, seemed dreadfully jarred. I thought him very silent; and, after one turn round the room, he looked so extremely pale that I proposed to rest, on his suggesting an ice, in a faint voice, eagerly assented, in the hope of finding him a seat. What a mysterious fact it is, making us surpect some malice on the part of hests and hostesses, that the tallest men in the room invariably get paired with the shortest women, and vice versa! It is grievious to see a poor fellow ever six feet either carrying round a little creature of four feet nothing, or bending his spine to a heart-breaking degree! What reverses that valorous little man is doomed to suffer who will lead forth a voluminous lady! How he appears to be hiding behind her skirts, and, after vainly endeavoring to pioneer her through the dance, is fain to come out of it, battered and humiliated?

I often figured personally in such adventures, for my entrance seemed a signal for all the little men in the room to start up. When fairly launched in a dance with one of these pigmies, I was oppressed with a sense of responsibility, and found myself wondering whether or no I should deliver him up, at the end, safe in limb.

Humor and Sentiment.

Always give a narrow-minded man a wide berth.

A bird that always faces the storm—the weather-cock.

The only everlasting people on earth are the shoemakers.

How to make a little go a great way—send it by rail.

It would be a good idea when exchanging prisoners, to exchange them by the pound, and thus gain about five men for every two rebels.

Punctuality.

In seeking those principles which are to be our daily guide through life, it is well to turn our attention to the study of the book of nature as it lays open to our view. On its broad pangs we may read in glowing characters, which the frost of time can never efface lessons and principles that were written there by the hand of Omnipotence to be the guide of every man. Among the many things written there, we may find indelibly written the word "PUNCTUALITY."

Go, if you please at evening when the sun has sunk beneath the western hills, and cast your eyes up toward the blue vault of heaven, and see if those countless orbs which shine with so much effulgence is not its appointed place. Mark the seasons of the year as they roll around, and see if Spring ever fails to bring its animating influence; Summer is verdure; Autumn its fruits, or Winter its gloom.—Notice also the martin, the swallow, the wild goose, and many other migrators, and see if they ever neglected to wing their way to the far off sunny south, at the approach of the cold blast of Winter.

Now do we not see punctually all this? Should not we, who are intelligent beings endowed with wisdom and understanding—if it be to our interest, and it certainly is—to immitate their example? If the martin and swallow should neglect to flee at the proper time, winter would overtake them, and with it, death. If spring should fail to come, the consequence would certainly be direful to the inhabitants of the earth. Or, should one of those orbs which nightly bedeck the starry firmament fail to be in its appointed place, the whole system would feel the shock; and in the place of order, disorder would instantly reign supreme. Now, who will attempt to deny that it is also for us to be punctual, and strictly so, in all our various duties and labors connected wite this life? True there are many who place little or no value upon punctuality but do they not suffer by it? And besides, do not others often have to suffer with them? We can put no confidence in those who fail in this respect. They become mere ciphers in our estimation.

What confidence can the Professor have in the student who is seldom in the resitation room? We answer, very little if any. The life of such a one is so negligent in all his duties, must be more a life of chance than of order. Not only do others lose confidence in him, but he loses confidence in himself. And, truly, the position of him in whom no one can confide, not even himself, is an unevitable one.

And, again, would not the condition of society, in general, be deplorable indeed, were all which go to make up the make up the stupendous whole, of the above description? It would be one chaotic mass, without form, and devoid of all order and regularity. But, if on the other hand all its members were strictly punctual in every respect, how happy would be its condition. There would be peace and harmony in all its ranks, then, resembling that which may be discovered in the great works of nature.

A Mother's Prayer.

A mother heard of the arrival of her sailor-bay outsidh the Cape, and was awaiting his return with the anxiety a mother alone can know. With faith strong in God she prayed sor his safety. News came in that the vessel was lost.

The father, an unconverted man, who had preserved a sullen silence, now wept aloud. The mother observed, "He is in the hands of Him who doeth all thihgs good," and again the subdued and softened spirit bowed commending her son and husband, in an audible voice to God.

In the morning the little gate in front in front of the dwelling turned on its hinges and the door opened, and their son their lost loved son stood before them.—The vessel had been driven iuto one of the harbors on the coast, and was safe.—The father rushed to meet him. His mother hanging on his neck arnestly exclaimed, "My child how came you here?" "Mother said he, as the tears coursed down his sunburnt face, 'I knew yon'd pray me home"!

What a spectacle; a wild reckless youth acknowledging the efficiency of prayer. It seems he was aware of his perilous situation, and that he labored with the tho't "My mother prays; Christians' prayers are answered, and I may be saved." This reflection inspired him anew, when almost exhausted with fatigue, and with renewed courage he labored till the harbor was gained.

Heading of a Lawyer.

The late Rufus Choate, in an important marine-assault-and-battery-at-sea case, had Dick Borton, chief mate of the clipper-ship "Challenge," on the stand, and badgered him so for about an hour, that at last Dick got his salt-water up, and hauled by the wind to bring the keen Boston lawyer under his batteries.

At the beginning of his testimony, Dick had said that the night was "dark as the devil, and raining like seven bells."

Suddenly Mr. Choate asked him,—

"Was there a moon that night?"

"Yes, sir."

"Ah! yes; a moon."

"Yes: a full moon."

"Did you see it?"

"Not a mite."

"Ah! then how did you know there was a full moon?"

"Because the nautical almanac said so; and I'll believe that sooner 'n any lawyer in this world."

"What was the principal luminary that night, sir?"

"Binnacle-lamp aboard the 'Challenge.'"

"Ah! you are growing exceedingly sharp, Mr. Barton."

"What in blazes have you been grinding me this hour for—to make me dull?"

"Be civil, sir. And now I want you to tell me what latitude and longitude you crossed the equator in?"

"Sho! you're joking."

"No, sir! I am in earnest; and I desire you to answer me."

"I shan't."

"Ah! you refuse, do you?"

"Yes: I can't tell."

"Indeed! You are chief mate of a clipper ship, and unable to answer so simple a question?"

"Yes: it is the d—dest simple question I ever had asked me. Why, I tho't every d—d fool fool of a lawyer knew there aint no latitude on the equator!"

That shot floored Rufus Choate.

A Plain Irishman.

Michael McHannin ran for Congress last fall. Patriotism was the dodge, and his opponent was a wounded officer fresh from the field of battle, covered with blood and glory. Michael stood a poor chance against such odds, and improved on a story he had read after the Mexican war. In addressing his constituents, mostly of the Hibernian denomination, Michael exclaimed,—

"My brave fellow-citizens! No man, dead or alive, has done more for the government than the humble and honorable individual who now addresses you. When this cussed rebellion first burst forth, I could not leave you to go personally, but I hired a substitute to go for me; and there, my friends and fellow-citizens, there, on the red field of battle, in the midst of resounding cannon and the clash of arms, I fit and bled and died for my country?"

This unexampled patriotism in a live man carried all the voters that heard him, and the cheers for Michael made the welkin ring, and shook the tar-bangled spanner. If Michael had let it go at that, it would have been well, and perhaps his country would have had his eloquence in Congress next winter. But, excited by his success, in rousing the enthusiasm of his friends, he went on to say,—

"I was born in Muster, and fotched up in Cork; and if it hadn't been for Providence, and another jintleman who guv me an edication, I should have been as ignorant as you are, my fellow-citizens!"

This was not very palatable to the merry Irishmen, and Michael subsided without even getting an invitation to liquor.

Rather Pointed.

Mr. Rees, the well-known street preacher, was accosted by a would-be wag the other day with the following question:

"Do you believe what the Bible says about the prodigal son and the fatted calf?"

"Certainly I do."

"Well, can you tell me wether the calf that was kill was a male or a female?"

"Yes: it was a female."

"How do you know that?"

"Because," said Rees, looking the chap in the face, "I see the male is alive now."

Dialogue.

Mr. A meets Mr. B, two miles from Tecumseh. Mr. A is on the way home; Mr. B, going to Tecumseh:

Mr. A. Good morning, Mr B,—how is your family? and how is that sick child?

Mr. B. My family are all well except Jane, the baby; she has been very sick, but we are in hopes she is a little better. I have been to town to get a little Sherry Wine for her.

Mr. A. Where did you get your wine? I tried to get some a few days ago, but could not find any that was worth much.

Mr. B. I got the wine at Dr. Curtis Drug Store. I always buy my medicines at his store. Our Physicians advised me to go there; he always keeps a large assortment of the best kind of goods.

Mr. A. I used to trade there a great deal, but found it very difficult to get waited on. There is always such a crowd there, you cannot get what you want under half an hour, particularly in busy days, and lately I have been trading at other places some, but I think I shall go back. I think I got better suited there than any where else.

Mr. B. I have been troubled some in the same way about getting waited on, but this is an objection to all popular stores. Merchants who are favorites of the people will always have a crowd around them.

Mr. A. They say goods are falling rapidly.

Mr. B. They have fallen rapidly. You would be surprised to see how low Curtis is selling sugars, teas, and other groceries; and what a large assortment he has on hand.

Mr. A. I see you have a few bundles of Dry Goods; where did you buy them?

Mr. B. I get my Dry Goods at Ward & Strickland's. I always get my Dry Goods there.

Mr. A. That is another store where you will always find a crowd, and although they have a number of accommodating clerks it is sometimes quite difficult to get waited on.

Mr. B. I know that's so, but where I like to trade I don't mind some little inconvenience of that kind. Strickland has just arrived from New York. He was there during the panic in prices, and purchased goods astonishingly low. He was detained three days, on the way, by the great flood. He told me about the loss of life and terrible destruction of property which he saw in many places. At one place he saw large old trees that had been torn from their roots and were floating through the principal streets of the city. At another place a house was floating down the current with a little child in the chamber. The residents had all escaped except this little child that was floating quietly down the river. The parents were almost frantic about it, but could not rescue it. Mr. Strickland did not learn whether it was rescued, but thought it probable that it was. Mr. Strickland said their goods were detained some on the way, but they are now coming and they have a splendid assortment which they are selling remarkably low, even for the present low prices.

The Surrender of Lee.

When, one week ago, we were permitted to chronicle the taking of Richmond, although we then thought we could see the beginning of the end of this Rebellion, we scarcely hoped, in our next issue, to be able to so nearly announce its final fall.

But so it is; and almost all that men can say or do, is to give thanks to Almighty God that it is so, and cry with Miriam of old,

"Shout! sound the loud Timbrel o'er Egypt's dark sea, Jehovah hath triumphed. His people are free!"

For truly and meaningly

"God and the Right they said.
Those stern old heroes in our fathers' day,
And He of old who led
His chosen people on their devious way
Through wilderness and waste, will lead us too;"

And He has led us, so clearly and manifestly, that no one who believes in a God, can fail to see His finger in it all.

This has been called an Abolition war, and so it is; for it has abolished from our land the crime and curse of human Slavery; yet who but God could have brought it about, that this should have been done, not by us, but by the Slaveholders themselves.

It is true that we have waded to it through seas of blood. It might have been otherwise, but we would not have it so. Like the proud king of Egypt, we "would not let the people go." We have had our prophets of evil, but like Cassandra of the Greeks, they were held to have become mad, and we sought by imprisonment and stripes to teach them to "prophesy to us smoother things."

How like to prophecy does now appear, these words of the earnest, thoughtful Lowell, written and spoken years ago:

"Out from the land of bondage 'tis decreed our slaves shall go.
"And signs to us are offered, as erst to Pharaoh;
"If we are blind, their Exodus, like Israel's of yore,
"Through a Red-Sea, is doomed to be, whose surges are of gore."
"For if man before his duty with a listless spirit stands,
"Ere long the Great Avenger takes the work from out his hands."

And so it was. It may be that in the turmoil and strife of the mighty conflict, in the bias and selfishness of party aims and purposes, we fail to see it now; but the iron pen of History will so record it, and all future ages so contrue and understand it.

It was not so much against the North, as against the fiat of inevitable doom, and the fixed decrees of a God of Justice, that the Slaveholders, when they found themselves dwindling to a minority, rebelled. And God has led us on to victory and triumph, not so much for our sake as for the sake of Justice and the Right.

It was freedom and oppression that here met, face to face; and no one can now estimate the momentous consequences to the cause of humanity, and liberty throughout the world, and for all time to come, that hung upon its issues.

No wonder then, that the old Oligarchies and despotisms of Europe sided with the Rebellion, for to-day they are made to tremble upon their very thrones at its results; while the down trodden millions, over whom they rule and tyrannize, shall breathe the freer that the victory is won; for upon its success hung their dearest hopes for a future enfranchisement to themselves and to their children's children.

Under its lofty inspirations, old Italy will call again for its Garibaldi and Mazzini, and Hungary for its Kossuth, and the millions of Europe for their God-given right, to rule and to govern themselves. The history of this greatest rebellion the world has ever seen, this severest test of civil war to which any nation has ever been subjected, will stand forth to vindicate the inherent strength and power of a Free Republic, so long as the great days and deeds of the mighty past shall live and linger in the hearts of men.

All honor then to the proud heroes, the able, gallant generals who planned for us our battles, and led our armies to the field of victory. All honor to the brave soldiers, unnamed and unsung though they be, who upon every ensanguined field of strife have shown themselves so well worthy to have been recorded as the demi-gods of ar undying fame.

All honor to the yet nobler braves who have lain themselves down as martyrs of a holy cause, self-sacrificed upon their country's altars.

And above all, all Glory to God in the Highest, who has vouchsafed to confirm to us, once more, a still more universal freedom; and does thus again permit us to stand forth more truly and more unfaulteringly than ever "a Beacon light of Liberty" to the Nations of the Earth.

From Washington

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5, '65.

DEAR HERALD:

Possibly the good people of Tecumseh and vicinity might feel interested in the manner in which the news—THE GREAT NEWS—was received in Washington. Acting on this belief, allow me to attempt a faint description of the scenes and incidents of the last two or three days.

About eleven A. M., on Monday, the dispatch was received at the War Department, that Petersburg and Richmond had been evacuated, and were ours! Messengers were at once hurrying to the other Departments and Bureaus with the intelligence. The effect of the announcements in these may "be better imagined than described,"—work was thrown aside—all rules or ideas of order set at defiance; and, with cheers that couldn't wait for the open air, but threatened to raise the roofs from the buildings, all hands, officers, clerks, messengers, and all, rushed into the streets, which almost instantly became the scene of tumultuous excitement, more like Bedlam let loose than any thing else.

The corner adjacent to the War, Navy and Treasury Departments, was a mass of shouting, shrieking, dancing, uproarous madmen; hats flying, flags waving, every one yelling distractedly, at his own pleasure, and entirely regardless of any one else,—in fact, it was a perfect Pandemonium.

The enthusiasm spread like wild-fire, and the entire city soon became crazy with enjoyment and congratulation, only more strongly brought out by the sombre countenances of the by-no-means-scarce secesh sympathizers, who found their hopes so suddenly crushed, and their vain glorious boastings or lugubrious croakings set at nought.

After the first burst of enthusiasm, the jubilation began to take other and various forms. People mounted horses, carriages, wagons, carts—any thing that would carry them, and hurried to spread the tidings to distant parts of the city. Batteries were planted, and belched forth their sulphurous exultation. Fire engines were brought out, steamed up, and add'd their shrill screams to the melee. Speakers were called out, and addressed the multitude from steps and platforms, and the signal-flags flapped frantically from the lofty stations in their mystic gesticulations.

As was naturally to be expected, when spirits were up to such an extent, spirits must go down correspondingly; and not many minutes elapsed before the various places where the 'liquid poison' is vended were literally jammed with excited, eager and thirsty patriots, in a hurry to drink to Grant, Sherman, Old Abe, The Army, The Navy, The Union, or any other man. Well, the way fluid condiments suffered last Monday was a caution to Good Templars. Clinton, on election-day, isn't a circumstance. By three o'clock in the afternoon, everybody, generally speaking, and excepting, of course, your correspondent, was gloriously drunk. Some were tight because they felt good—some, from force of habit—some, because everybody else was; some, on principle, because they thought they ought to be—some considered that the occasion could never occur again, as it never could again, so they secured the largest sized tile for their hat, for the only time in their lives; these were the tea-totallers: some—to hide their chagrin. Government clerks were drunk, of course. And so it went the balance of the day and night. Nobody had reason or calculation enough left to get up any thing formal that day. So the GRAND ILLUMINATION was postponed until Tuesday evening.

And such an illumination as that was! I'll not attempt to describe it. Suffice it to say that every public building was a blaze of light, as well as most places of business, and numberless private houses. There was candle material consumed on the occasion sufficient to have greased "the wheels of government" for some years, at least. The War Department was the most gorgeous spectacle this deponent ever witnessed. It seemed a mass of fire, draped with national flags, and those bearing the badges of the several Army Corps—while before it, red and blue lights were burned, together or alternately, producing the most magnificent effects. The immense range of the Capitol, and its dome towering high in air, looked splendid, and the Treasury, Patent and Post Offices, President's Mansion, State Department, and other public buildings were beautiful beyond description.

During the entire evening the streets were thronged with people, listening to stirring speeches, admiring the sights, and congratulating each other on the great cause of this national joy. All the bands in and near the city were doing their best—cannon were roaring—the air was filled with fire works—rockets whizzing—"volcanoes" bursting—fire-crackers snapping—"serpents" sizzling—gunpowder burning in every shape—and every imaginable demonstration was brought to bear to express the inexpressible and irrepressible feelings of everybody. In short, such a "time" was never before known in Washington, nor out of it.

And, to-day, the good news keep coming. Our boys are after them, stirring 'em up with not such a very long pole; and the Rebellion is at length, surely going, if not already gone, up. It hesn't even been allowed to econce itself in that "last ditch," and apparently even dogs will not be left to "bark at the Northern invaders."

As for Jeff. Davis—Seth Kinman, the Rocky Mountain trapper, who has been honizing in Washington all winter, says that "Jeff. has had to hunt his hole, and pull the hole in after him!" Let us hope that the other end of the "hole" is in a good warm place "in the South-west corner, with a North-east wind blowing ashes in his eyes, to all eternity!" So mote it be.

Grand Celebration.

THE NEWS—UNEXPECTED, BUT CHEERSKO—HOW THE PEOPLE RECEIVED IT—IMMEDIATE EFFECTS—EXTEMPORIZED JUBILEE—HOW IT WENT OFF.

We venture to say that the news which reached our quiet village by the Monday morning train from Jackson, found no more hearty welcome in the broad land than right here. It was the full tidings of Lee's surrender to our invincible Grant. It was every thing that could be asked. The greatest leader of the rebel forces, headed off from every escape, dogged and pounded for twelve months, said at last of Grant's own terms of surrender—"THEY ARE ACCEPTED!"

Though this issue was looked for within the next week, we were surprised by it on Monday morning. We had passed a quiet Sabbath; had slept soundly; awaked; breakfasted, and the people were starting out to their places of business.

The offices, shops, school rooms and studies had been opened for the week's work, when suddenly the church bells began to peal out the notes of victory. The steam whistles joined the chorus. Men dropped their implements of labor, the pen was laid aside, the law book thrown upon the shelf, the prescription half made out was thrust into the hands of the druggist, the merchant pushed his goods out of the way, to'd his customers to call again, and the next moment saw an eager crowd gathering the welcome news from the Post Office bulletin. And now came a scene which has never been witnessed on our streets before. The people gave themselves up to the wildest joy. There was shaking hands, laughing, shouting, and weeping. All manner of salutations passed freely. Joy unalloyed and almost uncontroled reigned for the hour. Some remained on the streets to congratulate their friends, others hurried to their homes to convey the intelligence to their wives and children. Some sought their closets to pour out their hearts to Him who had at last answered their prayers, others gathered around their family altars, where daily for the last four years they had pled with God for the very thing now bestowed. We will not intrude upon such scenes of joy. Nor will we undertake to speak of the scenes witnessed in the homes that have been made desolate by this foul rebellion.

But those who had gone to their homes could not remain there—so true is it that our greatest blessings are but half enjoyed unless we can share them with others.

After an hour or two, there was for a moment, a lull in the enthusiasm of the crowd. Just then our village Band made their appearance, and flung the harmonies of glorious old Yankee Doodle, Hail Columbia and the Star Spangled Banner, up and down the streets, making the welkin ring again. This completely upset the crowd, and because they COULD NOT stand still any longer, a procession was extemporized. After the "on to Richmond" movement had sufficiently consumed the exuberance of feeling, so that the people could be still, comparatively, a store-box was rolled out.—That meant a change of programme.—The crowd became prodigiously possessed of a desire to have some one tell them how happy they were. Although this was asking impossibilities under the circumstances, nothing else would satisfy the crowd.

Mr. Bills Esq. was called for. Before he had time to say yes or no, he found himself standing on the store-box. No matter how he came there. He had but to open his mouth and the speech came. Mr. Baxter was called next, who, for a few moments dealt some sharp blows upon the brainless pate of defunct rebellion.—It was his opinion that the question as to whether or not the negroes would fight was no longer of practical importance, as they took Richmond without the luxury of a fight. The rebs were not in the humor and could not be prevailed upon to indulge. Stacy, jr. was called and made a handsome talk, whenever the crowd would stop cheering long enough to allow him to put in a word. As the people were desirous to have the benefit of clergy, Wright and Wishard had to take their turns,—rather guess they enjoyed it. Judge Stacy was frequently called for, but being quite unwell, had remained in his office. There was no excuse however that would be accepted, and presently the Judge made his appearance, borne upon the shoulders of his neighbors. In a few moments talk he entered into the feelings of the hour, congratulating his neighbors, who with him had labored to reach the glorious results of to-day. Prof. Thomas followed in the same vein—and next came the singing. Stoughton and Henry rendered the Star Spangled Banner fully up to the 10th of April, 1865, the crowd joining in the chorus with a will. After the singing of "Old John Brown" the words variously amended and extemporized to suit the occasion, Old hundred was called for.—With heart and voice the multitude sung,

"Praise God from whom all blessing flow,
Praise him all creatures here below,
Praise Him above ye heavenly host, Praise Father, Son and Holy Ghost," and closely dispersed to touch. Among the voices that were heard frequently, during these hurried and jubilant exercises, was that of Col. Saviers, now bearing aloft the old flag with cheers, and now leading in the cheers for his brave comrades in the field.

Incidents, numerous and touching, cannot be here given; one thing, however should be known to the people. Our village Board, early in the morning sent the Marshall with a message of salutary advice to all the saloons requesting they should close their establishments on this day of rejoicing. The consequence was that the pleasures of the day were not marred by scenes of drunkenness. Three cheers for the village Board! The afternoon was given to preparation for a grand illumination, speeches and songs. The village Board had taken the matter in hand, and by sunset the arrangements were complete. The ringing of the bells, firing of canon, and lighting the bonfires were the signal for the gathering of the people and the renewal of their rejoicing.

Details of the evenings proceedings must be omitted, with simply noting a few things. The illumination of the stores and private residences was accomplished with much taste, and with many befitting mottoes.

The vast crowd, such as perhaps never thronged our streets before, on so short a notice, was called to order by Mr. Bills Esq. and reverently uncovering their heads joined in prayer, Rev. D. C. Wright leading.

The meeting in the evening was more solemn, the first burst of uncontrolled feeling having somewhat subsided. The hearts of the people were filled with a calm and deep gratitude. The music and speeches were decidedly in point—everything in perfect harmony—not one discordant sentiment, as was attested by the repeated cheers.

It was a glorious sight, to see men of all political parties, men from all the professions; physicians, clergymen, lawyers, and "Uncle Sim" to boot, grasping each other by the hand, and vieying with each other in the enjoyments of the hour. If the sight was glorious, the sound was not less so. By speech and song the glory was given to God, our brave men were lauded, and all, as Judge Stacy said, breathed freer." Whatever differences of opinion had existed in the past respecting the origin and issues of the war, all felt that they had now passed away. All men spake one voice. The general conclusion was that the war was NOT a failure, that Richmond could be taken—ALMOST; the rebellion subdued SLIGHTLY, and the Star Spangled Banner yet "wave o'er the land of the free and the home of the brave."

At 10 o'clock p.m. with unbounded satisfaction the people again sung to old hundred, the doxology and went to their homes feeling, that Tecumseh had done honor to herself in thus nobly and heartily responding to the gift of victory from the hand of Him who reigns above and doeth his pleasure.

A Proclamation.

WHEREAS, for some time past vessels of war of the United States have been refused in certain ports privelages and immunities to which they were entitled by treaty, public law or the comity of of nations, at the same time vessels of war of that country, in which the said privileges and immunities have been withheld, have enjoyed them fully and uninterruptedly in the ports of the U. S. which condition of things has not always been forcibly resisted by the United States, although, on the other hand they have not at times failed to protest against and declare their dissatisfaction with the same, to the evil of the U. S.; no condition any longer exists which can be claimed to justify the denial to them by any one of the said nations of the customary naval rights which has heretofore been so much unnecessarily presisted in;

Now, therefore, I Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States, do hreby make known, that if after a reasonable time shall have elapsed for the intelligence of this proclamation to have reached any foreign country in those ports the said privelages and immunities shall have been refused as foresaid they shall continue to to be so refused, and thenceforth the same privileges and immunities shall be refused to the vessles of war of the country in the ports of the U. S. shall have been placed upon an entire equality in the foreign ports foresaid with similar vessels of other countries. The U. S., whatever claims or pretense may have existed heretofore, are now at least entitled to an entire and friendly equality of right and hospitalities with all maritime notions.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the U. S to be affixed. Done at the City of Washington this eleventh day of April, A. D. 1865, and of the Independance of the United States of America the 89th [Signed] A. LINCOLN.

By the President:
WM. H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.

What it Means.

We are frequently asked what these recent Proclamations of the President mean, for the people have learned that whether as published as some of the chivalry, or not, when Old Abe Lincoln issues a Proclamation it means something.

Well, they mean that the days of our national humiliation before the world are past, and that in the opinion of our President and his cabinet that we are now "strong enough to be perlite to."

That if foreign nations will still, under pretence of holding the confederate pirates to be belligerents while they have not a single port of their own which they can enter, refuse to us the right to coal, repair, and furnish our ships in their ports, they can no longer be permitted to enjoy these important and almost necessary commercial advantages in any of our ports.

And with regard to those Southern posts, which are now declared closed by by proclamation, it only remains to declare the admitted right of every nation to decide for itself which of its posts shall, and which shall not, be posts of entry, and to announce to the world, that we shall no longer trouble ourselves to blockade these posts with a cordon of war vessels, but if any one chooses, after this Proclamation takes effect to try to enter them he is at perfect liberty to do so subject only to the following slight inconveniences, to wit: first, that the forts that guard these posts shall blow him out of the water if they can, and secondly, that his ship and cargo shall be confiscated if he does get in—that is all.

Success of the 7-30 Loan.

Our readers will notice that subscriptions to the popular 7-30 Loan are still continued in the most liberal manner: To the Old World the success of these Peoples' Loans is one of the wonders of a Republic. The Government does not seek to borrow in foreign markets; it offers no premiums to bankers, but appeals directly to the people, and with what success is sufficiently shown by the fact that during forty-three days they subscribed and paid the cash down for one hundred and sixty-one million dollars of the 7-30 Loan. There can be no stronger evidence of public confidence in Government securities. While nearly all other stocks have gone down from twenty to fifty, and even a greater per cent, within a few weeks, all forms of U. S. bonds and stocks have remained firm except the slight fluctuations that are incident to all rapid changes in the money market. Our readers will remember that the subscribers to the 7-30 Loan recieve semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three-tenths per cent. per annum in currency, and at the end of three years from June 15th, 1865, they will have the option of receiving payment in full, or converting their notes into a 5-20 six per cent. gold interest bond. The late great decline in the premium on gold makes these notes more desirable than ever as an investment, and it should not be forgotten that their exemption from state or municipal taxation adds largely to their value. There is no interruption in the receipt of subscriptions or the delivery of the notes. All banks, bankers, and others acting as Loan Agents, will pay subscribers the interest in advance from the day of subscription until June 15th.

The News.

The State Departmegt believes the British Government will revoke the recognition of belligerent rights of the Confederacy, on receipt of the president's proclamation in reference to the closing of ports.

Among the officers surrendered by Gen. Lee are one General-in-Chief, three Lieutenant Generals, 17 Major Generals, 61 Brigadiers; and the number of men from 20,000 to 22,000.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Fox, and party, have arrived at Havanna, en route to Charleston.

A fight took place on Monday in Fairfax county, Virginia, between some troops sent by Lee, before his surrender, and some of our men, in which the rebs were worsted.

An engagement with Mosby's guerillas was had by some of our troops on Monday, about 14 miles from Washington.—The "gorilla" skedaddled.

Richmond has been damaged by the late fire to the amount of $2,146,240.—Manchester was not damaged in any way.

Arguelles has been sentenced to perpetual banishment from Cuba, 10 years in the chain gang in Africa, and to pay a fine of $50,000.

It is stated that 4,000 of Maximilian's troops have reached La Sal, Yucatan, to attempt the conquest of that country.

There was a report in Washington on Monday, that Gen. Johnston had surrendered to Gen. Sherman on the same terms which were wanted to Lee.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT IN BLISSFIELD.—A correspondent writing from Blissfield yesterday afternoon says: "On receipt news of the capture of Richmond in this place, our cannon was brought out and taken to the river bank at the end of the railroad bridge, opposite the house of Mr. Charles Walton. A returned soldier named Briggs, from the town of Dover, volunteered to apply the match. After firing a few rounds, and at the suggestion of some indiscreet person, the gun was overloaded with rifle powper and packed with small stones, and some say, pieces of brick. Upon this presure the gun burst and no wonder, instantly killing Mr. Briggs, and wounding one other person. A part of the gun weighing 50 pounds passed through the upper story of Watson's house where it struck a heavy to a chest, which stopped its further progress. Another part passed east of this house some ten feet, tearing down the fences and turning up the earth in several places in its passage. I have examined this portion and found indentions in the side of the bore one sixteenth of an inch deep, evidenced conclusively the cause of the gun's bursting. Other parts of the gun went several rods in other directions. It is needless to add that many persons had a providential escape."

The Latest News.

Thursday April 13th '65

We give to our readers this morning another glorious programme of Union successes, viz.: the capture of the rebel Gens. Forrest and Ruddy, with their commands, by Gen Wilson, the capture of Selma, Ala., and surrender of Lynchburg as also reported capture of Montgomery—one of the largest "bills of fare" of the season, and one of which suggests the very near approach of "that last ditch" and "sour apple tree" which we often hear mentioned in connection with the "chivalry."

Secretary Seward, in his dispatches to our foreign ministers, takes the ground that the rebellion is crushed. The Secretary gives notice to foreign powers that it is expected rebel pirates will not longer beallowed to enter foreign ports.

It is reported the Emperor Napoleon is dangerously sick. The late news from America will not help him.

The Secretary of War has issued an important order. There is to be no more drafting or recruiting in the loyal States. The number of general and staff officers is to be reduced. All trade restrictions are to be removed.

Important News.

Editor of the HERALD:—Subjoined is an item of news for your "Local"—which you may not have heard of. We know that you are always "on guard" in relation to "war news" like the following—Richmond has fallen,—is evacuated—nothing there—not even a doleful sound is heard from the Toombs. The confederate War Pilot has dropped Lee-ward; the "Old Flag" is planted in the very heart of Rebellion. That Sherman and Sheridan and the valiant Gen. Custer are knawing at the vitals of poor "Dixie—Philibuster."

But this is to inform you Gen'l. Moore, assisted by Adj. Gen. Andersen and Lieut. Fred Taylor, has completely vanquished Old Price and captured his entire stock of Dry Goods—which is now on exhibition and for sale at panic prices, at the Dry Goods Emporium of R. C. Moore of this village. Reader do not fail to visit this establishment and ask for prices of goods—they will astonish you by the GREAT REDUCTION in values. If any reader has been drowsy for the last month, he will conclude that he has "waked up" clear back in the year 1858, when prints and sheetings were selling for a "mere song,"—now, the song of a "quarter," will buy all you want. Reader, (if the crowd don't keep you out) "go in"—at Moore's and buy yourself rich.

The Subscriber having sold his Stock of Goods to A. Hanford, requests those indebted to him—also those indebted to the late Firm of Wheeler & Waring—to make immediate payment, as he is anxious to close up his business. At present said Notes and Accounts will be found with S. C. LeBaron, at Hood's Clothing Store, who is authorized to settle the same. Prompt attention will save legal costs. Tecumseh, Feb. 15, 1865.

Tecumseh, June 11th, 1863.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

By authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned has assumed the General Subscription Agency for the sale of United States Treasury Notes, bearing seven and three tenths per cent. interest, per annum, known as the

SEVEN-THIRTY LOAN.

These Notes are issued under date of June 15th, 1864, and are payable three years from that time, in currency, or are convertible at the option of the holder into

U. S. 5-20 Six per cent. GOLD-BEARING BONDS.

These bonds are worth a premium which increases the actual profit on the 7-30 loan, and its exemption from State and municipal taxation, which adds from one to three per cent. more, according to the rate levied on other property. The interest is payable in currency semi-annually by coupons attached to each note, which may be cut off and sold to any bank or banker.

The interest amounts to

One cent	per day	on a	$50	note.
Two cents	"	"	$100	"
Ten "	"	"	$500	"
20 "	"	"	$1000	"
$1 "	"	"	$5000	"

Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions and the notes forwarded at once. The interest to 15th June next will be paid in advance. This is

The Only Loan in Market,

now offered by the Government, and it is confidently expected that its superior advantage will make it the Great Popular Loan of the People.

Less than $300,000,000 of the loan authorized by the last Congress are now on the market. This amount, at the rate at which it is being absorbed, will all be subscribed for within four months, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans.

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscription at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

DR. ROBACK'S
and
BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of those Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. Prospectus of the Jackson Daily Citizen.

On or about the 27th of March, the proprietors of the Jackson Weekly CITIZEN propose to issue a FIRST CLASS DAILY PAPER, to fill a pressing want, which has long been felt in Central Michigan; now one of the most populous and wealthy sections of the State.

We propose to issue a Journal, respectable in size, containing the full Telegraphic Reports of the Associated Press, the latest Markets, and all the General News of the day. Particular attention will be paid to Local and State News, and everything that goes to make a Daily Paper interesting to all. In fact, we propose to make a LIVE DAILY PAPER, fully up to the times, dealing fairly and squarely with all the issues of the day, and earnestly advocating those views and principles, which we believe will be for the best interests of our common country. While it will be the organ of no man or clique, it will support the administration in a vigorous prosecution of the war, until the old flag again floats over every foot of the National domain, and until the last vestige of armed rebellion is swept from the land.

With a Journal of this character, looking closely after, and advancing the INTERESTS of this LOCALITY, not violently partizan, but firm, independent and manly in tone, we appeal to all classes of our citizens for a prompt, hearty and generous support.

We shall issue a MORNING PAPER, that will reach, at least, six of our interior counties in advance of any other Daily. With a new POWER PRESS, operated by STEAM, and new type, we expect to make a handsome sheet, fresh and attractive in appearance, and as a NEWSPAPER worthy the confidence and patronage of all.

Our Weekly will be changed to a quarto in form, and will contain 48 colums of matter, over 40 of which will embrace the cream of the Daily, selected with the utmost care.

With these improvements the weekly Citizen will be as valuable in any household, and will contain as much interesting matter as any of the Eastern weeklies.

The Daily Citizen will reach Tecumseh at 8 o'clock A. M., six or seven hours in advance of any other paper, and will contain the latest war news. Mr. G T. Ketcham will have charge of our circulation in Tecumseh. Subscribers are requested to hand in their names early.

A Lesson for Boys.

Foolhardness is not courage; and the boy that boasts of his prowess is generally a coward at heart.

Frank was very fond of displaying what he called courage; and although he usually came off second best in any trial of strength, it did not make him think any less of himself.

One day he was anxious to cross the street, which was so blockaded with wagons and omnibuses that it was unsafe for any one to attempt to make his way through them. But Frank pushed ahead seized hold of the bits of the horses, and, by various manouvers and quick movements, gained the opposite sidewalk.

What good did it do him do you suppose?

Why he had the satisfaction of knowing that he had accomplished what very few would think of attempting; and he received what he did get calculate upon, a bite on his arm from one of the animals with which he had contested for the right of way.

His next grand performance was trying the parachute. This he did by opening an umberella out of the second story story window, holding it out by one hand and springing from the window sill into the yard beneath. But he miscalculated the distance, besides not being perfect in the philosophy of the thing, he struck heavy on his heels, and jarring his system so that he was confined to his bed for more than a week. He was very sensitive about it, and becoame quite angry if we mentioned "parachute" to him.

But now to the saddest part of my story. His mother came to me and I saw sorrow in her face.

"Have you seen Frank lately?" she asked.

"Not since last week Tuesday, I think. Is he lost? What is the matter?"

"He's safe now;" and she sighed heavily.

I would not torture that mother's heart. My first thought was that he was in the Tombs.

In the store where he was employed, there was a hoistway connecting with every story, from the ground floor to the roof, down which hung a rope with a large iron hook at the end. You may see the like in large warehouses. On this rope the clerks were accustomed to exercise in the mornings, and Frank was always more daring than any.

On this morning in particular, he had ascenced the rope hand over hand, as far as the third story. Here swung back and forth, touching the platform with his feet on either side.

After a while the clerks below shouted to him to come down; but he did not heed the call. So they left him and went to their several duties. Presently the building shook, as if the fall of some heavy body; and there, on the floor under the hoistway, lay the lifeles form of poor Frank.

Hoping for A Hope.

A dying man from thirst stands before fountain.

"Have you drank?"

"No! but I hope I shall."

"Do you wish to drink?"

"No! but I hope I shall wish to drink."

"Do you see that you are just ready to die for want of water?"

"No! but I hope I shall see it."

"Why does he not drink? Because he has no desire to. Why, then, does he stand there? Because he hopes he shall have such a desire But if the promptings of dying agony, and the sweet gushings streams before him leave him without that desire, what does his life amount to?

So stand we poor sinners by the fountain of the water of life. We look at the waters, and look at those that are drinking, and look at the invitation, "whosoever will," and then stand there still and hope that we shall drink. What is such a hope good for? Why not take the water of life freely?" This hoping for a hope is often the devil's opiate for a partially awakened sinner. Gods direction is "Lay hold upon the hopes set before you."

A GOOD EXCUSE.—A soldier of Sheridan's army, accused of raiding privately on the enemy, plead in justification that he lived so constantly on turkey on the march that he couldn't help becoming a gobbler.

☞ 'Tis a sad thing when men have neither heart enough to speak well, nor judgment enough to hold their tongues; this is the foundation of all impertinence.

About Sleep.

There are two kinds of sleep,—the complete and incomplete. Complete sleep is a temporary metaphysical death, though not an organic one. The heart and lungs perform their offices with their accustomed redularity. It is characterized by a torpor of the organs of the brain, of the external senses, and of voluntary motions Incomplete sleep is the activity of one or more of the cerebrian organs, while the others are in repose: this occasions dreaming.

Sleep is variously affected by health and disease. Man in time of health sleeps tranquilly. He arises in the morning, refreshed and prepared to go forth to his daily labor. New strength is given him; languor is gone; and all the faculties, both mental and corporeal, are recruited. But the sleep of disease is far different. It is short and unrefreshing; disturbed by fearful sights and frightful dreams.

Stupor and sleep are different, though supposed by some to be synonymous. In both there is insensibility; but it is easy to wake a person from sleep, while it is sometimes almost impossible to arouse one from stupor. It is frequently the case in sickness that a person lies for several days in stupor, totally insensible.

Though sleep be natural, and necessary to the languid mental and corporeal faculties, yet it is frequently brought on by some external cause. Heat produces sleep. We witness it in the summer season: it is common to see the laborer devoting an hour in the heat of the day to sleep. A heated church and dull sermon and are almost sure fo bring sleep. The heat of the church might be resisted, but the sermon is irresistible. Its monotony falls in leaden accents on the ear, and soon subdues the most powerful attention. Variety, whether in sight or sound, prevents sleep; while excessive monotony of all kinds is apt to induce it. Excessive cold, as well as heat, produces sleep A person without sufficient clothing on his bed will find it difficult to sleep at night; but it is a fact that sleep is produced before death, when freezing takes place.

Bells.

The steel fire bell for the city of San Francisco, which was exhibited at the park in this city, was cast by Naylor, Vickers & Co., of England. The metal for that bell was melted in 106 pots of 100 lbs. each, and it took 196 men to pour it. By improvements which have been made in this country, we can now cast a bell of that size by the labor of six men, and the cost is reduced from $1 per lb. to 25 cents per lb. The steel is made is made in the same furnace in which it is melted.

We sent one of our steel beels weighing 800 lbs. to the western part of the State, and received word from the purchasers that it could not be heard two miles. Having an order from Ohio for a bell of the same size we gave directions to have this bell forwarded to fill the order. The Ohio purchasers wrote us that the bell could be heard eight or ten miles.

The cost of renewing bells in the place of those broken in the city of New York is $20,000 per annum. And for the last year it will amount to $40,000. When the clapper strikes in one place, if the metal is too soft a hole is soon beaten through, and if the alloy is too hard the bell will be cracked. Several efforts have been made to prevent the clapper from beating in one spot. One plan is to have the bell slowly revolve, another is to have the clapper revolve around the axis of the bell. This plan has been successful, increasing very considerably the durability of the bell.

When we cast eight or ten bells from the same reservoir of metal, we find that the one cast first has a different tone and quality from the one cast last, and this is doubtless due to the gradual cooling of the metal. I am trying to make a pyrometer to measue the temperature of our metal in order to obtain a more uniform quality of bell. If the metal is too hot when the casting is made the bell will be brittle, while if it is not as hot as it should be it will not be closely and firmly united. —Scientific American.

☞ Boys, remember that it costs nothing to be respectful and polite, not only to your superiors in age and wisdom, but all with whom you come in contact. Do not allow yourself to be outdone by the verriest beggar, be his complexion white or black. Politeness costs nothing, and you will find it a great help, as well as pleasure, in smoothing your way through a cold and heartless world.

National Calamnity!!

Assassination of President and Secretary of State!

DETAILS OF THE SAD EVENT!

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Presirent Lincoln and his wife, with other friends, last evening, visited Ford's Theatre, for the purpose of witnessing the performance of the American Cousin. It was announced in the papers that Gen. Grant would also be present, but that gentlemen took the late train of cars for New Jersy.—The theatre was densely crowded, and everybody seemed delighted with the scene before them.

During the third act, and while there was a temporary pause for one of the actors to entre, a sharp report of a pistol was heard, which merely attracted attention, but suggested nothing serious until a man rushed to the front off the President's box, waiving his long dagger in his right hand and exclaiming "Sic semper tyrranis," and immediately leaped form the box, which was the second tier to the stage beneath, and ran across to the opposite side of tha state, making his escape, amid the bewilderment of the audience, from the rear of the theatre, and mounting a horse fled.

The screams of Mrs. Lincoln first disclosed the fact to the audience, that the President had been shot, when all persons rose to their feet rushing towards the stage, many exclaiming "hang him."

The excitement was of the wildest possible description, and of course there was an abrupt intercession of theatrical performance. There was a rush towards the President's box, when cries were heard, "stand back and give him air!"—"Has any one stimulants!" On a hasty examination, it was found that the President was shot through the head, and above and back of the temporal bone, and some of the brains were oozing out. He was removed to a private house opposite the theatre and the Surgeon General of the army and other Surgeons were sent for to attend to his condition.

On examination of the private box, blood was discovered on the back of the cushioned rocking-chair, on which the President had been sitting, also on the partition, and on the floor. A common single-barreled pocket pistol was found on the carpet.

A military guard was placed in front of the private residence to which the President had been conveyed. An immense crowd was in front of it, all deeply anxious to learn the condition of the President. It had been previously announced that the wound was mortal, but all hoped otherwise. The shock to the community was terible.

At midnight the Cabinet, Messrs. Sumner, Farnsworth, Judge Bates, Governor Oglesby, General Meigs, Colonel Hay, and a few personal friends, with Surgeon General Barnes and his immediate Assistants were around his bedside. The President was in a state of syncope totally insensible, and breathing slowly. The blood oozed f om his wounds at the back of his head.

The surgeon exhausted every possible effort of medical skill, but all hope was gone. The parting of the dying President with his family is too sad for description.

The President and Mrs. Lincoln did not start for the Theatre until 15 minutes after 8 o'clock. Speaker Colfax was at the White House at the time. The President stated to him that he was going although Mrs. Lincoln had not been well, because the papers had announced that General Grant was to be present and as General Grant had gone North, he did not wish the audience to be disappointed.

He went with apparant reluctance, and urged Mr. Colfax to go with him, but that gentleman had made other engagements.

When the excitement at the Theatre was at its wildest height, reports were circulated that Secretary Seward had been assassinated. On reaching this gentleman's residence a crowd and military guard were around the door and on entering it was ascertained that the reports were based on truth. Everybody was so excited that scarcely an intelligible word could be gathered, but the facts are substantially as follows:

About 10 o'clock a man rang a bell and the call having been answered by a colored servant, he said he had come from Dr Veidie, Secretary Seward's family Physician, with a prescription, at the same time holding in his hand a small piece of folded paper, and saying, in answer to a refusal, that he must see the Secretary, as he was entrusted with particular directions concerning the medicine. He still insisted on going up, although repeatedly informed that no one could enter the chamber, he pushed the servant aside and walked heavily towards the Secretary's room. He was there met by Mr Fred Seward, of whom he demanded to see the Secretary, making the same representation which he did to the servant.

What further passed in the way of colloquy, is not known, but the man struck him on the head with a "billy," severely injuring the skull and felling him almost senseless. The assassin then rushed into the chamber and attacked Mr. Seward, Paymaster of the United States Army, and William Hansell, disabling them. He then rushed upon the Secretary, who was lying in bed in the same room, and inflicted three stabs in the neck, but severing, it is thought and hoped no arteries, though he bled profusely. The assassin then rushed down stairs and mounted his horse at the door, and rode off before an alarm could sounded, and in the same manner as the assassination of the President.

It is believed the injuries of the Secretary are not fatal, nor that of either of the others, although both the Secretary and Assistant Secretary are very seriously injured.

Secretary Stanton and Welles and other prominent officers of the Government called at Secretary Seward's house to inquire into his condition, and there heard of the assasination of the President. They then proceeded to the house where he was lying, exhibiting of course, intense anxiety and solicitude.

An immense crowd was gathered in front of the President's House, and a strong Guard was also stationed there, many persons evidently supposing he would be brought to his home. The entire city to-night presents a scene of wild excitement, accompanied by violent expressions of indignation and the profoundest sorrow—many shedding tears.

The military authorities have dispatched mounted patrols in every direction in order, if possible, to arrest the assassins.

The whole Metropolitan Police are out-likewise for the same purpose. The attacks, both at the theatre and at Secretary Seward's house, took place at about the same hour.

WAR DEPARTMENT, WALHINGTON April 15th, 4:10 A. M.

TO GENERAL DIX:—The President continues insensible and is sinking.

Secretary Seward remains without change.

Frederick Seward's skull is fractured in two places, besides a severe cut on the head.

The President is still alive, but hopeless.

Maj. Seward's wounds not dangerous.

It is now ascertained with reasonable certainty that two assassins were engaged in the crime, Wilkes Booth being the one that shot the President and the other a companion of his, whose name is unknown, but whose description is so clear that he can hardly escape.

It appears from a letter found in Booth's trunk, the murder was planed before the 4th of March, but fell through then because the accomplice backed out until Richmond could be heard from. Booth and his accomplice were at the livery stable at 6 o'clock last evening and left there with their horses about 10 o'clock, or shortly before that hour. It would seem that they had for several days been seeking for a chance, but for some unknown reason it was not carried into effect until last night. One of them has evidently made his way to Baltimore.—The other has not yet been traced.

EDWIN M. STANTON.

WAR DEPARTMENT, Washington, April 15th, 1865.

TO MAJ. GEN. DIX:—Abraham Lincoln died this morning at 22 minutes after 7 o'clock. E. M. STANTON.

WASHINGTON, April 15—12 M.—Andrew Johnson was sworn into office as President of the United States by Chief Justice Chase, to-day at 11 o'clok. Secretary McCulloch and Attorney General Speed and others were present. He remarked, "The duties are mine. I will perform them, trusting in God."

The murderer of President Lincoln was John Wilkes Booth. His hat was found in the private box and identified by several persons who had seen him within the last two days, and the spur, which he dropped by accident after he jumped to the stage, was identified as one of those which he had obtained from the stable where he hired his horse. This

John Booth has played here than once at Ford's theatre, and is of course acquainted with its exit and entrances, and the facility with which he made his escape behind the scenes is easily understood.

The person who attacked Sec. Seward left behind him a slouched hat and an old rusty naval revolver. The chambers of the revolver were broken loose from the barrel, as if done by striking. The loads were drawn from the chambers, one being but a rough piece of lead and the other a ball smaller than the chambers, wrapped in paper, as if to keep them from falling out.

WASHINGTON, April 15—11 A. M.—The Star's extra says that at 7:20 o'clock the President breathed his last, closing his eyes as if falling to sleep and his countenance assuming an expression of perfect serenity. There were no indications of pain, and it was not known that he was dead until the gradually decreasing respiration ceased altogether. The Rev. Dr. Gurley, of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, immediately on it being ascertained that life was extinct, knelt at the bed-side and offered an impressive prayer, which was responded to by all present. Dr. Gurley then proceeded to the front parlor, where Mrs. Lincoln, Capt. Robert Lincoln, Mrs. John Hay, (wife of the Private Sec'y) and others were waiting, when he again offered a prayer for the consolation of the family.

Immediately after the President's death, a Cabinet meeting was called by Secretary Stanton, and held in the room in which the corpse lay. Secretaries Stanton, Welles and Usher, Postmaster Gen. Dennison and Attorney General Speed were present. The results of the conference are as yet unknown.

Reports prevail that Mr. Frederick W. Seward, who was kindly assisting the nursing of Secretary Seward, received a stab in the back. His shoulder blade prevented the knife or dagger from penetrating into his body. Reports are that he will recover.

A report was circulated repeated by almost every body that Booth was captured 15 miles this side of Baltimore. If it be true, as asserted, that the War Department has received such information, it would doubtless be officially promulgated.

Government Departments are closed by order and will be draped with proper emblems of mourning.

The roads leading to and from the city are guarded by military, and the utmost circumspection is observed as to all attempting to enter or leave the city.

Two gentlemen who went to the Secretary of War to apprise him of the attack on Mr. Lincoln, met at the residence of the former, a man muffled in a cloak, who when accosted by them hastened away. It had been Mr. Stanton's intention to accompany Mr. Lincoln to the theatre and occupy the same box, but the press of business prevented; therefore it seems evident that the aim of plotters was to paralize the country by at once striking down the head, the heart and the arm of the country.

As soon as the dreadful events were announced in the streets, superintendent Richards and his assistants were at work to discover the assassin. In a few moments the telegraph had aroused the whole police force of the city. Mayor Wallack and several members of the city government were soon on the spot, and every precaution was taken to preserve order and quiet in the city. Every street in Washington was patrolled at the request of Mr. Richards, Gen. Augur sent horses to mount the police. Every road leading from Washington was strongly picketed, and every possible avenue of escape was thoroughly guarded. Steamboats about to depart down the Potomic were stopped.

The Daily Chronicle says: It is suspected that this conspiracy originated in Maryland. The telegraph flashed the mournful news to Baltimore, and all the cavalry was immediately put upon active duty. Every road was picketed and every precaution taken to prevent the escape of the assassin.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The assassin of President Lincoln left behind him his hat and a spur. The hat was picked up in the President's box and has been identified by parties to whom it has been shown, as the one belonging to the suspected man, and accurately described by other parties not allowed to see it before describing it. The spur was dropped upon the stage, and that also has been identified as the one procured at the stable where the same man hired a horse in the evening. A preliminary examination was made by Messrs. Richards and his assistants. Several persons were called to testify, and the evidence as elicited before an informal tribunal, and not under oath, was conclusive to this point.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The body of President Lincoln was removed to the Executive mansion, this morning, at 9:30, in a hearse, and wrapped in the American flag. It was escorted by a small guard of cavalry. Gen Augur and other military officers followed on foot. A dense crowd accompanied the remains to the White House, where a military guard excluded the crowd, allowing none but persons of the household and intimate friends of the deceased to enter the premises. Senator Yates and Representative Farnsworth were among the number. The body is being embalmed with a view to its removal to Illinois.

TECUMSEH, MICH., APRIL 20, 1865

The Assassination of President Lincoln.

We worth the hour, we worth the deed, and we worth the cause, that compels us to make so sad, and so horrible an announcement to our readers.

President Lincoln is no more. On Friday evening April 14th, 1865, he was struck down by the hand of J. Wilkes Booth, the assassin, one of a band of secession conspirators. We do not propose to repeat the sad particulars of the infamous deed, as they will sufficiently appear in our news columns.

A great and good man has fallen and fallen too, in the attempted consummation of a crime unparalleled in the history of nations.

With the attempt to assassinate Secretary Seward, prostrate as he was upon a bed of sickness the same evening, our readers are familiar. It is now also evident that the conspirators designed likewise to assassinate the Vice President—the entire Cabinet—and Lieut. General Grant, in one common massacre. But they were not permitted to carry out their plans, and the murderous blow took effect only upon the best friend these guilty rebels, had or could have in the entire nation.

President Lincoln has fallen, and an entire nation mourns his loss, but that will not restore him. Ere thirty days shall have passed away the Rebels too will mourn his loss, but that will not restore him. The noble mind, and heart and hand, that, under God, has so long and so successfully, and acceptably guided us amid the accumulated perils, of such a Rebellion as the world never saw, can be ours no more.

He has fallen, one martyr more to universal freedom, but he has left us the priceless legacy of that second declaration of independence, his noble Emancipation Proclamation, which will never be repealed and cannot die.

The foul assassination of President Lincoln was indeed a great crime, but as Andy Johnson, upon whom his mantle has now fallen, has well said, it is only a part of that greater crime, attempted by the whole slaveholding conspiracy of the South, the assassination of the Republic. Treason is not merely a difference of political opinion, it is a deep, damning crime, against life and liberty, law and order, man and God, and any nation that would not yield itself up a sacrifice to suicide, must not hesitate so to regard and so to punish it.

As was well said by another, pardon the guilty instigators and prime movers of this barbarous and bloody rebellion, and just as sure as history does not lie, their children's children in less than half a century will prove to be more desperate and bloody traitors, than their infamous Grandfather's ever were or could be.

It is this accursed Slavery that has assasinated our noble President, it is Slavery the sworn foe of liberty and equal rights, that has attempted to destroy our nation, that has murdered, imprisoned, poisoned, starved and destroyed our fathers and our brothers, our husbands and our fair haired children, on every hill and plain from the Rio Grande to the Ohio, and yet it has had its apologists even in our midst, and men have almost feared to call it, as it is a foul crime to be cursed alike of God and man, and it needed, perhaps, this last foul fiendish blow in its behalf, to bring our whole nation as one man to their feet, and compel them, each, to raise his strong right arm to Heaven and swear by the Eternal that Treason and Slavery shall die the Death.

As the Carthagenian Hamilcar made Hannibal his son to swear eternal hatred to the Romans, so let us teach our children to swear eternal hatred to this sworn foe to liberty and man and as old Cato the Roman censor, in his corresponding hate of Carthage could end no speech in the Roman Senate, upon whatever subject—save with these memorable words "Carthago delenda est" (Carthage is to be blotted out,) so let our motto hence forward be, until it is taken up and re-echoed the wide world round, servitium delendum est.

☞ Surratt, the assassin, claimed to have been a laborer on the railroad, and said he earned his living by his pickaxe. He told contradictory stories during the investigation. He asserted frequently that he was a poor man and could neither read nor write, but his language was that of a man of education, and his feet and hands were small, the latter being white and soft as a woman's. He was identified by Mr. Seward's servants and by Miss Seward. He was heavily ironed and placed on board a gunboat. It is believed Booth's trail has not yet been discovered, but that he will be in custody ere morning.

The Assassination of Lincoln and Seward.

At an ex-tempore meeting of some of the leading citizens of Tecumseh, at the Banking Office of P. Bills & Co., soon after the receipt of the astounding news of the assasination of our noble President and able Secretary of State, on Saturday, the following impromptu resolutions presented by the various gentlemen present were accepted and directed to be brought before the more public meeting at Bidwell's Hall, the same evening, for further consideration:

Resolved, That the recent brutal assassination of the President and Secretary of State of the United States, at a time when they were devoting all their talents and energies so generously and hopefully for the pacification of the country and preservation of the Union, involves crime of so horrible a nature and so repugnant to the American character, that it appears more like the action of fiends than of men and we find it scarcely possible to credit its reality.

Resolved, That our nation, overwhelmed with wo, as it must need be, at the cruel and causeless assassination of our President and Secretary of State, will nevertheless retain the same abiding confidence in the innate power of the Republic, under God, to defend the right, and will continue to maintain the same inflexible determination to crush out treason and rebellion wherever it may lift its hydra head, and to demand, and if need be, compel the usual courtesy and comity of surrounding nations.

Resolved, That not only our duty to our country, but respect and honor to the memory of our murdered Patriots demand united and continued efforts on the part of every citizen to suppress the rebellion, and restore to the entire of our beloved country the rule of the constitution and the law, and thus give traitors and tyrants to understand that though assassins may destroy while virtue and patriotism remain Liberty and Law are imperishable.

Resolved, That in the sudden and unexpected death of President Lincoln and Secretary Seward, at this peculiar juncture of our national affairs, and when the whole people had become so proudly confident of their entire fitness and ability to guide the ship of State safely through all rough billows that have threatened to engulph it, whether of rebellion at home, or intervention abroad, we have met with a loss that cannot but seem almost irreparable.

Resolved, That we do therefore most earnestly and reverently invoke the guidance and blessings of Almighty God upon this nation and its rulers in this time of our sore trial and bereavment, and that out of the great darkness now surrounding us He will gracious bring us into the more perfect light.

Resolved, That in token of these our deepest convictions and feelings, all our residences, places of business, school houses, and churches shall be suitably be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days.

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to make arrangements for a general meeting of our citizens, to secure a speaker or speakers for the occasion and to give notice of the time and place of such meeting in the most public manner.

On Saturday evening at an early hour in accordance with the call indicated above, Bidwell's Hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, with the saddest and most earnest audience ever convened in Tecumseh

Perley Bills was called to the chair and Lucius Lilley appointed Secretary.

Meeting was opened by prayer by the Rev. John I. Fulton. After reading the able article of that days Toledo Blade, giving a statement of the position of affairs, as there understood, the above resolutions were called for and unanimously adopted.

Impromptu addresses were then called for from B. L. Baxter, Esq., Rev. D. C. Wright, Rev. Mr. Ray, Dr. M. A. Patterson, Rev. S. E. Wishard, and Perley Bills, Esq.

In accordance with the last resolution a committee of five, consisting of Lucius Lilley, B. L. Baxter, M. A. Patterson, Albert Anderson and Simeon Davidson, were appointed to make arrangements for a future meeting.

Resolved, Also, that the above proceedings be published in the Tecumseh Herald, and after singing the Old Hundred Doxology, by the whole audience standing, and prayer and the Benediction by Rev. S. E. Wishard, the meeting adjourned.

P. BILLS, President.

L. LILLEY, Secretary.

☞ The editor of a Western paper having lent his axe to one of his subscribers, the borrower unfortunately broke off the handle. On returning the man said: 'you can easily get it fixed.' 'Yes' replied the editor, 'but that will cost at least a quarter of a dollar.' 'Well,' rejoined the borrower, 'if you 'aint rather small for an editor? Here's the quarter, but I thank you to stop my paper at once.' Quite encouraging.

The News.

It is stated that Lee Surrendered 30,000 prisoners. A special from Washington brings the gratifying intelligence that Johnson and his whole army have surrendered to Sherman. This is glorious if true, and there is no reason to doubt it, as it is known Sherman was in communication with him, and had offered him the came terms offered by Grant to Lee.

Our losses in Grant's campaign are estimated at 10,000 or 11,000.

There is great excitement in Richmond over President Lincoln's assassination, and people are feared at its consequences.

At last accounts Jeff. Davis was at Macon, Georgia. He has $160,000 in gold in a Havana bank.

NEW ORLEANS, April 10, via. CAIRO April 16.—The Times publishes an official dispatch of the capture of Spanish Fort of the town of Blakely. The former was captured at 10:30 on the morning of the 9th, with 700 prisoners. The latter was captured on the same day by assault with over 5,000 prisoners, and a large amount of ordinance stores. Our gunboats and troops were proceeding unresisted towards Mobile, which place was capture last evening by a portion of Gen. Smith's command, assisted by the light draft gunboats, after a short resistance by the enemy.

Gen. Stoneman, in his late raid destroyed 33 Bridges on the East Tennessee and Virginia railroad; and at Salisbury, captured a stand of colors, 19 guns, 1,000,000 rounds of amunition, 10,000 rounds of shells, 60,000 lbs. powder, 75,000 complete suits of clothing; 350,000 army blankets, 20,000 lbs. bacon, 100,000 lbs. salt, 20,000 lbs. sugar, 27,000 lbs. rice, 10,000 lbs. saltpetre, 50,000 bushels wheat, $100,000 worth of medical supplies, and 7,000 bales cotton; also 1 arsenal, 6 depots, 2 engines and trains, etc., were destroyed, besides several miles of railroad track.

Advices from N. C. state that Gov. Vance was captured by our cavalry on 15th inst. between Hillsboro and Raleigh.

Reports from Sherman state that he has had little or no opposition to his march north since leaving Goldsboro.

Official reports from Gen. Canby, State that with the Spanish Fort was captured 25 officers, 538 enlisted men, five mortars and five guns. A latter dispatch announces the capture of Fort Blakely, with 2,400 prisoners and 20 guns.

Mobile has been captured. The Union troops took the Spanish Fort and Fort Blakely, with 5,000 prisoners and 300 guns, and the city garrison evacuated and went up the country.

NEW YORK, April 20.—The Herald has advices from Winchester to the 18th, which state that Mosby surrendered his forces to Gen. Chapman at Berryville on the 17th, after arranging the terms with Gen. Hancock, which were similar to those granted to Gen Lee. It is understood Gen. Roser has also asked that his command be included in the cartee.—Mosby's men number brobably 700

READING, Pa., March 20.

S. Bradford, Esq:

On my return fom Pottsville, the representation to me last evening were such that I sent a special engine to Pottsville after the up evening passenger train, but the man had left the train at Auburn before the telegram could reach it. He walked back to Port Clinton after dark, and stole his passage to Tamaqua on one of our coal trains last night. He is now caught at Tamaqua, where we telegraphed to look out for him, and will be held until identified. There has been some ground for suspicion that it is Booth.

April 20.—Secretary Seward is able to sit up to-day and is improving very fast. Fred K. Seward passed a comfortable night and is also improved.

The Government Loan.

The old issue of the "Seven-Thirty" Loan being fully absorbed a "Three hundred Million" Loan, called "First series," will be issued by the financial department, without interruption, on the same basis of the issue just absorbed; with the exception of its being fundable the 15th of June 1868, instead of the 15th of August 1867, in 5-20-6 per cent. Gold Bearing Bonds, at par or currency, optional with the holder.

The denomination of the notes as heretofore, ranging from "Fifty to Five" thousand dollars, may be had by subscription at the Bank of Messrs. P. Bills & Co. Tecumseh, and at Banks and Bankers generally throughout the country. As these securities are placed within the reach of many—taking into consideration their being "seven and three tenths" per cent. interest, and their being exempt from State, County and City taxation, which adds from "two to five" per cent. on income, gives the invester a fair compensation, aside from giving aid to the financial department of the nation.

We would call the special attention of all who have money lying idle, in sums of "Fifties, Hundred's or Thousand's, in behalf of the only popular Loan now offered for sale by the government. No investment can be safer; it being a first mortgage on all farms, all lands, all incomes, all Railroad and Canal Bonds, and Banks, and other stocks, and pays a better interest.

The interest also, will be paid promptly, semi-annually, by presentation of coupons without charge at the Banking houses generally throughout the country.

Success of the 7-30 Loan.

Our readers will notice that subscriptions to the popular 7-30 Loan are still continued in the most liberal manner: To the Old World the success of these Peoples' Loans is one of the wonders of a Republic. The Government does not seek to borrow in foreign markets; it offers no premiums to bankers, but appeals directly to the people, and with what success is sufficiently shown by the fact that during forty-three days they subscribed and paid the cash down for one hundred and sixty-one million dollars of the 7-30 Loan. There can be no stronger evidence of public confidence in Government securities. While nearly all other stocks have gone down from twenty to fifty, and even a greater per cent. within a few weeks, all forms of U. S. bonds and stocks have remained firm except the slight fluctuations that are incident to all rapid changes in the money market. Our readers will remember that the subscribers to the 7-30 Loan recieve semi-annual interest at the rate of seven and three-tenths per cent. per annum in currency, and at the end of three years from June 15th, 1865, they will have the option of receiving payment in full, or converting their notes into a 5-20 six per cent. gold interest bond. The late great decline in the premium on gold makes these notes more desirable than ever as an investment, and it should not be forgotten that their exemption from state or municipal taxation adds largely to their value. There is no interruption in the receipt of subscriptions or the delivery of the notes. All banks, bankers, and others acting as Loan Agents, will pay subscribers the interest in advance from the day of subscription until June 15th.

Funeral Discourse.

The Rev. J. Wainwright Ray, who has received and accepted a call to the Rectorship of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, in this village, will preach a discourse next Sunday evening at 7 1-2 o'clock, on the assassination of the President, and the attempt on the Life of Secretary Seward. Mr. Ray will give some statements from his personal knowledge of the parties, during a residence in Washington.

BARN BURNED.—A large farm barn belonging to A. U. Sutton, at Raisin Centre, near the Jackson Branch, was destroyed by fire on Thursday of last week. It is supposed that the fire originated from sparks blown from the locomotive on the Jackson train. A large quantity of oats, corn, wheat, clover seed, hay, &c., was stored in the barn, and was mostly destroyed. The flames when discovered had made such progress that barely time was left to remove the horses from the stable. The loss is stated at $1,200, partly covered by insurance.

☞ We would say to those of our readers who have occasion to visit the Post Office, be sure and look at those splendid Photographs of the members of the "Old Folk's Concert" which were taken at the Photograph rooms of Mrs. C. M. Bissell, by that prince of Artists, Mr. R. P. Cooper. His work is equal, if not superior to any that we have ever seen and those wishing good pictures would do well to call there and get them. Read the following which is signed by some of the leading citizens of Ann Arbor;

ANN ARBOR, Feb. 25th, 1865.

"To whom it may concern.—We the undersigned citizens of Ann Arbor, being personally acquainted with the bearer of this, R. P. Cooper and his work as a Photographic Artist of the first class, most cheerfully recommend him to the patronage of all persons wishing work.

The Funeral Obsequies.

In accordance with the call of the committee and the request of our public authorities, on Wednesday last, the citizens of Tecumseh closed their places of business and met in a Union Meeting at the Methodist Church in this village, at the ringing of the bells precisely at 12 o'clock meridian.

The house was crowded to its utmost capacity, and the services were opened with Prayer by the Rev. D. C. Wright—reading of the Scriptures by the Rev. J. J. Fulton, after which, and appropriate singing by the united choirs of our village, a most soul stirring and beautiful and manly eulogy upon our murdered President was pronounced by the Rev. S. E. Wishard, followed by some pointed and scathing remarks, from the Rev. D. C. Wright—after prayer by the Rev. E. N. Nichols, the exercises were closed by the Doxology sung by the choir and the congregation, and the Benediction by the Rev. S. E. Wishard:

The assembly was the most deeply solemn one ever held in this village. The church was heavily and beautifully draped in mourning, and the flag of our country bordered with heavy black covered the altar. All the churces in the place and nearly all the places of business, and private dwellings were also shrouded with the same deep habiliments of wo. It was a sad, thoughtful day for Tecumseh and for our entire nation, and one which will never be forgotten so long as history shall endure. May none of us fail to heed the solemn lessons it should inculcate.

The Sabbath in Tecumseh.

Sabbath morning dawned with no abatement of that profound sorrow which had pressed the people down the day before. At length the church bells began to ring. Every peal was a note of sorrow. Slowly and solemnly the people gathered to their places of worship. No pen may attempt to describe the feelings of Pastors and people as they entered their houses of worship on that morning. Many walked up the aisle weeping, and with bowed heads took their places in the sanctuary. The invocations, reading of the scriptures, singing, and supplications were in keeping with the solemnities of the hour.

The interior of the houses, so appropriately draped with the emblems of sorrow, the pulpits covered with the stary folds of the old national ensigns, gave impressiveness to the scenes. The different pastors spoke as best they could to the people, some of them travelling out of the usual forms of sermonizing, speaking out of the abundance of the heart.

In the evening by common consent a union meeting for prayer and exhortation was held in the M. E. Church. The house was densely packed with solemn listeners. The services, directed by the pastor, Rev. D. C. Wright, were protracted through two hours and a half.—The time was occupied in prayer, singing and pungent addresses. Among the laymen who addressed the meeting were Dr. Hamilton, Mr. Baxter, and Mr. Murray.

Less than $300,000,000 of the loan authorized by the last Congress are now on the market. In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscription at par. DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER

BLOOD PILLS,

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

TO THE RETAIL TRADE.

The present high prices have induced all kinds of experiments, and every kind of substance has been tried as a substitute for Coffee. The vilest trash, under Showy and Taking names, has been thrust upon the public. Bogus and Spurious Coffees, whose chief merit is found in their Labels and Wrappers, have proved alike injurious to the consumer, as also to the retailer. These villainous Compounds have about had their day, and the public taste is fast returning to its first love, and nothing less than a

Good, Fragrant and Wholesome Cup of Coffee can prove Satisfactory.

There is a great and increasing demand for Good Coffee, and our design is to supply this demand.

Prospectus of the Jackson Daily Citizen,

On or about the 27th of March, the proprietors of the Jackson Weekly Citizen propose to issue a FIRST CLASS DAILY PAPER, to fill a pressing want, which has long been felt in Central Michigan, now one of the most populous and wealthy sections of the State.

We propose to issue a Journal, respectable in size, containing the full Telegraphic Reports of the Associated Press, the latest Markets, and all the General News of the day. Particular attention will be paid to Local and State News, and everything that goes to make a Daily Paper interesting to all. In fact, we propose to make a LIVE DAILY PAPER, fully up to the times, dealing fairly and squarely with all the issues of the day, and earnestly advocating those views and principles, which we believe will be for the best interests of our common country. While it will be the organ of no man or clique, it will support the administration in a vigorous prosecution of the war, until the old flag again floats over ever every foot of the Nrtional domain, and until the last vestige of armed rebellion is swept from the land.

With a Journal of this character, looking closely after, and advancing the INTERESTS of this LOCALITY, not violently partizan, but firm, independent and manly in tone, we appeal to all classes of our citizens for a prompt, hearty and generous support.

We shall issue a MORNING PAPER, that will reach, at least, six of our interior counties in advance of any other Daily.—With a new POWER PRESS, operated by STEAM, and new type, we expect to make a handsome sheet, fresh and attractive in appearance, and as a NEWSPAPER worthy the confidence and patronage of all.

Our Weekly will be changed to a quarto in form, and will contain 48 colums of matter, over 40 of which will embrace the cream of the Daily, selected with the utmost care.

With these improvements the weekly Citizen will be as valuable in any household, and will contain as much interesting matter as any of the Eastern weeklies.

The Daily Citizen will reach Tecumseh at 8 o'clock A. M., six or seven hours in advance of any other paper, and will contain the latest war news. Mr. G T. Ketcham will have charge of our circulation in Tecumseh. Subscribers are requested to hand in their names early.

The week of sorrow in Tecumseh--Resolutions--The Sabbath---Funeral Obseques---Eulogy.

At an ex-tempore meeting of some of the leading citizens of Tecumseh, at the Banking Office of P. Bills & Co., soon after the receipt of the astounding news of the assasination of our noble President and able Secretary of State, on Saturday, the following impromptu resolutions presented by the various gentlemen present were accepted anriorrected to be brought before the more public meeting at Bidwell's Hall, the same evening, for further consideration:

Resolved, That the recent brutal assassination of the President and Secretary of State of the United States, at a time when they were devoting all their talents and energies so generously and hopefully for the pacification of the country and preservation of the Union, involves crime of so horrible a nature and so repugnant to the American character, that it appears more like the action of fiends than of men and we find it scarcely possible to credit its reality.

Resolved, That our nation, overwhelmed with wo, as it must need be, at the cruel and causeless assassination of our President and Secretary of State, will nevertheless retain the same abiding confidence in the innate power of the Republic, under God, to defend the right, and will continue to maintain the same inflexible determination to crush out treason and rebelion wherever it may lift its hydra head, and to demand, and if need be, compel the usual courtesy and comity of surrounding nations.

Resolved, That not only our duty to our country, but respect and honor to the memory of our murdered Patriots demand united and continued efforts on the part of every citizen to suppress the rebellion, and restore to the entire of our beloved country the rule of the constitution and the law, and thus give traitors and tyrants to understand that though assassins may destroy while virtue and patriotism remain Liberty and Law are imperishable.

Resolved, That in the sudden and unexpected death of President Lincoln and Secretary Seward, at this peculiar juncture of our national affairs, and when the whole people had become so proudly confident of their entire fitness and ability to guide the ship of State safely through all rough billows that have threatened to engulph it, whether of rebellion at home, or intervention abroad, we have met with a loss that cannot but seem almost irreparable.

Resolved, That we do therefore most earnestly and reverently invoke the guidance and blessings of Almighty God upon this nation and its rulers in this time of our sore trial and bereavment, and that out of the great darkness now surrounding us He will gracious bring us into the more perfect light.

Resolved, That in token of these our deepest convictions and feelings, all our residences, places of business, school houses, and churches shall be suitably be draped in mourning for the period of thirty days.

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to make arrangements for a general meeting of our citizens, to secure a speaker or speakers for the occasion and to give notice of the time and place of such meeting in the most public manner.

On Saturday evening at an early hour in accordance with the call indicated above, Bidwell's Hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, with the saddest and most earnest audience ever convened in Tecumseh.

Perley Bills was called to the chair and Lucius Lilley appointed Secretary.

Meeting was opened by prayer by the Rev. John I. Fulton. After reading the able article of that days Toledo Blade giving a statement of the position of affairs, as there understood, the above resolutions were called for and unanimously adopted.

Impromptu addresses were then called for from B. L. Baxter, Esq., Rev. D. C. Wright, Rev. Mr. Ray, Dr. M. A. Patterson, Rev. S. E. Wishard, and Perley Bills, Esq.

In accordance with the last resolution a committee of five, consisting of Lucius Lilley, B. L. Baxter, M. A. Patterson, Albert Anderson and Simeon Davidson, were appointed to make arrangements for a future meeting.

Resolved, Also, that the above proceedings be published in the Tecumseh Herald, and after singing the Old Hundred Doxology, by the whole audience standing, and prayer and the Benediction by Rev. S. E. Wishard, the meeting adjourned.

P. BILLS, President.

L. LILLEY, Secretary.

Sabbath morning dawned with no abatement of that profound sorrow which had pressed the people down the day before. At length the church bells began to ring. Every peal was a note of sorrow. Slowly and solemnly the people gathered to their places of worship. No pen may attempt to describe the feelings of Pastors and people as they entered their houses of worship on that morning. Many walked up the aisle weeping, and with bowed heads took their places in the sanctuary. The invocations, reading of the scriptures, singing, and supplications were in keeping with the solemnities of the hour.

The interior of the houses, so appropriately draped with the emblems of sorrow, the pulpits covered with the stary folds of the old national ensigns, gave impressiveness to the scenes. The different pastors spoke as best they could to the people, some of them travelling out of the usual forms of sermonizing, speaking out of the abundance of the heart.

In the evening by common consent a union meeting for prayer and exhortation was held in the M. E. Church. The house was densely packed with solemn listeners. The services, directed by the pastor, Rev. D. C. Wright, were protracted through two hours and a half.—The time was occupied in prayer, singing and pungent addresses. Among the laymen who addressed the meeting were Dr. Hamilton, Mr. Baxter, and Mr. Murray.

In accordance with the call of the committee and the request of our public authorities, on Wednesday last, the citizens of Tecumseh closed their places of business and met in a Union Meeting at the Methodist Church in this village, at the tolling of the bells precisely at 12 o'clock mer dian.

The house was crowded to its utmost capacity, and the services were opened with Prayer by the Rev. D. C. Wright—reading of the Scriptures by the Rev. J. I. Fulton, after which, and appropriate singing by the united choirs of our village, a most soul stirring and beautiful and manly eulogy upon our murdered President was pronounced by the Rev. S. E. Wishard, followed by some pointed and scathing remarks from the Rev. D. C. Wright—after prayer by the Rev. E. N. Nichols, the exercises were closed by the Doxology sung by the choir and the congregation, and the Benediction by the Rev. S. E. Wishard.

The assembly was the most deeply solemn one ever held in this village. The church was heavily and beautifully draped in mourning, and the flag of our country bordered with heavy black covered the altar. All the churces in the place and nearly all the places of business, and private dwellings were also shrouded with the same deep habiliments of wo. It was a sad, thoughtful day for Tecumseh and for our entire nation, and one which wil never be forgotten so long as history shall endure. May none of us fail to heed the solemn lessons it should inculcate.

TECUMSEH, April 20th, '65.

Rev. S. E. WISHARD,

Dear Sir:—We the undersigned, your fellow citizens, highly appreciating the beauty and fitness of the noble eulogy pronounced by you, at the Union Funeral Obsequies of our murdered President, held at this place yesterday, would most respectfully request of you a copy of the same for publication.

Tecumseh, April 20th, 1865.

MEN OF MY SORROWING COUNTRY.—The spectacle of this hour has never been witnessed in our national heritage before. Since the old bell in Independence Hall first rang out for liberty, since this starry emblem of Union and freedom first went up, there has been no such cup pressed to our lips as we drink to-day.

Sixty-five years ago, and more, on the banks of the Potomac, in that upper chamber at Mount Vernon, the great and good man, George Washington breathed his last. The sorrow and mourniniug of our bereaved country in that day of affliction was sincere and deep. But the land had rest from her enemies—the war cloud had scattered and passed away.—Washington died as a citizen, honored and loved indeed, but not as the head of the nation. The organization of the government was as complete and undisturbed the hour after his death as the hour before. But when Abraham Lincoln was stricken down the shock was felt in every department of the government. All the members of that body, of which he was the honored head, quivered under the stunning blow. From the highest civil officer to the humblest citizen, from the Lieut. General to the private on his lonely sentinel beat, the pang of grief unutterable fell upon us. When last we gathered in this house for prayer, what emotions of sorrow filled your hearts, how your eyes swam with tears! And as we pass along these silent streets today, and look upon these homes draped in sorrow we hear the solemn funeral tread of a nation! the stillness of this moment bears to us the broken sobs of a mighty people! Men who have stood on the battle field, 'mid cannon and iron hail, who have marched undismayed, bearing aloft our country's banner, over the field of death, stop to-day. They lower the flag and weep. Mothers, wives and sisters, who with brave hearts, have girt the harness of war upon the sons of the republic; who have watched faithfully and courageously in hospital and camp, binding up ghastly wounds and speaking words of hope to the dying, these heroines of the hour turn aside to weep with us to-day. The ministers of Christ who have stood firmly by the truth, whose faith and courage have never failed during these four years of walking in the furnace, are almost unmaned by the grief o the hour. We weep to-day! A nation weeps! Her brave and mighty men have put on the habiliments of sorrow, and mourn together.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, our chosen, our beloved President, is no more! His lifeless corpse, dishonored by the murderous hand of treason, lies in in our national capital, while we, in common with others, are gathered to pay our tribute of respect to that life so eminently devoted to the restoration and perpetuity of our government.

We may truthfully say of him, as the King of Israel said while weeping at the grave of Abner—"there is a prince and a great man fallen this day in Israel."

It was on the 12th day of April, 1809 that God gave to his parents the child whose matured life has been worth so much to his country, and whose sudden death has assembled us here to-day.

His boyhood, his earlier years present nothing of very special interest. Three important things however were allotted to him in those forming years of his great character; a christian mother, the necessity for honest toil, and a library containing just five books; the Bible, the Pilgrims Progress, Esops Fables, the life of Washington and Henry Clay. These formed his theological, historical and classical library. Under these influences habits of industry and careful thought were early formed. In that pioneer home he learned the value of truthfulness, honesty and integrity. It was there in those first years of life that the foundation was laid for the invaluale services which he has since rendered to the cause of free and popular government.

His views of life were serious and rational. At the age of twenty-four he had fully entered upon the path which seemed marked out for him, occupying such positions of trust and usefulness as were offered him.

In his chosen profession, that of law, Mr. Lincoln held a high position, as an able counselor, a faithful and fearless advocate and indefatigable worker. His temperate habits and adherance to the right, gave him great power and were of vast importance to him in more than one emergency of his eventful life.

Washington and Clay were his models as statesmen and professional men.

Though he entered the State Legislature at the age of twenty-four, and frequently accepted the voice of the people afterwards as indicating the kind of service which he should render to his country, yet Mr. Lincoln was never a politician in the popular sense; he never was an officer seeker, and consequently the larger part of his life was spent in the duties of his profession.

These facts seemed to point him out as the man for the hour when the storm of civil war began to gather. Being untrameled by any party dogmas uttered by him in the past, he could talk freely and walk fearlessly, without the danger of being entraped. It is true that Mr. Lincoln was the candidate of a party, and as such was elevated to the position which he occupied; yet he never permitted party influences to stand in the way of serving his country. He had all his life been a champion of liberty, having early drunk in the spirit of the Declaration of Independence, and having studied the characters of the model men of our country. He was therefore brought out in such an hour of peril to our government as demanded men of tried principles.

I risk nothing in saying, and men of all political creeds have generally conceded, that Presiddnt Lincoln was honestly devoted to the highest interests of righteous government. He was an honest man. Not because he was not shrewd enough to have been something else, but because he had sound sense enough to know that everything shading out in the direction of knavery is a disorganizing element in government, that political trickery and immoralities are near of kin to treason itself.

If any man has supposed that Abraham Lincoln's honesty was the result of intellectual weakness, a kind of non abilitiy, let him analyze his discussions with Judge Douglas during the memorable contest of 1858.

He will find there the keenest and closest definitions, the straightest and most irrefragable logic, the firmest basis of right underlying the whole of his argument, that is to be found in any political document of the nation. This is not the opinion of political admirers only. Judge Douglass himself conceded the intellectual and moral power of his antagonist. No man who has ever heard our lamented President in those discussions underlying the life of our freedom, of our threatened institutions, can forget the clearness and power of his argument.

The manner in which he has dealt with the momentous questions which have been suddenly and rapidly thrust upon him during the tempest of the last four years, shows that this man, for whom you have unceasingly prayed, not only possessed ability in the field of pure logic, but that he was as able in the cabinet. One of the compliments paid to Napoleon, not the least either, was that he exhibited the highest judgment in his choice of generals. He displayed great ability in selecting the men who were to be his advisers, and the executors of his military schemes.—President Lincoln wonderfully succeeded in the choice of his cabinet. He did not confine himself to any political party, but drew about him the men who were true to the great principals of our government. In this he broke away from the pernicious example of many of his predecessors. Having made no pledges, not having bartered his principles or liberty for position, he was free to execute the high behests of a pure patriotism, to obey the scripture injunction—"thou shalt not plow with an ox and an ass together." Having thus secured sound patriotism, sound judgment and harmony of purpose in the cabinet council, we have not been disappointed in the results.

The unexpected questions of this ever changing struggle have been canvassed in the light of justice and truth; and we have great reason to thank God to-day that results so favorable to the perpetuity of our government and to universal liberty, have been reached.

I am not undertaking to say that the best things have always been done.—Some of the people have thought the President was moving too fast, some have said "not fast enough." I have long since reached the conclusion that it is much easier to appear very wise, and find fault, than it is to reach actual perfection. One of the great excellences of character which belonged to President Lincoln was that he was the very farthest from laying claim to the perfection of wisdom.

One thing however is very certain; the car of divine providence has moved. It has moved rapidly, and up to the day of his assassination our Chieftain was a passenger well aboard. He never failed to grapple honestly and fairly with every new question. There were no evasions in his statesmanship. With the facts before him he sought to reach the truest and safest conclusions. If the opinions formed proved incorrect in the application he did not shove responsibility over upon a Secretary or General. The magnanity of his great heart rendered it impossible for him to thrust upon other men the responsibility of even a doubtful policy. How often we have heard him say if this or that policy failed, "I am responsible." And when a policy which was not his own proved a success, and his mistaken friends began to laud him, he was ever ready to give "Honor to whom honor was due."

He would suffer no mistake in the public mind as to the man to whom, under God, we were indebted for our success. He was as zealous for the reputation of his cabinet and officers as for his own, and even more so. Since the first President of the Republic, he has had no peer in this regard—losing sight of himself in the honor and wellfare of our country.

The products of his mind and heart during the four years of his public services will be as lasting as the institution which he sought to perpetuate. Though he fell by the hand of secession and treason, the immortal Proclamation of liberty to the captive, will hang upon the wall of Freedom's Temple, as long as the fair structure itself shall stand.

It will go down to posterity linking the name of its author with that off Jefferson himself. Indeed the Proclamation is the reverberation of the old Declaration of Independence, bursting out again after the lapse of eighty-eight years.

The tyranny of the old world, the aristocracy of England and France, began to smile at the meaningless utterance of that old parchment. They said we had lived down the silly sentimentalism that all men were born free and had equal rights to their own persons and families. They rejoiced that those inalienable rights of life, liberty and the pursuits of happiness were no longer inalienable, but had been put up in the market to be sold.

And upon our own soil, many of the sons, whose sires had pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honors for the defence of that "self evident truth" which underlies our national life, had openly and scornfully pronounced that truth "a self evident lie."

With a desparation, a tragic frenzy that has no parallel in history, they lifted the hand of treason to strike out the utterances of freedom. They meant to suppress the dying echoes of that blast blown in seventy-six.

But how it waked suddenly and rung again across the continent, and from north to south! And as its sound went echoing through the land of oppression, the captives' chains fell off, the bruised and broken began to be healed,—the tears of tortured virtue began to be dried. The shout went up! The Jubilee has come! And the honored name of Abraham Lincoln was embalmed in the hearts of four millions of people who had never known country, or home or rights before!

But I may not stay here to catalogue the other great acts of his official life.—Only I must mention that that hand of his, stilled in death to-day, signed the bill of emancipation in the District of Columbia; and the bill for the amendment of the Constitution. These three great triumphs for truth, for freedom, and for permanent union and peace in our country, are enough for one man. That the masses of the people appreciated the precious results of his administrative ability is seen in the fact that he was, by an overwhelmng majority returned again to office.

And while we mourn, to-day, we bless and magnify the name of Almighty God for ever and ever for the gift to our country, and to the world, of so great and so good a man. For his goodness was equal to his greatness. The larguess of his charity can scarcely be appreciated in this day of bitter strife. No desire for revenge could ever turn him from thoughts of kindness towards his bitterest enemies. To those who have maligned his motives, and impeached his integrity he has made no reply but such is found in more earnest toil, and more ardent devotion to the interests of the government.

We see the man in those noble utterances of his last inaugeral address—"With malice towards none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in, to bind up the nation's wounds, to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphans.

His appreciation of the bravery and the patriotism of the soldiers, was sincere and high. You remember that when he was questioned as to his personal interest in the Redeemer, he said that when he left his home in Illinois he did not love Jesus. When he buried his little son at Washington he did not love Jesus; but when he visited Gettysburg, and stood in the battle-field where our patriots had laid down their lives for country and for God, he could not longer withhold the poor offering of himself. There he gave himself to Christ. He learned his highest lesson of duty from the soldiers of our country. Hence his pledge of duty and love to the soldier and his family came from a heart honestly meaning it.

This the men understood. I remember the scenes which we witnessed in Columbia Hospital, during the month of August last year. Twice a day the President passed by the hospital on his way from his summer residence to the White House.

About five o'clock in the afternoon you would see the men who were able to be out of their beds,—some of them armless, some foot-less,—the tottering braves,—all gather along the east side of the hospital grounds to get one look at the great and good man. The inspiration of his noble presence was to them better than a medicine, while he never failed to recognize and respond to their manifestations of joy.

Allusion has already been made to his religious character. We love to think of our departed President, as one who has been led by the wonderful providences and by the spirit of God to lay hold on eternal life.

From the hour in which God began to point him out as the man to guide our nation through the perils of civil war, he seems to have turned his thoughts to Him who ruleth in the heavens. In his verbal reply to the committee which p ix d him of his first nomination to the presidency he expressed his "deep and e en painful sense of the great responsibility," which was laid upon him.

In his written reply to the announcement of his re nomination he says he accepts "imploring the assistance of Divine Providence."

His touching address as, with moistened eye, he bade farewell to his neighbors, on leaving his home for Washington, breathes the same earnest, solemn looking to God. He said "My friends, no one, not in my position, can appreciate the sadness I feel at this parting.—To this people I owe all that I am. Here I have lived more than a quarter of a century; here my children were born, and here one of them lies buried. I know not how soon I shall see you again. A duty devolves upon me which is, perhaps, greater than that which has devolved upon any other man since the days of Washington. He never would have succeeded but for the aid of Divine Providence upon which he relied. I feel that I cannot succeed without the same Divine aid which sustained him,—and on the same Almighty Being I place my reliance for support; and I hope you, my friends, will all pray that I may receive that Divine assistance, without which I cannot succeed, but with which success is certain. Again I bid you an affectionate farewell."

The tone of this tender "good-bye," would do honor to Washington himself. I need not follow President Lincoln thro' his subsequent religious history. The germs of new religious purposes God seems to have matured into a true spiritual life.

Of his assassination I may say as Mac beth said of Duncan's: He 'Hath borne his faculties so meek, hath been

So clear in his great office, that his virtues
Will plead like angels—trumpet tongued—against
The deep damnation of his taking off
And pity * * * * * * *
Striding the blast, or heavens cherubim, hors'd
Upon the sightless couriers of the air,
Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
That tears shall drown the wind" * *

It is befitting that the nation mourn.—It is befitting that God sho'd shroud the heavens with darkness this hour, that the bending clouds should weep* with us today as we contemplate this last, this monstrous crime, committed in the interests of slavery.

If anything else were needed to kindle the execrations of all men against treason, secession and slavery we have it in this national funeral to-day.

May God be merciful unto us and cause his face to shine upon us. Stricken and smitten we pour our griefs into His ear who has helped us and will.—And here again under the dark pall of this solemn hour, and standing about this draped flag of so many precious memories we pledge ourselves to God, our Country and Universal Freedom.

During the delivery of the address, the heavens were darkened with clouds and a gelle rain was falling.

Scraps of News.

There is a plan on foot in N. Y. to erect a monument in memory of Abraham Lincoln, the proceeds to be defrayed by dollar subscriptions. Over 500 names are already appended to the list Several ladies of New York propose starting a subscription for the ladies of America to present Mrs. Lincoln with a comfortable home.

The New York World publishes an extract from the report of the committee on Commerce with the rebellious States, which shows that the rebels have received large quantities of supplies from the cotton specvlators at Memphis and other places along the Mississippi. It shows that immense frauds have been practised upon our Government, and the rebels have been greatly assisted in prolonging the war. Reports says trade with the rebellious States have been of no real benefit to the Government but has worked very great injury upon the public service.

A Washington dispatch says one of last official acts of President Lincoln, was the appointment of Col. Ben Spooner as U. S Marshall for Indiana. Col. Spooner was in nearly all of Sherman's battles in the west, and lost an arm in the service. A Washington special says the President is in danger of breaking down under speech making forced upon him by delegations. It is hoped no more State organizations will come with addresses for the present.

Intelligence from Richmond indicates that the law for the punishment of treason will be carried out in that city.

Gold at the New York Board is kept firm by the demand of exchange dealers. Within 10 days about $18,000,000 will be thrown upon the market, by the payment of May coupons, which may be expected to ease the market and lower quotations.

A change of commands, including the assignment of Gen. Halleck to Richmond, was published in Washington on Friday and also telegraphed north. It is now ascertained that no such orders have been issued by the War Department, nor are they in contemplation.

Since the murder of President Lincoln, it has been directed by Gen Augur that no one be allowed to pass the pickets or forts encircling Washington, unless on a written pass from headquarters or when personally known to the charge or commander of a fort. Boats on the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal are allowed to pass, subject to search at different points.—Citizens, however, do not require passes to leave the city by railroad going north.

How to be Happy.

Reader, I have seen a great deal and felt more; I have talked and travelled, and enjoyed and suffered with all sorts of people; have been on the sea and in it, and under it; have laughed at, shot at, quarreled at, praised, blamed, abused; have been blown at, and blown up; have had much and had little—so much as to enjoying nothing, so little that I would have enjoyed a crust of bread, because the ship went to the bottom with everything in it, leaving me to float to a sand bank; and then again, I have wandered over the earth, and under it, and through it, its caves and its dungeons and its dungeons and darkness, after stalagmites and stalactites; After specimines of black rocks and white ones, blue stones and gray; lived for months on desart islands just for the purpose of picking up new shells on the beach, which the tide of night never failed to leave behind it. In these by-gone days, when I had the great requisites of an enjoying traveler, to wit: plenty of time, plenty of patience, and plenty of money, so if the coach turned over and smashed up, I could afford to wait until another could be had, or if the ship went to the bottom instead of its destined port, 'twas just the same to me, because if I wasn't at one place I was at another, and, there was always some strange rock to look at, some queer "dip" that set me calculating how many horse power it required to make that rock just turn up so, and the million inquiries which geology, and a dozen other dry names suggested which not only had the effect to keep me from fretting, but kept me in an interested humor; well, in all these different situations, and as many more, I have found out, among others three things;

1st.—That a man out of money can't be happy.

2d.—That a man out of health, can't be happy.

3d.—That a man without a wife can't be happy.

Therefore, I have come to the conclusion that the best way to be happy is to take care of your health, keep out of debt, and get a wife.

Woman.

Female loveliness cannot be clothed in a more imposing garb than that of knowledge. A female thus arrayed, is one of the most interesting objects of creation. Every eye rests upon her with pleapure. The learned and wise of the opposite sex delight in her society, and affix to her character respect and veneration. Ignorance and folly stand reproved in her presence, and vice, in his boll career, shrinks abashed at her gaze. She moves the joy—the pride—the delight of the domestic circle. She excites the praise the admiration of the world.

A female thus armed—thus equipped is prepared to encounter every trial which this uncertain state may bring. To rise with proper elation to the pinnacle of fortune, or sink with becoming fortitude into abyss of poverty. To attain with cheerful serenity the hights of bliss, or descend with patient firmness to the depths of woe.

Quakerish.—Mr. Bush used to tell the following of a brother barrister:

As the coach was about starting the young limb of the law approached the landlady, a pretty Quakeress, who was seated near the fire, and said he would not think of going without giving her a kiss.

'Friend,' said she, 'thee must not do it.'

'By heavens, I will.'

'Well, friend, since thou hast sworn, thee may do it; but thee must not make a practice of it.'

The term "Brother Jonathan," which is applied to the U. S., originated many years ago, in this wise;

Connecticut possessed, during the Revolutionary War, an energetic Governor, Jonathan Trumbull. General Washington found him always prompt, and when there was a difficulty to solve, the General used to say, "We must consult Brother Jonathan on the subject." In course of time the phrase become a popular one, and Brother Jonathan is now consulted by pretty nearly the whole world.

Love.—There is something soothing and delightful in the recollection of a pure minded womans affection; is the oasis in the desert of a worldly man's life, to which his feelings turn for refreshment, when weried with the unhallowed passions of this work-o'-day world.

President Johnson yesterday went through part of the same routine as during the past few days, viz.: receiving the visits of various State delegations and political associations. In a brief speech to a Vermont delegation, he said: He would say to the wealthy traitor you must pay the penalty of your treason, and on the other side, to the misguided thousands who have been deluded and deceived—many of whom have paid the penalty with their lives and limbs—conciliation, forbearance and clemency. The French employees of the Treasury Department also called on the President and some time was spent in hand shaking.

Proclamation

By the President of the United States of America.

Whereas, By my direction, the Acting Secretary of State, in a notice to the public on the 17th of April, requested the various religious denominations to assemble on the 19th of April, on the occasion of the obsequies of Abraham Lincoln, late President of the U. S., and to observe the same with appropriate ceremonies, and whereas, our country has become one great house of mourning, where the head of the family has been taken away, and believing that a special period should be assigned for again humbling ourselves before Almighty God, in order that the bereavment may be sanctified to the nation's good, now, therefore in order to mitigate the grief on earth which can only be assuaged by communion with the Father in Heaven, and in compliance with the wishes of Senators and Representatives in Congress, communicated to me by a resolution adopted at the National capital, I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States. do hereby appoint Thursday, May 25th next, to be observed wherever in the U. S. the flag of the country may be respected, as a day of humiliation and mourning, and recommend my fellows citizens then to assembles in their respective places of worship, that they unite in solemn service to Almighty God, in memory of the good man who has been removed, so that all shall be occupied at the same time in contemplation of his virtues, and sorrow for his sudden and violent end.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at Washington, April 24th, 1865, and of the Independence of the United States of America the 89th.

Andrew Johnson.

By the President; W. Hunter,
Acting Secretary of State.

The Woodstock Murder.

The following are the details of the horrible murder which occured in the town of Woodstock on the evening of Saturday, the 22d inst. James E. Pennock, the murderer, is a man 68 years of age, but of great muscular power. He formerly resided in Adrian, but some 18 or 19 years ago removed to Woodstock, and has since resided on his farm on the shore of Devil's Lake, about two and a half miles from the village of Addison, and the same distance from the scene of the late Bivins murder. He is represented as being a very kind and pleasant man when not excited to anger, but his passions when aroused are ungovernable. He was generally respected by all his neighbors, and accounted a good citizen by the community in which he resided,—His wife Rhoda is represented as being a kind and pleasant lady, and loved by all who knew her. It seems, however, that there was sometimes trouble between them, though whether through any fault on her part or not, does not appear. The circumstances leading to the murder were as follows: Some ten years since Mr. Edgar Deitz, who owned a farm near by married Pennocks daughter, and some time thereafter at his suggestion sold his own farm and went to live with Pennock. Since then he has furnished his father-in-law with considerable amounts of money with which new barns and a house have been built and other improvements made.

Up to this time Deitz has assisted in working the farm, without receiving anything more than a living, and being dissatisfied with this he asked his father-in-law a few days since what share of the profits he intended to give him this summer. Pennock replied that he should have just what he had had before. Deitz told him that he could not remain under these circumstances and offered to settle with his father-in-law, and leave if he Pennock, would give him a mortgage on the farm of about $400. This was agreed on without dissatisfaction on either side, and it was arranged that both parties should go to Adrian on Friday or Saturday last to have the papers made out.—When the time came however, Pennock told Deits that he would not go, but he Deitz, could go alone and have the papers made out and they could be sworn to before a notary nearer home. Accordingly Deitz went to Adrian, on Saturday, and when returning met his father-in law, about three miles from home, who got in and rode with him. On arriving at the house Deitz found his wife in tears and was told that her father had tried to shoot her. Her father said it was a lie, but that she had tried to shoot him.

It appears also that Deitz had taken his furniture, which comprised the best portion of that which was in the house, and loaded it into wagons preparatory to moving, with which Pennock was not pleased, and it is stated that Pennock had had become enraged at his wife, because she refused to sign the mortgage, which he proposed to give to his son-in-law.—High words therefore ensued, and during this time Pennock's wife left the house and started to a neighbor's, a short distance off, probably intending to return when her husband's anger had cooled off. This she hadd often done before, and, although Pennock soon followed her, it does not appear that any suspicion was excited. Immediately after he had left the house, the horse barn was discovered to be on fire, and by the time the fire was extinguished there, the grain barn was found to be also on fire. This was also put out, and then the house was found to be on fire. Deitz was assisted by some two or three med who happened to be at the place, and soon after they returned to the house to stop the fire there. Pennock also came back. He afterwards endeavored to fire the house again before their eyes, and shut himself up in a room up-stairs, threatening to kill any one who attempted to enter. Mr. Welcome Wooster, however burst open the door and found him building a fire on the floor, which was soon stopped. During the time when the men were engaged in putting out the fire at the house, Pennock again set his barns on fire, and they were afterward entirely consumed.

Suspicion also being aroused that all might not be right with Mrs. Pennock, some of the men started down the road in search of her and soon and soon found her body in a sluice way about 25 rods north of the house. The appearances are that she was killed by a blow on the head from a club, and her body was afterwards trown in the ditch. Pennock was arrested during the evening by Mr. F. A. Wilcox, of Rollin, the same officer who arrested Bivans and since that time up to Monday morning he refused to talk or eat. Sometime previous to his arrest he attempted to commit suicide by cutting an artery in his left arm, and although he managed to make two large gashes he was unsuccessful. He lost considerable blood, however, and has since pretended to be weak and faint, and on Sunday afternoon after being lodged in jail he said he was cold and had a chill.

Pennock has but two children, a son now in California, and a daughter, Myry, —Deitz's wife. He has been accused of murdering a boy named Ousterhout that he took from Adrian to live with him some years since. The boy's hat and boots were found in the woods and he has never been seen since or accounted for. It may be that Pennock's trial will bring out some facts in regard to this case, or perhaps a confession from him.

Pennck's wounds were dressed on Sunday afternon and were found to be worse than was at first supposed. He had in fact nearly bled to death, but on Monday morning was some better. The club with which he struck his wife has been carried to Adrian. The following is the verdict of the Coroner's jury:

"We find that the said Rhoda Pennock came to her death by blows upon the head, inflicted by some heavy insrument in the hands of James P. Pennock, in township of Woodstock, on the 22nd day of April, 1865, near the residence of said James P. Pennock, between the hours of five and seven o'clock P. M. of that day.

The News.

General Wilson captured Macon, Georgia and took Howell, Cobb and "Extra Billy" Smith, Governor of Virginia, pioneers. They claimed their freedom under the armistice Sherman had agreed upon with Johnson. Wilson telegraphed Sherman for orders. The latter sent back word for him to draw out of Macon and hold his troops subject to orders!—Thus these arch-traitors are allowed another opportunity to escope.

President Johnson has appointed Thursday May 25th, as one of mourning and prayer for the lamented President Lincoln.

A Washington dispatch states that the Government has decided to prosecute the war with overwhelming energy.

News from Savannah informs us that Jeff Davis is going to Europe, and that he will get off with $500,000 in specie.

The rebel governor of Florida has commited suicide, shooting himself with a pistol.

Cotton and gold have both made a slight advance.

The funeral of President Lincoln has been fixed to occur at Springfield on the 6th of May.

It has been ascertained that the plot to to assassinate President Lincoln originated in Canada, and was approved of at Richmond. Suratt, the one who attempted the life of Secretary seward, is said to have been one of the St. Albans raiders.

Gen. Early is supposed to be retreating to the Kanawha Valley.

The Military commandant has ordered bread to pe distributeed to the famishing people of Richmond.

The obsequies of President Lincoln at Detroit on Tuesday, were of the most imposing character. The procession was over four miles long. The oration was delivered by Senitor Howard.

A curious story is related about Booth to the effect that that he stopped at Meadville, Penn., last summer, and cut in the glass of the window the following:—"Abraham Lincoln, poisoned August 13, 1864." This shows he had murder in his heart.

Aong the latest rebel tricks is an attempt to introduce yellow fever into the City of New York by the attempted shipment, to that port, of four boxes of infect-clothing from Bermuda, by a Dr. Blackburn, of Willmington, N. C. The attempt was frustrated.

The New York press are condemning Sherman's action in relation to his negociations with Johnson.

Jeff. Davis on receipt of the news of Lee's surrender, started for Greensboro, stating that he should go to Texas and there rally an army round him and make another stand. He issued orders to burn the bridges over the Meherrin and Roanoke rivers, and for the evacuation of Weldon.

We learn from Canada that the notorious McDonald of Toronto, and a man named Dennison have been fitting out a a vessel for plunder on thelakes, which has been siezed and the scheme frustrated.

Paroled officers of Lee's army, wishing to go to Europe, are to be furnished with passports for that purpose, and any of the enlisted men, who are mechanics, and wish to go North with their families to obtain obtain work, are to have transportation to New York, Philadelphia or Boston.

President Johnson has no idea of changing his Cabinet.

The Times' Washington special says: "Some days ago we gave an account of the arrest of Paine, who it is alleged, attempted the assassination of Ssecretary Seward. Yesterday it was discovered that this prisoner had attempted to take his own life by butting his head against the iron walls of his prison. Was found that he had beaten his head almost into a jelly and was bleeding profusely. A cap was prepared for him padded all over and fastened securly upon his head and his hands secured, so tathe could do himself no further injury."

The Latest News.

After the surrender of Gen. Lee's army, the city of Danville, Va., was plundered by the starving natives. Mob law reigned in the city. By a powder explosion over 20 of the inhabitants were killed.

Several rebel officers have taken the oath of allegiance rather than go South.

The subscriptions to the 7-30 loan yesterday amounted to $4,162,000.

Gold closed last night at 150.

The restrictions on visiting Richmond have been removed, and any one can go there now.

It is believed that if Johnston refuses to surrender, there is no probability of his escape.

Washington, April 25.—We have information from Sherman's army of an important character. It appears that Johnston's first letter to Sherman proposed a surrender of his army on the same terms of Lee's surrender. A meeting was arranged, at which Wade Hampton was present. He protested against the terms of surrender, and declared he would not surrender his cavalry force, supposed to be only about 3,000 strong. Thereupon, Sherman consented to delay for the purpose of giving Johnston and Hampton an opportunity to consult Davis.

Another meeting was arranged for the next day. On that day the parties again met and at the first sitting the remarkable memorandum or basis of agreement was presented and signed.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit,) that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat flourod and packed on reasonable terms.

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,
Woolston Comfort.

Donation Visit

The friends of S. E. Wishard and family will please accept thanks for the kind, agreeable and practical visit made to them on the evening of the 14th inst.—We put this down as one of the pleasantest visits made at our home since our sojburn in the village of Tecumseh. The attendance of brethren and friends from other churches, and the cordial interchange of socialities rendered the occasion both pleasant and profitable. Among the nice bits of material comfort that slped thro' the fingers of the good people, and were found lying about after they left, was an insurance policy covering the little bit of perishable property which we occupied on that evening. The Deacon (A. S.) will please accept special thanks. He has a sly way of doing things, but that time he was caught. May the riches that never perish be the inheritance of those who so kindly remember their

PASTOR.

☞ R. C. Moore is yet selling goods at the lowest prices, at which they have been offered this year. SUDDEN CHANGE OF THE WEATHER.—With a good appetite, a vigorous digestion and a sound liver it is possible to brave constant exposure and to encounter the present climatic changes. But the strongest bodily health and most vigorous constitution will soon decline under such depressing influences unless fortified against the extra pressure. How, then can the appetite be preserved, the digestive organs kept in good condition, and the regularity of the bowels maintained? The secret is, use the Red Jacket Stomach Bitters, which produce the desired result in the most agreeable manner.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

By authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned has assumed the General Subscription Agency for the sale of United States Treasury Notes, bearing seven and three tenths per cent. interest, per annum, known as the

SEVEN-THIRTY LOAN.

These Notes are issued under date of June 15th, 1864, and are payable three years from that time, in currency, or are convertible at the option of the holder into

U. S. 5-20 Six per cent.

GOLD-BEARING BONDS.

These bonds are worth a premium which increases the actual profit on the 7-30 loan, and its egemption from State and municipal taxation, which adds from one to three per cent. more, according to the rate levied on other property. The interest is payable in currency semi-annually by coupons attached to each note, which may be cut off and sold to any bank or banker.

The interest amounts to

One cent per day on a	$50 note.
Two cents	"	"	$100 "
Ten "	"	"	$500 "
20 "	"	"	$1000 "
$1 "	"	"	$5000 "

Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions and the notes forwarded at once The interest to 15th June next will be paid in advance. This is

The Only Loan in Market,

now offered by the Government, and it is confidently expected that its superior advantage will make it the Great Popular Loan of the People.

Less than $800,000,000 of the loan authorized by the last Congress are now on the market. This amount, at the rate at which it is being absorbed, will all be subscribed for within four months, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans.

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscription at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

and
BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of those Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. Prospectus of the Jackson Daily Citizen.

On or about the 27th of March, the proprietors of the Jackson Weekly CITIZEN propose to issue a FIRST CLASS DAILY PAPER, to fill a pressing want, which has long been felt in Central Michigan, now one of the most populous and wealthy sections of the State.

We propose to issue a Journal, respectable in size, containing the full Telegraphic Reports of the Associated Press, the latest Markets, and all the General News of the day. Particular attention will be paid to Local and State News, and everything that goes to make a Daily Paper interesting to all. In fact, we propose to make a LIVE DAILY PAPER, fully up to the times, dealing fairly and squarely with all the issues of the day, and earnestly advocating those views and principles, which we believe will be for the best interests of our common country. While it will be the organ of no man or clique, it will support the administration in a vigorous prosecution of the war, until the old flag again floats over ever every foot of the Nrtional domain, and until the last vestige of armed rebellion is swept from the land.

With a Journal of this character, looking closely after, and advancing the INTERESTS of this LOCALITY, not violently partizan, but firm, independent and manly in tone, we appeal to all classes of our citizens for a prompt, hearty and generous support.

We shall issue a MORNING PAPER, that will reach, at least, six of our interior counties in advance of any other Daily.—With a new POWER PRESS, operated by STEAM, and new type, we expect to make a handsome sheet, fresh and attractive in appearance, and as a NEWSPAPER worthy the confidence and patronage of all.

Our Weekly will be changed to a quarto in form, and will contain 48 colums of matter, over 40 of which will embrace the cream of the Daily, selected with the utmost care.

With these improvements the weekly Citizen will be as valuable in any household, and will contain as much interesting matter as any of the Eastern weeklies.

The Daily Citizen will reach Tecumseh at 8 o'clock A. M., six or seven hours in advance of any other paper, and will contain the latest war news. Mr. G T. Ketcham will have charge of our circulation in Tecumseh. Subscribers are requested to hand in their names early.

Thomas Mordaunt't Investment.

BY REV. HORATIO ALGER, JR.

ONE evening in October, 1850, Thomas Mordaunt, a Boston merchant, was crossing over Cambridge bridge, when his attention was drawn to a young man walking some rods in advance of him.—The night was dark and it was with difficulty that he could discern his feature or his movements. An impulse siezed him to hasten his steps. It was fortunate that he did so, for the young man stopped suddenly climbed the railing of the bridge, and would have flung himself into the river, had not Mr. Mordaunt hastily siezed his arm and prevented him from accomplishing his purpose.

"Rash young man, what would you do?" he demanded hastily.

"I would terminate a life which I have wasted," said the young man bitterly.

"If you have wasted your life hitherto, you are about to throw it away utterly now. How is that going to remeds matters?" asked the merchant,

"I am tired of life," said the young man after a pause.

"Because you have not lived properly. Turn over a new leaf. Reform your life and you will soon cease to complain that you are tired of it"

"There was a time when I might have followed your advice, now I cannot."

"Why not?"

"I have not a dollar left in the world. I once had a handsome property, now it is all gone."

"You have strength and ability still left, at least."

"Who will lend me a helping hand?"

"I will,"

"And yet you don't know me?" said the young man surprised.

"No, but I will take you on trust."

"You are very kind. I place myself in your hands. What shall I do?"

"First take my arm and walk home with me. You will pass the night at my house. To-morrow we will talk of your plans."

Shis proposal was gratefully accepted. The next morning Mr. Mordaunt for the first time had a good view of his visitor. He was a young man, aparantly about twenty-five, but his face was palid and lacked the fresh hue of health. The mark of dissipation were easy to read in his bloodshot eyes and heavy and inflamed eyelids.

"First," said the merchant, "I should like to hear your story."

"Your kindness entitles you to my confidence," said the young man. "My name is Frederic Evans. I was left at 21 with $25,000, of which I had uncontroll possession. Instead of embarking in busines, and making myself a worthy member of society, I gathered about me a set of young men, and nearly every night was consumed in carousals which were often kept up till morning. The excitement of this life was pleasurable, and I fancied myself happy. At all events I gave myself no time for thought. I need hardly say that I was very popular with the companions who feasted at my expense. My fortune seemed to me large, and I fancied it inexhaustible. A week ago I found that I had not a dollar of it left. Four years of lavish expenditure had drained it to the last dollar.

However, I treated the matter lightly I said to myself, 'now it is the turn of my friends. I have lavished upon them; I have lent them without asking for repayment. I will go to them.'"

"What success did you meet with?"

"None at all."

"The first whom I addressed professed much regret at my altered circumstances but was sorry that he was unable to help me. The second, to whom I had frequently lent money, refused me without ceremony. Another offered to lend me five dollars if I would not apply to him again. My indignation was such that I threw the money in his face. Other applications were equally ansuccessful. I then endevoired to obtain employment.—But my apearance was against me. Nobody wanted to employ an untemperate man, and when I promised reformation no one would trust me. Then it was that I framed the desperate resolution which you were the means of thwarting. Now sir, you have my story. It is for you to to say whether you regret interfering with me last evening or not."

'Far from it,' said the merchant encouringly. You are yet young. Your life may be redeemed. Indeed it is your duty to expiate your past follies by a purer course of living. Now what are your plans?"

'I should like to go somewhere where I am not known. That I can start fair. Here I should be surrounded by my old temptations."

"I think your views are wise and judicious. What do you say to California?"

"The very place," said young Evans eagerly.

"Be it so. I will lend you $500.—This will pay your passage out, and deray your expenses till you get something to do."

The light of a newborn hope sparkled in the eyes of the young man.

"But this is on one condition."

"Name it."

"That you promise to abstain from the use of intoxicating liquors."

"Draw up a pledge," said the young man promptly, "and I will sign it. It has wrought me harm enough in past.—It is my only salvation."

Ten days afterwards Frederick Evans was on his way to California, where in due time he landed.

In 1850, as it will be remembered, California was a new country. The time of its gold mines was recent. From all from all parts of the country eager eyes were turned towards this modern Eldorado, where riches were to be acquired on the easiest terms.

Frederic Evans at once made his way to the mines. He found the stories which he had heard had no been exaggerated. At that early period fortunes were made in less than a year. They were sometimes lost in a day. It was a strange, unsettled condition of society. Far from the restraints of civilation, crime and dissipation were fearfully prevalent. The results of a year's hard labor were often lost at the gambling table in an hour.—Disappointment and loss often led to quarrels and bloodshed, sometimes to robbery attended with violence.

From the wild scenes around him, Frederic Evans kept himself steadily aloft. He had suffered to much already. At times, weary with his day's labor, and having no other way to occupy his time, he was tempted to indulge in the dangerous recreation. But the thought of his promise, of his obligations to Mr. Mordaunt for the life which but for him would have been sacrificed, withheld him. He listened composedly to the sneers of his companions, and held on his way.

Let us now return to Mr. Mordaunt. He was a wealthy merchant, extensively engaged in foreign trade. His career had been a singularly successful one.—his prosperity had been almost uninterrupted for a period of many years. It might have been faith in his lucky star, that led him to embark in a variety of enterprise to great for his capital.

In the year 1857 there came a sudden comercial crisis, which like a great tidal wave swept over the country, carrying into utter ruin many a firm long established and generally regarded as secure against any assault. There were many others which reeled before the shock, and for a time seemed wavering between life ruin.

Among these was the firm of Mordaunt & Co. In ordinary times they would of been quite secure. But at this time the merchantile community, alarmed for their own safety, had grown cautious, and denied to Mr. Mordaunt the aid which he needed to cary him through.

One morning he sat in his counting-room in dispair. Heavy bills matured that day which he had no means of meeting. Failure seemed inevitable.

"This is the end of thirty years activity," he said gloomily. "But hard as it is, there seems to be no way of escape, I must submit." It was this moment a stranger entered his counting room. Mr. Mordaunt did not recognize him. He was somewhat over thirty, with a face browned by exposure to a southern sun, compact, sinewy, and healthful. His face was prepossessing, and his whole manner frank and courteous.

"Have you any business with me?"—asked Mr. Mordaunt wearily.

"I wish to inquire how you are affected by this crisis."

"Do you ask a friend or an enemy?" inquired Mr. Mordaunt suspiciously.

"As a friend, most emphaticly."

"Then" said the merchant, "I have no hesitation in saying that unless I can obtain the use of twenty thousand dollars before two o'clock, I shall be bankrupt. That would enable me to weather the storm."

"Will you give me a pen?" said the stranger. "There, sir, take take that and use it," he said after a moment's pause.

"A cheque for twenty thousand dollars! exclaimed Mr. Mordaunt in excitement. This is salvation. But why are you so kind to me? How have I deserved it?"

"Seven years ago," said the young man, "you saved my life, and put me on the road to prosperity. I determined to repay tye debt if I were ever able. To-day brings me the long hoped for opportunity."

The merchant grasped the hand of the young man cordially.

"I accept your assistance," he said, "on condition that you become a partner in the firm which you have rescued from ruin. I can promise that it will be for your advantage, since this sum is but a trifle to the amount of our assets."

My story is finished. The bread which the merchant had bost upon the waters had come back to him after many days. But it was his greatest satisfaction satisfaction that he had rescued a young man from destruction, and led him back from wrong course to a useful and honerable life.

Dieting.

Some eat themselves to death; others diet themselves to death. When a man is sick he is weak, and concludes that as when he was well he ate heartily and was strong, if he now eats heartily he will become strong again; well-meaning but ignorant friends are of the same opinion, and their solicitations to eat become one of the greatest annoyances of a sensible invalid. Nature purposely takes away the appetite under such circumstances and makes the very sight of food nauseating. A sick man is feeble; this feebleness extends to every muscle of the body and the stomach being made up of a number of muscles, has its share of debility. It requires several hours of labor for the stomach to "work up" an ordinary meal; and to give to it that amount of work to do, when it is already in an exhausted condition, is like giving a man, worn out by a hard day's work, a task which shall keep him laboring half the night. Mothers are often much afraid that their daughters will hurt themselves by a little work, if they complain of "not feeling very well;" and if such daughters were to sit down to dinner and shovel in enough provender for an elephant or plowman, it would be considered a good omen and the harbinger of convalescence. A reverse of such procedure would restore multitudes of ailing persons to permanent good health; namely, to eat very little for a few days; eat nothing but coarse bread and ripe fruits, and work about the house industriously; or, what is better, exercise in the open air for the greater part of each day on horseback, in the garden, or walking through the woodlands or over the hills, for hours at a time. Objectless walks and lazy loiling in carrages are little better than nothing.

SHOOKED HIMSELF.—A correspondent of a Nashville paper tells a good story, about a person who was going to Chattanooga on the railroad. When the train entered the tunnel and total darkness, said person asked a stranger how long it would be going through. Stranger was a bit of a wag, and replied—two hours. Person thought he would avail himself of the opportunity to don a clean shirt, and about the time he had "shucked himself" the train dashed out into daylight, exposing his person to the astonished gaze of some hundred pair of eyes belonging to passengers. He had no linen, and about as much other nothing as the Apollo Belvidere—and no chance to run.

☞ A lazy man asked to explain how it was possible for so lazy a man to attain so much education, answered: "I didn't—attain it—I just heard it here—and there—and was too lazy to forget it."

☞ A man being asked what he had for dinner, replied, "A lean wife and the ruin of man for sauce." On being asked for an explanation it appeared that his dinner consisted of a spare rib of pork and apple-sauce."

☞ A Hottentot once got up a painting of heaven. It was inclosed with a fence made of sausages, while the centre was occupied with a fountain that squirted pot-pie.

☞ A Frenchman cannot pronounce "ship." The word sounds "sheep" in his mouth. Seeing an iron-clad, he said to a boy, "Is this a war-sheep?" "No, answered the boy, "It is a ram."

☞ The poet Campbell, when urged to write in a lady's album, repied, "An original something, fair lady, you should win. Alas! I fear there is nothing original in me, excepting original sin."

The Plague.

The Siberian plague as it is called, was at last accounts raging at St. Petersburg, and already there is serious alarm in western Europe, for fear it will extend to the continental nations. There is every reason to believe that, like the Asiatic cholera, and all the great epedemic diseases known to history, it will extend its ravages westward. The French government has ordered all vessles from St. Petersburg to be put in strict quarantine, while the Austrian government has sent a medical commission to Russia to inquire into the nature of the epedemic, and the best means of treating it. There is no doubt but this is the same disease as that known to history as the plague, and which has in its time visited every continent but ours. Should it extend to western Europe, it mry not spare us, and hence its progress will, from this time forth, be watched with the keenest solicitude. Its character is that of a contagious fever, accompanied by buboes, carbuncles, and other unsighty eruptions. Persons taken with it often die within thirty hours. It generally lasts however, a week or ten days before terminating fatally.—N. Y. World.

The New Home.

"Well, Mary, if we can manage to lay by three hundred dollars each year for the next four years, we can buy that little home you admire so much. Mr. Hayes will not sell it to any one unless to me this year, and if we can save the first payment, we can move in next May, day. Now, shall we undertake it?"

"You know better than I about your business George. It seems quite a sum for us to lay by on our income; but I will do my best to help you. It is certainly worth trying hard for. Such a dear little home all our own. How happy I should be. Such a long yard, too, for the children to paly in, and that big willow tree in front to shade it. How I watch those green leaves from my chamber windows. They are the first to put out in the spring. I should think myself made up for life with such a pleasant little home for ourselves and the children."

"It will only be by the closest economy, dear Mary, that we can obtain it; but when it is all paid for, we can live in comparative ease. With your help, I feel confident we may win it."

And so the attempt was made, with a hearty resolution and perseverance which could not fail of success. Mary could turn and re-trim the old silk dress now, and think it no trouble. There was a motive to save for. She did not mind, though the old carpet was worn and faded; she would not wish to cut a new one to fit the old rooms, even if she could get it. Everything now must be looked upon with reference to the home they were going to. Whenever she was tempted to any old luxury, a sight of the new house from her windows always served as a check and stimulus.

Oh, if a christian would only keey one window of his soul looking out towards Heaven, how different would be his daily walk; how little he would care for the vanities he is soon to leave—how anxious to transmute all his treasures into coin that would pass currency there.—What are worldly honors to a soul that is shortly to stand in the great reception hall of the King of Kings? "Ah," said said a dying statesman, as he turned coolly from some mark of his sovereign's favor which had just been brought to his bedside—"that is a mighty fine thing in this country, but I am just to a country where it will be of no service to me."—Keep a good look out towards Heaven, and it will be easier thing to learn "to use this world as not abusing it"—to learn to look upon the good things which God has given us only wayside comforts. Arthur's Magazine.

☞ A bereaved Western widow addressed the pall-bearers at a funeral with—"You pall-bearers, just go into the buttery and get some rum, and we'll start this man right along."

☞ Ralph Waldo Emerson, who is great on simplicity, recently addressed a hotel clerk as follows: "Before taking my departure I will thank you for my umbrella, which I deposited with you on arriving."

☞ Lord Derby has been recently confined to the house with gout. It is not polite, however, to that fact, and a recently published translation, by describing him as a Stay-at-Homer.

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAY 4, 1865

Temperance Meeting.

At a meeting of the friends of Temperance, held at Bidwell's Hall, in this village, on Monday Evening, May 1st, after some discussion by P. R. Adams, Esq. Rev. Mr. Nichols, B. L. Baxter, Esq. Rev. D. C. Wright, and Rev. S. E. Wishard, upon the best course to be adopted by this community for the suppression of intempecance and the sale of intoxicating liquors, the following resolutions were adopted by the large concourse assembled, heartily and unanimously:

Resolved, That by the laws of this State, it is the duty of the Trustees of this village and of each of them, to enforce, within this village, the observance of the law usually called "The Prohibitory Liquor Law," and to prosecute for every violation thereof.

Resolved, That the wilful omission, neglect or refusal of any trustee or of the board of trustees of this village to perform this duty, is a disregard of the trust reposed in them by their constituents, and of the implied promise made by them to perform it, when they accepted the office; that it not only indicates their disrespect for the electors of this village, and an indifference as to the welfare of the people thereof; but such dereliction of duty is also a direct and unequivocal violation of their official oaths, a transgression against the laws of God, and a crime against the laws of this State.

Resolved, That we do respectfully and earnestly solicit the Common Council of this village to cause immediately this law to be enforced, and all offenders against its provisions to be prosecuted and punished without delay at the public expense.

Resolved, That for this as well as for other purposes, we request and respectfully solicit the Common Council, who are the legislative and executive officers, having in charge the prosperity, good order and moral well-being of this village, to appoint stated times and place for their special meetings, giving due public notice thereof, from time to time, to be held at a suitable hour in the day time if feasible, at a convenient place, openly and publicly to hear, discuss, consider and determine the applications, petitions, affidavits and other matters, that may rightfully come before them, designated and tending to the legal suppression of this great social evil within this village.

Resolved, That the Secretary cause the proceedings of this meeting and these resolutions to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, and a copy thereof to be delivered to the Recorder of this village to be presented by him to the Common Council at their next meeting.

After the Resolutions were adopted a good number of citizens pledged themselves to carry out the provisions of the resolutions by making, whenever opportunity offered, the necessary affidavits.

The meeting then adjourned to meet again in two weeks, at the same time and place.

S. E. WISHARD, Chairman.
S. J. Fulton, Secretary.

J. Wilkes Booth.

The New York Journal says editorially: "He (Booth) is one of the handsomest young men, whom the writer of these lines has ever seen—a cross between Endimion and Antinous. Tall and slender, broad-shouldered and slim-waisted, the noble pale face rendered more striking by firery, perhaps unearthly eyes. Booth was the pet of the women, and had won many a heart. His black moustache was carefully cultivated, and he possessed a natural elegance and refinement of appearance, which, without effort or affectation, gained the good will of all His dress was simple, but well chosen, unpretentious, and shows the man of good taste, and modest in manner, quiet, without arrogance, so that he pleased every one who made his acquaintance.

A Rebel Plot.

The Tribune's Richmond correspondent prints letters which show that one Stimson made a contract with the rebel government in June, 1863, to destroy United States vessels, navy yards, &c., on the Western waters and in the Atlantic States, by incendiarism for which he was to receive as pay a per centage on the value of the property destroyed. A letter is containing a report of the destruction of the steamer J. H. Russell on the Mississippi in April, 1864, by an incendiary employed by Stimson named Isaac V. Aleshire. The vessel and cargo is valued at $307,250, and the per centage claimed amounted to $55,725.

The Terms.

Since the terms of Lee's surrender have come to be accepted at the common basis of capitulation by the rebel armies, we reproduce them here:

APPOMATAX COURT-HOUSE, April 9.

To Gen. R. E. Lee:

In accordance with the substance of my letter to you, of the 8th inst. I propose to receive the surrender of the Army of Northern Virginia on the following terms, to wit: Rolls of the officers and men to be made in duplicate; one copy to be given to any officer designated by me, the other to be retained by such officer as you may designate. The officers to give their individual paroles not to take up arms against the Government of the United States until properly exchanged, and each company or regiment commander sign a like parole for the men of their command; the arms, artillery and public property to be packed, stacked and turned over to the officers appointed by me to receive them. This will not embrace the side arms of the officers, nor their private horses or baggage. This done, each officer and man will be allowed to return to his home, not to be disturbed by the United States authorities so long as they observe their parole and the laws in force where they may reside. Yours, respectfully,

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant General.

These terms have been the subject of considerable discussion and serious difference of opinion. Some understand them to opperate as a full and complete pardon and a guarantee against further molestation, not only from the military authority of the government but, from prosecution under the criminal laws of the land.

This, to our mind, is clearly a wrong view. It will be seen that Gen. Grant stipulates for this exception from molestation "by the United States authorities so long as they (the rebel soldiers) observe their parole"—thus distinctly fixing its operation to the time covered by their military "parole." This being ended, as it must necessarily be ere long, the exception must and will expire by limitaton.—Again, prosecutions for treason take place in the Federal Courts, by presentment of Grand Juries in the mode pointed out by the Constitution and laws. Now, it is clearly beyond the authority of Gen. Grant, or the President himself, so to suspend the functions of the Judiciary as to prevent such prosecutions. The Executive may pardon rebels after they have been sentenced, but he cannot prevent their indictment and conviction.

This view of the case being correct, the chief objection raised to the terms granted Lee and Johnston—that they and their commands were pardoned—falls to the ground. They are simply paroled prisoners of war, to remain such "so long as they observe their paroles and the laws in force where they may reside;"—but will be subject to civil law, the same as other citizens.—Toledo Blade.

Official from the President.

Davis was on the same train on his way to Charlotte, but that learning that learning that the railrond was cut above and below there, he, with other passengers, escaped and returned to Greensburg, Stoneman's cavalry is now in the Valley of Saluda River, with its headquarters at Anderson S. C. and are scouting from there towards Augusta Ga., with instructions if they can hear of Jeff. and his treasurer, to follow him as long as there is a horse left. The infantry portion of Stoneman's command in engaged clearing the mountains of bushwhackert, guerrillas, and horse thieves, and they are makeing clean work.

The Tribune's special says Payne the assassin of the Seward family, made a confession of his guilt. He says it is useless for him to withhold it longer; he had been fully identified by six persons, and the Government had other evidence in its posession that he was the party assigned to that terrible crime.

Mr. Seward is so well that he is expected to take his place in the Cabinet meetings in a few days. The newspaper accounts of the efforts to assassinate him were generally incorrect. Payne, the assassin, had only an opportunity to strike one blow at Mr. Seward, who was at that moment sitting up in bed. The knife struck the swelling over the fractured jaw, and did not touch the throat. At that instant, Robinson, the nurse, clutched Payne from behind, and did not for a moment let go his hold, though stabbed four times.

Mr. Seward rolled off upon the floor, feigning death. To Mr. Robinson he owes his life. This heroic soldier is in hospital, and he is doing well, though very badly wounded.

Johnston's Surrender.

A Raleih correspondent gives the following description of the scene at the last intesview between Sherman and Johnston, at Bennett's house, five miles beyond Durnham's Station, and about thirty miles from Raleih. The train bearing the Union General arrived at the house at about two o'clock P. M. Johnston with Capt. Wade Hampton, Jr., and Maj. Preston, and his Staff, with several other officers, arrived about half-past two and after a very civil but not over warm greeting between the officers, Johoston and Sherman held a short private interview in a room set apart for the conference. Meanwhile the rebel officers withdrew to some distance, and remained in conversation among themselves, the Union officers doing the same. Gens. Schofield and Howard then joined the conference, which lasted about one hour.—Wade Hampton having been relieved of his command, was not present, neither was Breckinridge. The arms and amunitions of war are to be delivered to our officers at Greensboro.

A Washington special says the surrender of Gen. Johnstan to Gen. Sherman is regarded as marking the termination of the war. It is not apprehended that any great difficulty will be encountered in disarming the rest of the insurgents. Gen. Grant having virtually concluded the war will return to this city and apply himself to lessening the expenses of the war.—The initiatory measures have alreaey been taken for the curtailment of a large part of the expenses. The policy to be adopted towards the rebels in civil life who have not availed themselves of President Lincoln's amnesty, begin to make an excitment. It begins to be thought they will soon find it to late.

Proclamation

By the President of the United States of America.

Whereas, By my direction, the Acting Secretary of State, in a notice to the public, on the 17th of April, requested the various religious denominations to assemble on the 19th of April, on the occasion of the obsequies of Abraham Lincoln, late President of the U. S, and to observe the same with appropriate ceremonies, and whereas, our country has become one great house of mourning, where the head of the family has been taken away, and believing that a special period should be assigned for again humbling ourselves before Almighty God, in order that the bereavment may be sanctified to the nation's good, now, therefore in order to mitigate the grief on earth which can only be assuaged by communion with the Father in Heaven, and in compliance with the wishes of Senators and Representatives in Congress, communicated to me by a resolution adopted at the National capital, I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, do hereby appoint Thursday, June 1st, next, to be observed wherever in the U. S. the flag of the country may be respected, as a day of humiliation and mourning, and recommend my fellows citizens then to assembles in their respective places of worship, that they unite in solemn service to Almighty God, in memory of the good man who has been removed, so that all shall be occupied at the same time in contemplation of his virtues, and sorrow for his sudden and violent end.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at Washington, April 24th, 1865, and of the Independence of the United States of America the 89th.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit,) that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms.

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,
WOOLSTON COMFORT.

☞ At the M. S & N. I. R. R. shops in Adrian some twenty of the hands made a strike on Tuesday, because they had not received their pay for the last month. This being the close of the fiscal year, more time is required in making up the returns, and the delay therefore unavoidable on the part of the railroad company. Mr. L. R. Wallace, who has charge of the shops, immediately discharged all the strikers, and were paid off by the local agent.

☞ We notice, in our wanderings around town, decided improvements, progressing in every locality. This is right. The pleasantness and beauty, as well as the health of our people, demand these things. It adds also to the attractions of the place, so that "new comers," of whom there are many, can make up their minds fully to locate. While upon this point we must be permited to insist that our business men and property owners shall supply every facility, as far as possible, to all those who desire to come among us. We know that the materials and work for the construction of residences and business places are high; and when "rent" is considered only as remuneration the inducements for investments are megre. Yet when the growth of the place, as a whole is considered—also the fact that a continual emigration hitherward would greatly tend to increase the business of the place, one can only help seeing the practicability of building. We sincerely hope at the conclusion of the war, steps will be taken to place the advantages of this locality before the world in such a manner that shall tend greatly to enlarge our boundaries.

HALL OF TECUMSEH LODGE,
No. 69, Fd. A. M.
Tecumseh, April 28th, 1865.

The committee to whom was referred the Resolution of this Lodge with instruction to present appropriate Resolutions respecting the recent brutal assassination of President Lincoln, respectfully Report

That, Whereas the first charge a mason receives when solemnly iniated as a brother of our ancient order is embraced in the following language—"In the State or Nation you are to be a quiet and peaceable citizen, true to your government and just to your country; you are not to countenance disloyalty or rebellion but patiently submit to legal authority and conform with cheerfulness to the government of the country in which you live," therefore

Resolved, That as patriots, citizens and assuredly as Free and accepted Masons, we deeply lament the death by brutal and causeless assassination of the late President of the United States, regarding it as an act in fearful violation of a cherished Masonic principle that "ORDER is HEAVEN'S first LAW."

Resolved, That in token of our respect for the many virtues of Abraham Lincoln as a man, and deep regret at his horrible and to our finite minds, untimely removal from the position of Chief Magistrate of the Nation, we will drape the Lodge in mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That these Resolutions be published in the Tecumseh Herald and a certified copy forwarded to the Grand Secretary of the Grand Lodge.

Attest, M. A. PATTERSON,
Ch'n of Com.
Thos. Cummins, Secretary.

☞ The excitement at No. 2 Mechanics' Block is caused by Wastell & Adam keeping goods and selling the same at low prices. They receive new goods every week, therefore can sell as cheap as any merchant or merchants this side of New York. Their Factories cannot be equaled in town. The secret of their selling cheap, is they buy and sell for cash. Cloaks, and Sacks can be had at their store and trimmings for the same, lower than you have been in the habit of buying. Fathers and mothers,—your little child can buy goods of W. & A., as cheap as you, for they sell at one price. Success will accompany the efforts of true dealing.

☞ R. C. Moore is yet selling goods at the lowest prices, at which they have been offered this year. Goods in New York have advanced, if you want goods, buy them now! If you neglect buying until prices are advanced, dont blame any one but yourself. U. S. 7-30 Loan!

By authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned has assumed the General Subscription Agency for the sale of United States Treasury Notes, bearing seven and three tenths per cent. interest, per annum, known as the

SEVEN-THIRTY LOAN.

These Notes are issued under date of June 15th, 1864, and are payable three years from that time, in currency, or are convertible at the option of the holder into

U. S. 5-20 Six per cent. GOLD-BEARING BONDS.

These bonds are worth a premium which increases the actual profit on the 7-30 loan, and its exemption from State and municipal taxation, which runs from one to three per cent. more, according to the rate levied on other property. The interest is payable in currency semi-annually by coupons attached to each note, which may be cut off and sold to any bank or banker.

The interest amounts to

One cent per day on a			$50 note.
Two cents	"	"	$100 "
Ten "	"	"	$500 "
20 "	"	"	$1000 "
$1 "	"	"	$5000 "

Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions and the notes forwarded at once. The interest to 15th June next will be paid in advance. This is

The Only Loan in Market,

now offered by the Government, and it is confidently expected that its superior advantage will make it the Great Popular Loan of the People.

Less than $300,000,000 of the loan authorized by the last Congress are now on the market. This amount, at the rate at which it is being absorbed, will all be subscribed for within four months, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans.

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscription at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

SUBSCRIPTION AGENT, Philadelphia.

Subscriptions will be received by the First National Bank of Ypsilanti, and the First National Bank of Detroit.

THE SCANDINAVIAN Remedies.

"No pestilent Cities contracts our power,
For the whole boundless Continent is ours."

DR. ROBACK'S

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

These Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of over twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by their use gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from torpid liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of these Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

They strengthen and invigorate the system.
They are unequaled for general debility.
They are a sure cure for dyspepsia.
They give a good and healthy appetite.
They assist digestion.
They are the best stimulant in existence.
They are a preventive of Fever and Ague.
They relieve constipation.
They cure Nervous Headache.
They are perfectly pure and palatable

Aged persons and delicate females will find they can save large doctor's bills by the use of these Bitters.

TO THE RETAIL TRADE.

The present high prices have induced all kinds of experiments, and every kind of substance has been tried as a substitute for Coffee. The vilest trash, under specious and taking names, has been thrust upon the public. Bogus and Spurious Coffees whose chief merit is found in their Labels and wrappers, have proved alike injurious to the consumer, as also to the retailer. These Villainous Compounds have about had their day, and the public taste is fast returning to Nature's drink, and nothing less than a can satisfy the demand. There is a great and increasing demand for Good Coffee, and our design is to supply this demand.

Good, Pure and Wholesome Cup of Coffee

On or about the 27th of March, the proprietors of the Jackson Weekly CITIZEN propose to issue a FIRST CLASS DAILY PAPER, to fill a pressing want, which has long been felt in Central Michigan, now one of the most populous and wealthy sections of the State.

We propose to issue a Journal, respectable in size, containing the full Telegraphic Reports of the Associated Press, the latest Markets, and all the General News of the day. Gittin' Shipwrecked.

BY NED ALBRO.

'Yes, gentlemen,' sez Andy Updike, (you've heard of him?) 'I had a fight with a polar bear once and it lasted edzactly a week. He tore my cloze all off my back, and you could have took a basket and picked up over a bushel of legs and ears, what laid around loose.'

'Ain't you stretching the blanket?'

'No, sir. Do you doubt my veracity? Why, I've seen cords of them off to Greenland——'

'Were you ever at Greenland?'

'Yes, got shipwrecked there, and lived thirteen days on a dead cat and two hnckleberies! Jupiter H. and yeller janders!—I was hungry enuff to eat fried stove pipe, and my ribs stuck out so, I could not get my shirt off to save my soul from the grave. All hands were drowned but me and the captain, and we lived by sucking the grease out of some robes and the cook's trousers. I do think the captain realized the effect of them pants, and I thought it was the last of pea time with me, too, for the darn things laid heavy on my stummik, and would not suggest.

But at last Providence kindly interferred, like a mink on a setting hen.'

'Do tell.'

'Yes—on the fourteenth day the poop-deck, that me and the captain was setting on, got froze in among them big cakes of ice, and the captain had no cloze on him, we had used them up to kindle fire with. After a spell the captain got to sleep, and I kept breathing on him all I could to keep him warm, for he was pretty nigh perished, and you know it is shocking cold out in them regions. Well, while I was engaged in warming the captain directly I seen one of them big polar bears coming down to the shore to drink. I kinder wanted the critter to see us, and then I kinder didn't for I thought if he were the least ways venemus, he might gin me and the captain cabin passage!—Well, jest as I suspected, the bear come down, as I was mentioning, and sez I —'Captain, wake up—dinner is ready?' and the captain opened his eyes spry as a grasshopper, but when he seed the grizzley making a B line for us over the ice, he looked extraordiuary lonesome. I was pestered mightily at the same time, for fear he'd taste of me, (the bear I mean) so when I seen him coming, I got on all fours, and looked right at him between the two eyes, and winkiked, and made my head go like Mrs. Spraggin's ram duz to a gate post. As I was saying, I kept a looking at the bear right between the eyes for about three hours, when by and by he fell down aft on his tail eend, and commenced to shiver as if he had a touch of the agur. Gentlemen—I had got the beas in a mesmeric state! It is a fact—it was the most 'straordinary case I ever heard tell on. So arter the bear fell, as I said, I tells the captain to go up and cut off some steaks as it was most tea-time, and I had done my share of the business. The captain said he would, and started to get up, but I am busted if he cou'd—both legs was froze fast in the ice! 'Git up, sez I you darn flop-eared Ingin,' (I thought he was fooling) so he pulled—but it was no use—he was froze in tight as a muskit. Thinks I you are in a predickament, that is a fact, and he gin me his knife, and I crept up softly to the bear like a panther, and put my hands up to his nose to warm them, for they was decidedly cold; and red as Swamp gal's aburn. After I had got warmed nicely, I commenced to carve, and the hot steam came pouring out like a scape-pipe, and the captain hollered for me to fetch him sum in my cap. Well, I minces the critter all up, and gin the captain a paw to suck, and then made a fire out of the scraps around the captain's legs, and thawed him out slick as a match. He were a few lame but he got over that in thinking of his stummick. Besides that, he was a monstrous eater—the captain was—and had an appetite like uncle Pete, who come home one dark night, and ate up his old woman's kittens, thinking they was hot muffins! Good Lord, did you ever hear the like fellers?'

'It is true, anyhow,' sez Andy, 'but as I was saying, the captain was powerful on vittles, and wanted more than his part of the bear. I gin him one quarter and the skin—for it would make him a prime coat—but he want satisfied, and jest went to work and ate up every darned bit of his meat, hide and all, and next morning some of my provisions was missing, but I knowed whar they had gone—he had stole them in the night. So I was bound to git rid of the captain some way, or there would be a famine. The cake of ice we were on began to crack from the fires we built in cooking the vittles, and one day it got loose and went to sailing off in an easterly direction, amid big mountains standing up stiff as Columbus. Sez I—'Captain—you had better save yourself, if you believe in a future state. Don't make no difference with me—I'm a Sunday School teacher, and am prepared. Yes sez I, captain save yourself, we are drifting towards the whirlpool!

'The whirlpool?'

'Yes—the whirlpool. Heard of it aint you? Well, it is the allfiredest hole ever dug! A perfect thousand foot pit with no bottom, as Parson Smith says, and its power of suction is awful. So sez I to the captain, 'We are coming to the dreadful place f-a-s-t, and you will be takin in caption to Jonah, if you don't vacate these latitudes,' and just as I was speaking, we sailed up to a big ice mountain slippery as thunder. 'Hullo,' sez I, 'captain, let us land,' and the captain tried to climb up, and he would slip, and I swan, fellers, I thought the poor creeter would freeze to death—naked as he was. So I boosted him till he got a good hold, and then I pushed away from the hunk, and let him hang, without a dud to cover his limz! 'Thar!' sez I, you darned long legged cannibal, I will larn you to eat up my provisions, and away I sailed on my cake of ice. Sez the captain 'you murderous Ingin, will you leave me here to freeze?' 'I am a tea-kettle if I don't, Sez I, and the next instant the captain froze stiff as a board!'

'Ha! ha! roared the fellers all at once and clapping their sides, 'ha! ha!'

'What you laffin at?' sez Andy, 'don't you believe it?'

'Oh, yes, we believe it.'

'Well, then,' sez the screamer, shetting one eye, 'you believe a durn sight more than I do!' aud Andy left, convinced that he had got the best of that crowd that time, anahow. Do you think he did?

Hold Her Up.

The old hard-head, Black-ball liner Columbia, was puffing away at it under double-reefed topsails, going west by south, and the tearing southerly gale heeling her down so that getting fore and aft decks was difficult navigation for any one not having their regular sea legs shipped.

Patrick McFadden, a wild boy from the county Clare, took an Irishman's idea that he could improve the ship's trim something, and accordingly getting to leeward of the deck-house he planted his big, hob-nailed brogans firmly on the deck, and his broad shoulders against the house. Every time the ship took a big lurch Pat would hump and kink and surge up to windward, grunting like an old nag with the bilious heaves.

Patrick religiously believed that he was holding the ship upon her legs, and tugged away at her resolutely for one hour But the gale was getting stronger, the ship went over father, Pat's strength was waning, and he grew desperate. At last spying Teddy O'Farral, one of his own 'faction,' poking his head up out of the main gangway, Pat sung out to him for help.

'Och, Tiddy, Tiddy, I say, me darlint, Tid O'Farral, ye od madhoun, come away over here wid yez, and hilp me hould the big baste av a ship up. Come over, I say, Tid, and lind me a hand, or be the hill o' Houth, and that's a big oath intirely, I'll be afther littin the ould vessel go down with a clash!'

GIRLS SHOULD LEARN HOUSEKEEPING.—No young lady can be too well instructed in anything which will affect the comfort of a family. Whatever position in society she occupies, she needs a practical knowledge of household duties. She may be placed in such circumstances that it will not be necessary for her to perform much domestic labor; but on this account she needs no less knowledge than if she were obliged to preside personally over the cooking stove and pantry.

Indeed, I have often thought it is more difficult to direct others, and require more experience, than to do the same work with our own hands. Mothers are frequently so nice and particuling that they do not like to give up any bart of their care to their children. This is a great mistake in their management, for they are often burned with labor, and need relief Children should be early taught to make themselves useful—to assist their parents in every way in their power, and to consider it a privelage to do so.

The Magic Box.

A housekeeper's affairs had for a long time been becoming very much entangled, and the poor woman knew not what to do to get ont of her diffienlties. After a time she bethought herself of a wise old hermit, who lived in the neighborhood, and to him she repaired for advice. she related to him all her trobles saying:

"Things go on badly enough; nothing prospers in doors or out; pray, sir can you not devise some remedy for my misfortune?"

The hermit—a shrewd, rosy old man—begged her to wait, and retiring to an inner chamber of his sell, after a short time he brought out a curious looking box carefully tied up.

"Take this," he said, "and keep it for one year; but you must, three times a day and three times a night, cary it into the kitchen, the sellar and stable, and set it down in each corner. I answer for it, that shortly you will find things improve. But be sure and bring back the box at the end of the year. Now, farewell."

The good woman received the box with many thanks and bore it carefully home. The next day, as she was carying it into the sellar, she met a servant who had been secretly drawing a pitcher of beer. As she went a little later into kitchen, she fonnd a maid taking a supper of omelets. In the stable she discoverd, deep in the mire, the best cow standing, and the horse uncurried, and hay instead of oats. So every day she discovered and corrected some new faults.

At the end of the year, she, faithful to her promise carried the magic box back to the hermit, and besought him to allow her to keep it, as it had a most wonderful effect.

"Only let me keep it one year longer and I am sure all will be remedied."

The hermit smiled an replied:

"I cannot allow you ta keep the box, but the secret that is hidden within you shall have."

He opened the box, and lo! it contained nothing but a slip of paper, on which was written a conplet:

"Would you thrive most prosperously, Yourself must every corner see."

AN INGENIOUS CLOCK.—There is now in possession of, and manufactured by Mr. Collings, silversmith, of Gloucester, England, a most ingenious piece of mechanism—an eight day clock, with dead beat escapement maintaining power chimes the quarters, plays three tunes in twelve hours, or will play at any time required. The hands go round as follows: One, once a minute; one, once an hour; one, once a week; one, once a month; one, once a year. It shows the moon's age, the time of rising and setting of the sun, the times of high and low water, half flood; and, by a beautiful contrivance, there is a part which represents the water, which rises and falls, lifting the ships at high water tide as if it was in motion, and as it recedes leaving these little automation ships dry on the sands. It shows the twelve signs of the Zodiac; it strikes or not as you may wish it; it has the equation table, showing the difference of clock and sun every day in the year Every portion of the clock is beautiful workmanship.

☞ Heaven bless the wives! they fill our hives, with the little bees and honey; they ease our life's shocks, they mend our socks, but don't they spend our money? When we are sick, they heal us quick—that is if they do love us; if not we die, and yet they cry, and raise tombstones above us.

At musical entertainments we have often admired Bonaparte's March, Washington's March, Baron Steuben's March, but, says Prentice, Sherman's Grand March is worth them all.

TO CURE A FELON.—As soon as the part begins to swell, get the tincture of lobelia, and wrap the part effected with colth, saturate it thoroughly with the tinrture, and the felon will soon die—poisoned instead of hung, as all felons ought to be. An old physician informs us that he has known this to cure in scores of cases and it never fails if applied in season.—Scientific American.

☞ An elderly gentleman being ill, one of his friends sent a messenger with the usual inquiry, which, however, he had not pronounced with due emphasis—

'I'll thank you to my compliments, and ask how old Mr. W. is.'

The messenger departed on his errand, and seedily, returned, saying,

'He's just sixty-eight, sir!'

The Punjaub Diamond.

The best-known and most highly-prized precious stone have each their history more or less romantic. The celebrated Koh-i-noor, in the possession of Her Majesty the Queen, is said by the Hindoos to have been found in the mines Golconda, ages upon ages ago, and to have remained in the possession of the Kings of Golconda until it was stolen by a trecherous general. About the middle of the 17th century it came into the possession of the Great Mogul, Shah Jehan, father of Aurungzebe. He caused it to be cut, but this was badly done by a Venetian, and the gem los half its weight in process — The Mogul, instead of paying the jeweller, fined him ten thousand ducats.—The jewel became a subject of quarrel among rival princes of India, and came, in the present century, into the possession of the Khan of Cadul. Runjeet Singh obtained it from him by force, after having vainly tried stratagem. He invited the Khan to his court, and when there he demanded possession of the diamond. But the Khan, anticipating treachery, had caused a counterfeit to be made, and presented this to Runjeet Singh. The Latter on discovering the fact caused the palace of the Khan to be sacked, and the real diamond was procured through a slave who revealed its place of concealment. Runjeet's successor on the throne of Lahore retained possession of the jewel until the conquest of the Punjaub by the English in 1850.

M. H. D. Gllendrof, the author of many well known grammers of modern languages, has just died in Paris.

About 20 Michigan soldiers who were rescued from the steamer Sultana on the Mississippi river have arrived at Camp Chase, Columbus, Ohio.

A man in Boston has obtained a verdict against that city of $2,500 damages for injuries ocsosioned by the overturning of a hack in which he was riding, caused by a defect in the street.

Mrs Francis D. Gage, formerly a resident of Columbus, and widely known in the West as a writer and lecturer, has taken up his residence at Lrmbertsville, N. J., a plesant village among the hills on the banks of the Delaware.

Thomas Martin, a Kentucky guerilla, was sentenced to be shot at Cincinnati, on Friday last, but shortly before the time for the execution to take place, a telegram was received from President Johnston suspending it for the present.

The building for the Northwestern Fair in Chicago, covering the whole of Dearborn Park, is rapidly approaching completition; 75 men are employed upon it, and the flooring is already laid. The amount of lumber used in its construction will be about 400,000 feet, and the felt roofing will cost $3,000; the total expense is estimated at $30,000.

Col. Stebon, of the Astor House, received, through Adams Express Company, from Richmond, the sign was formerly on Libby Prison.

Foreign News.

The Lonnon Star thinks recent events have materially altered the state of things which existed when the British government recognized the rebel government as belligerents. It says Jeff. Davis with a carpet bag at Danville is a different person in the eye of international law from President Davis at Richmond, backed by the army of Gen. Lee. The U. S. have unquestionably a right to dispute the validity of the commissioners of Davis, and to demand that war vessels of the U. S. shall not be subjected to vexatious restrictions. If the claims be not responded to, they have a perfect right to treat all war vessels of other nations entering their ports with the same scant courtesy that is meted to them abroad. The Star mentions that the necessity for a speedy resumption of travel between England and the South, and says they cannot with propriety make representations to the American Government in that respect as they recognize the rebels as belligerents.

The London Standard chasges England with having been accessory to the greatest crime that modern his tory records in not interfering to secure the independance of the South, and claims she might have done this without overstepping the laws of nations. It predicts future misfortune to England in consequence of this neglect. It says: We have from the first asserted that the South was fighting our battles, and we do not hesitate to say that we regard the disaster which has befallen Lee's army as an event which will fail ultimately to exercise a serious influence upon our own imperial interests.

The London Herald of the 25th ult. has the following: The surrender of Lee is not only the greatest misfortune that has happened to the South, but is the crowning disaster, in which we see the the end of all. The tumultuous wave of Northern aggression has at last swept down before it that proud towering cliff against which, for four years it has dashed itself in vain. At the close of the fourth year of the war the North has prevailed, as we along feared it would, but hoped it would not.

"Emigration" to Mexico.

President Juarez, of the Mexican Republic, has issued letters of marque and reprisal against the French comerce.

The excitement in regard to the Mexican emigration movement is said to be extending in New York and throughout the country, The office where persons desirins to join the expedition and registering their names was opened in that city yesterday, and was crowded all day. Most of the volunteers in the movement are veteran soldiers, who have served in the armies of the Union during the past four years. Common emigrants, is understood, as guaranteed one thousand and eight hundred acres of land. Bounties to those receiving commissions as officers will of course be much larger. It is reported that the Mexican Republican Gen. Ortega is at the head of the enterprise, and that all the emigrants will go fully, supplied with weapons, but such arangements have been made as to allow of this without a breach af international neutrality.

Taylor's Surrender.

A special to tee Times, Washington 8th, says information was received at army headquarters that day of the final and complete surrender of Dick Taylor's forces in Alabama and Mississippi to Gen. Canby. It is a remarkable fact that this news and other dispatches were received over the rebel telegraph lines direct from Macon to Washington. Gen. Wilson is still in Macon; the escape of Davis is, therefore, next to impossible.—It is said Davis, after leaving Yorkville, S. C., reached Washington, Ga., on the 3d. From here he was again driven by the approach of Gen. Stoneman. The direction taken indicates an attempt to cross the Missisippi River, but he will find Wilson in his path.

Johnston and his Army.

A North Carolina letter says: When negotiations for Johnston's surrender commenced, he had about 50,000 troops, but of these not more than 30,000 waited to be paroled, so undisiplined and anxious were they to get out of the army and return home. They stole all the horses they could could from their officers, struck off across the county and engaged in indiscriminate plundering. Gen. Johnston admitted he had no coocrol over them.—he spoke very bitterly of Davis, attributing all the rebel failures to his administrative bungling. He considers South Carolina the worst whipped State in the Union.

☞ The evidence in possession of the Government, of the conublicity of Jeff. Davis and his proscribed associates is such that no foreign Government will hesitate a moment in giving them up. President Johnston's proclamation for the arrest has been sent throughout the South over the rebel telegraph line.

☞ Sanders and Tucker have left Montreal, probably gone to Europe.

Proclamation

By the President of the United States of America.

Whereas, By my direction, the Acting Secretary of State, in a notice to the public, on the 17th of April, requested the various religious denominations to assemble on the 19th of April, on the occasion of the obsequies of Abraham Lincoln, late President of the U. S., and to observe the same with appropriate ceremonies, and whereas, our country has become one great house of mourning, where the head of the family has been taken away, and believing that a special period should be assigned for again humbling ourselves before Almighty God, in order that the bereavment may be sanctified to the nation's good, now, therefore in order to mitigate the grief on earth which can only be assuaged by communion with the Father in Heaven, and in compliance with the wishes of Senators and Representatives in Congress, communicated to me by a resolution adopted at the National capital, I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, do hereby appoint Thursday, June 1st, next, to be observed wherever in the U. S. the flag of the country may be respected, as a day of humiliation and mourning, and recommend my fellow citizens then to assembles in their respective places of worship, that they unite in solemn service to Almighty God, in memory of the good man who has been removed, so that all shall be occupied at the same time in contemplation of his virtues, and sorrow for his sudden and violent end.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at Washington, April 24th, 1865, and of the Independence of the United States of America the 89th.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

By the President: W. Hunter,
Acting Secretary of State.

Circular.

I would say to the farmors of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit,) that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and ground or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms.

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be doneall who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,
WOOLSTON COMFORT.

Commissioners Notice.

The undersigned having been appointed commissioners by the Court of Probate of county of Lenawee, to hear and determine and adjust all claims and demands against the estate of James B. Wells deceased, late of the town of Franklin, hereby give notice, that they will meet at the late residence of said deceased in said town of Franklin, on the 17th day of June and 30th day of September 1865 at one o'clock P. M. of each of said days, to hear any claim against said deceased and that six months from the third day of April 1865 is allowed for creditors of said estate to present their claims for allowance.

☞ P. N. Curtis has just received some new and beautiful styles of Wall Paper, also a beautiful assortment of Curtain Paper and Patent Curtain Fixtures which are more convenient than any ever before invented. All for sale very low.

New Goods

Astell & Adam have received new Prints, Ladies' Cloths, and Silks. Examine before purchasing elsewhere. The Silk is expressly for Cloaks. Call and purchase before it is all gone, the demand is great.

☞ J. D. Robbins has just received another lot of Wall Paper and Window Shades of the latest styles. Out of his large and carefully selected stock he can't fail to suit the most fastidious. Give him a trial.

☞ Last Saturday Mr. Alonzo Dieter who lives about two miles north of this village, met with a serious accident.—While chopping with a sharp axe, by some unlucky manoeuvre the axe missed its mark, and struck his foot, cutting it so badly that his neighbors were afraid for a time he would bleed to death. But by the aid of physicians the bleeding was finally stepped, and he is now recovering.

☞ Everybody, has seen the allegorical picture in Harper's Weekly, representing Columbia weeping over Mr. Lincoln's coffin. It is a very tasteful design, and one would suppose, sufficiently plain to the dullest comprehension. Yet a good many persons buying the paper, point to the weeping woman and innocently ask, 'I s'pose that's Mrs. Lincoln?'

Salt in Ridgeway.

Such are the indications of salt in the water used to supply Isaac L. Kniffin's Steam Sawmill, in Ridgeway, Lenawee County Mich, that a lease of 50 acres of land has been taken by the agency of a Salt and Oil Company in New York, with an engagement to begin to sink a well the present summer, 2000 feet, if not successful before reaching that depth.—Other lands in Ridgeway show surface manifestations of Oil, and an agent is endeavoring to obtain the right to delve to the hidden chambers of this source of light and wealth.

Pebbles

Our newly elected city officers have assumed the reins of government. Retrenchment is the order for the coming year. Somebody has favored us with late Richmond papers. Thanks. A. J. Hong has got a good 'run.' He takes good pictures, and the colors won't run, and that's what's the matter. His only fault is he will use a 'lob. Give the editor a good cigar, or some of that good smoking tobacco, Alf. New fences are being put up all around town, and we are assured the whitewashing will commence at an early day. President Johnson has appointed Thursday, June 1st, as a day of humiliation and prayer, and so has Gov. Crapo. Jim. Wheeler has a large stock of new seasonable goods on hand, which should be examined by the purchasing public. Deuel is having his building painted. Looks better. Beautiful spring days now—the weather calmy, the atmosphere balmy, the birds psalmy, the pastures lamby, and breakfasts hamy, with eggs to match. —Mrs. Patton, has organized a juvenile singing school here and has about fifty pupils. The ladies' are getting all their Spring fixin's on, they look gay.—R. C. Moore has gone to New York after New Goods. Hank, Packard has sold his Livery Stable to a Mr. Underwood. There is to be a dance at the Ridgeway Exchange on the 26th. You must all go to the Menagerie next Tuesday. Dan. Rice is the prince of showmen. Tindall & Slayton are preparing to move their ware-house. Our worthy City Marshal is fixing up the streets and side-walks in apple pie order. He more than understands his business. The Baptist Society are about to start the work upon their new church again. It will be pushed forward to its completion, and when finished will be one of the finest church edifices in the place. We are going to have a National Bank, with P. R. Adams, for President, and L. Lilley, Cashier. P. Keysor is about putting up a two story brick-block, east of the Osborne Block. C. B. Ackley, of Adrian, will soon open a Yankee Notion store here. Will some of our subscribers bring us some wood. If you want a good suit of clothes give A. Hardy a call.

☞ See the advertisement of the menagerie in another column. It is only necessary to mention the name of Dan Rice, (which is a sure sign of the best, moral exhibition traveling) in connection with anything in this line to insure a crowd. He now has the best collection of living animals ever exhibited. The following is from the CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

"His menagerie is one of the best which has ever visited Chicago. His collection is large and varied, and contains many rare and unique specimens of the animal kingdom. One of the rarest and most interesting is the baby elephant, a diminutive creature, and the only one of the age and size at present on exhibition in this country. The sacred bull deservedly attracts great attention, and much curious comment. The ring performances are unexceptionable. The astonishing docility and intelligence of the horse is there abundantly exemplified, and the extraordinary performances of the educated mules furnish large measures of fun for the little folks. It is an excellent entertainment and deserves to be liberally patronized."

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

By authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned has assumed the General Subscription Agency for the sale of United States Treasury Notes, bearing seven and three tenths per cent. interest, per annum, known as the

SEVEN-THIRTY LOAN.

These Notes are issued under date of June 15th, 1864, and are payable three years from that time, in currency, or are convertible at the option of the holder into

U. S. 6-20. Six per cent.

GOLD-BEARING BONDS.

These bonds are worth a premium which increases the actual profit on the 7-30 loan, and its exemption from State and municipal taxation, which adds from one to three per cent. more, according to the rate levied on other property. The interest is payable in currency semi-annually by coupons attached to each note, which may be cut off and sold to any bank or banker.

The interest amounts to

One cent	per day	on a	$50	note.
Two cents	"	"	$100	"
Ten "	"	"	$500	"
20 "	"	"	$1000	"
$1 "	"	"	$5000	"

Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions and the notes forwarded at once. The interest to 15th June next will be paid in advance. This is

The Only Loan in Market,

now offered by the Government, and it is confidently expected that its superior advantage will make it the Great Popular Loan of the People.

Less than $300,000,000 of the loan authorized by the last Congress are now on the market. This amount, at the rate at which it is being absorbed, will all be subscribed for within four months, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans.

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscription at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

JAY COOKE,
SUBSCRIPTION AGENT, Philadelphia.

March 25, 1865.

Subscriptions will be received by the First National Bank of Ypsilanti, and the First National Bank of Detroit.

THE NINTH NATIONAL BANK

OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK.

FISCAL AGENT OF THE UNITED STATES, AND SPECIAL AGENT FOR JAY COOKE, SUBSCRIPTION AGENT.

Will deliver 7-30 Notes, Free of Charge by express, in all parts of the country, and receive in payment Checks on New York, Philadelphia, and Boston, current bills, and all five per cent. interest notes, with interest to date of subscription. Orders sent by mail will be promptly filled.

THE SCANDINAVIAN Remedies

"No pent-up Utica contracts our powers,
For the whole boundless Continent is ours."

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS
SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

A healthy tonic, gentle stimulant and unequalled morning appetizer. Prepared in ripe old Bourbon. Being now used to the exclusion of all other Bitters in more than fifty United States Army Hospitals, and millions of private families, and is the only popular medicine which has been especially exempted from stamp tax by the United States government, on the ground of its having been adopted as a standard remedy by the medical profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ They are made of ingredients well known and approved by the medical profession, as having powerful tonic properties, are both palatable and pleasant, with sufficient strengthening properties to correct the bilious derangement of the system, and act like a charm when taken according to direction, as a remedy for the following diseases:—Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affections, Loss of Appetite, Lowness of Spirit, Sallow Complexion,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

FOR

Headache, Costiveness, and kindred diseases, arising from a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels. Let every one try these agreeable Bitters; once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who are in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effectual tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced me to give them publicity, so that thousands who have not used them, may try them and be convinced of their efficacy.—

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ Ladies, who have tried and found most other "Stomach Bitters" too bitter, unpalatable and too highly medicated for their delicate taste, please give these a trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system.

☞ If your druggist or traderman has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.—

☞ Remember the name, and take no other.

RED JACKET Stomach Bitters

THESE Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of over twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by their use gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from torpid liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of those Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

They strengthen and invigorate the system.
They are unequaled for general debility.
They are a sure cure for dyspepsia.
They give a good and healthy appetite.
They assist digestion.
They are the best stimulant in existence.
They are a preventive of Fever and Ague.
They relieve constipation.
They cure Nervous Headache.
They are perfetly pure and palatable

Aged persons and delicate females will find they can save large doctor's bills by the use of these Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits. The Red Jacket Bitters are only sold in bottles with our name blown on the side, and our private government stamp across the cork. —OUR—

Prospectus of the Jackson Daily Citizen.

On or about the 27th of March, the proprietors of the Jackson Weekly Citizen propose to issue a FIRST CLASS DAILY PAPER, to fill a pressing want, which has long been felt in Central Michigan, now one of the most populous and wealthy sections of the State.

We propose to issue a Journal, respectable in size, containing the full Telegraphic Reports of the Associated Press, the latest Markets, and all the General News of the day. Particular attention will be paid to Local and State News, and everything that goes to make a Daily Paper interesting to all. In fact, we propose to make a LIVE DAILY PAPER, fully up to the times, dealing fairly and squarely with all the issues of the day, and earnestly advocating those views and principles, which we believe will be for the best interests of our common country. While it will be the organ of no man or clique, it will support the administration in a vigorous prosecution of the war, until the old flag again floats over ever every foot of the National domain, and until the last vestige of armed rebellion is swept from the land.

With a Journal of this character, looking closely after, and advancing the INTERESTS of this LOCALITY, not violently partizan, but firm, independent and manly in tone, we appeal to all classes of our citizens for a prompt, hearty and generous support.

We shall issue a MORNING PAPER, that will reach, at least, six of our interior counties in advance of any other Daily.—With a new POWER PRESS, operated by STEAM, and new type, we expect to make a handsome sheet, fresh and attractive in appearance, and as a NEWSPAPER worthy the confidence and patronage of all.

Our Weekly will be changed to a quarto in form, and will contain 48 colums of matter, over 40 of which will embrace the cream of the Daily, selected with the utmost care.

With these improvements the weekly Citizen will be as valuable in any household, and will contain as much interesting matter as any of the Eastern weeklies.

The Daily Citizen will reach Tecumseh at 8 o'clock A. M., six or seven hours in advance of any other paper, and will contain the latest war news. Mr. G T. Ketcham will have charge of our circulation in Tecumseh. Subscribers are requested to hand in their names early.

The Trumpeter.

A GOOD Parisian story is told at the expense of a very handsome and rich widow of most exemplary character, who had a small and elegant retreat Versailles in addition to her town residence. At this pretty ruralty she was passing a week, at the close of autumn, having for her guest a lad in his teens, a distant relative, and was thus passing his vacation from school. Madame's house-keeper and cook was a respectable female, who, however, had an admirer, a trumpeter, stationed in the barracks near by, and the stolen pleasure of whom was to come in and dine stealthily on the remaining dishes of the mistress's luxurious table.

Madame and her boy relative having started after dinner for a walk, trumpeter took advantage of the absence, but unluckily prolonged his meal for a few minutes too long. In his hurry to conceal himself when taken by surprise, he became ensconced under the bed of the lady of the house, thinking to escape while she passed her evening in the drawing-room as usual. Madame was tired with her walk, however, and proceeded to retire for the night, immediately on her return.

The trumpeter in full uniform, and with his brazen instrumont beside him, was of course in a position of considerable dismay. As he lay racking his brain, the door suddenly opened, and in walked the school-boy, who, to the astonishment of the lady, fell on his knees, and made a tumultuous declaration of love!

'In the name of heaven,' cried the astonished object of his passions, 'rise, and leave the room immediately! What would be thought of me if you were seen in this indiscreet situation and posture! Rise, this moment, and retire!'

'No!' firmly persisted the academical, 'I live to love you! No power on earth shall tear me from this spot—no—not even if the trump of the last day——'

At this moment, the trumpeter, whose lip was on the edge of his instrument, blew a blast, into which was poured the overwhelming torrent of his previous impatience. 'Trrr—la ta ta ta ta ta'—a thunder-blast to which the walls of the little cottage trembled to their foundations.

The room was vacated by dame and lover in a thrice; and the trumpeter made his escape—but the story got wind, and without name or place, was told all over Paris.

It was being narrated one evening by a gay man, in a small circle, when the narrator remarked, 'I would have given anything in the world to have seen the face of the lady at the moment of that trumpet's sounding'

'The face of the boy on his knees was much better worth seeing, I assure you!' exclaimed, in a tone of pique, a lady among the listeners—unguardedly revealing, by this hasty comment, that she saw, herself the heroine of the story.

Roberts "Silver Rule."

A beautiful little boy, five years old, who had never attended a public school, but could read pretty well, was sent with a little associate to the primary department in the academy. After a few days had passed at school, the two little boys called to see a lady, who inquired of them how they liked their school. With his usual gravity Robert said:

"I don't like it at all."

"Why?" said the lady, with surprise.

"Because," he replied, "one of the boys put some ink on my pants."

"That was very wrong. And what did you do to the boy?"

"I put some ink on his pants," said he.

"Why, Robert, do you think that was right?"

"Yes ma'am, for it says in my reader, 'Whatsoever men do to you, do ye even so to them.'"

Robert made a great omission, and changed the meaning of the golden rule altogether, by leaving out a very few words. It made what some call "a silver rule." But such a rule will not answer for this sinful world. The world would never be any better to follow it. It would produce hatried, wrath, strife, variance, sedition and murder. What a world that would be. Just such a world as we now live in, so far as it is influenced by this selfish rule.

But the golden rule, just as the Saviour gave it to his disciples, will produce love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness meekness, and goodness. What a delightful world this would be; and it will be such when all shall be influenced by the spirit of this blessed rule, and love as brethren.

Let us adopt and practise this rule, dear children. It will do much for our good and the good of others, and honor Him who gave it to man.

And let us always repeat the Scriptures correctly. They are never improved by any change, especially the golden rule, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." Matt. vii. 12.

A Second Crusoe.

General Scott, in his interesting autobiography, gives an account of a Robinson Crusoe, a Mr. Pain, who lived a solitary life of many years on the Island of Cape Breton. He says:

Mr. Pain sailed from Boston in a smack for the banks of Newfoundland and other fishing grounds in 1774, before the outbreak of the Revolution. Having made up the cargo in the Gut of Canso, Pain begged his companions to let him remain till the return of the party the following season. They assisted in building him a hut, and left him with a good supply of personal and bed-clothes, some axes and other tools, a gun, with ammunition, fishing tackle, and such other stores as could be spared, together with a Bible, 'Paradise Lost,' and the 'Pilgrim's Progress.' Prayers were said at parting, and the smack sailed for home.

This was the last that our adventurer saw of "the human face divine" for nine or ten years. The Revolutionary war supervened. There was no more fishing and curing of fish by Americans on those shores—the Gut of Canso not being navigated at that period except by vessels driven into it by stress of weather.—There was no road, and no trail across the mountains to any settlement whatever.

For the first year, and, indeed, till his supplies began to fall him Mr. Pain, then young, did not lament his condition.—But when the second and third season came, and again and again there was no return of his friends, it seemed evident that they had abandoned him; his spirits dropped, and he was in danger of being lost in despair. But man is the most flexible and pliable of all animals. According to his own account, Mr. Pain began to relish food without salt; the deer and fleece goat were abundant, furnishing him with both food and raiment, and which he contrived to entrap after his powder and shot were exhausted. So, too, in respect to worn out hooks and lines; those were replaced by bones and slips of skin, so that there was no want of the 'finny prey.' By the fifth year he began to like the new life as well as at first. His books were more than a solace to him, and the autographer can testify that he could accurately recite from memory entire chapters of the Bible and many of the books of 'Paradise Lost.'

Finall, when, at the end of the war, his old master in a smack came in search of him or his remains, he had become so attached to his new mode of existence that he refused to return to his native soil. A good supply of necessaries was left with him. His little property at home was invested in cattle, with materials for a small house, some furniture &c, all of which were sent out to him, with an old sister, a farm laborer and a lad, a relative. Before 1812 some new connections and laborers had joined him, and he had become a thrifty farmer.

Commodore Tucker.

I remember well—says an American writer—hearing this venerable man relate his receiving his first commission in our navy. He was at Marblehead, soon after his return from England, and at the time Washington was at Cambridge.—Tucker, then a young man, was cutting wood before his mother's door, when a gaily dressed officer rode down the street. It was in the dark of the evening, and the officer, seeing Tucker thus employed, rode up to him and asked him if he could inform him where the Honorable Samue Tucker resided. Tucker, astonished, answered in the negative, saying, 'There is no other Sam Tucker in this town than myself.' Immediately on hearing this the officer raised his beaver, and, bowing low, presented him his commission in the navy.

☞ Never desert a friend when enemies gather around him—when the world is dark and cheerless is the time to try a friend. They who turn from a scene of distress betray their hypocrisy, and proves that interest moves them. If you have a friend who loves you, and studies your interest and happiness, be sure and sustain him in adversity. Let him feel that his former kindness is appreciated, and that his love is not thrown away. Real fidelity may be rare, but it exists in the heart. Who has not seen and felt its powers? They deny its worth who never loved a friend, or labored to make a friend happy.

☞ Why are apples like unmarried ladies? Because they are shrivelled and difficult to pare (pair.)

Long Skirts and Low Necks.

A jolly 'nautical,' lately relieved from blockade service, was drifting leasurly down the fashionable side of Chesnut Street, the last pleasant, sunshiny day we were blessed with, keeping a bright look-out for breakers, when he happened to fall into the wake of a couple of fashionable clippers, carrying skysails, and trailing three quarters of a yard of 'Foulard,' and 'Gros du Rhine,' on the filthy sidewalk, sweeping, flagging and swabbing out gutters at street crossings.

Jack in his salt water innocence, laid hold of the fancy that the two crafts were outsailing their lower canvas together; and having on innate idea that a cruiser of that discription would look shockingly ridiculous going down that channel under bare lower masts, in the simplicity and kindness of his heart, packed on sail, ranged ahead, and then sheered to port in sailing distance to advise the strangers of their danger.

'I say missusses your mainsails have got adrift over the taffrail, and are towing astarn apout a fathom.'

Just here Jack happened to observe that the upper end of the dresses were something lower than the law—of modesty—allows, and in his astonishment he sung out:

'Blast my bloody eyes, old gals, you'd better bear a hand, and rouse up the heads of them are mainsails o'yours, and clap on new robands. If a white squall should happen to strike ye in that are trim, I'm blessed if ye wouldn't git caught flat back, and all go to the devil starn foremost two twos.'

Early Rising.

Every circumstance contributes to render early rising advisable to those who are in the enjoyment of health. There is no time equal in beauty and freshness to the morning, when nature has just parted with the gloomy mantle which night flung over her, and stands before us like a young bride, from wose aspect the veil which covered her loveliness has been withdrawn. The whole material has a vivifying appearance. The husband is up at his labor, the forost leaves sparkle with drops of crystal dew, the flowers raise their rejoicing heads towards the sun, the birds pour forth their anthems of gladness; and the wide face of creation itself seems as if awakened and refreshed by a nightly slumber. All these things however, are hidden from the eye of the sluggard; natuse in her most glorious aspect is to him a sealed book; and while every scene around him is full of beauty interest, and animation, he alone is passianless and uninspired. Behold him stretched upon his couch of rest! In vain does the cock proclaim that the reign of day has commenced! In vain does the morning light stream fiercely in by the chinks of his window, as if to start him from his repose! He hears not, he sees not, for blindness and deafness rule over him with desperate sway, and lay a deadning smell upon his focilities. And when he does at length awake, far on in the day—from the torpor of his benumbing sleep, he is not refreshed. He does start at once into a new life—an altered man, with joy in his mind, and vigor in his frame. On the contrary, he is dull, languid, and stupid, as if half recavered from a paroxysm of drunkenness. He yawns, stretches himself, and stalks into the breakfast-parlor, to partake in solitude and without appetite, of his unrefreshing meal—while his eyes are red, his beard unshorn, and his clothes disorderly and ill put on. Uncleanliness and sluggishness generally go hand in hand; for the obtuseness of mind which disposes a man to waste the most precious precious hours of existance in debasing sleep, will naturally make mim neglect his person.

DOING A LANDLORD.—'Do you suppose you can do the landlord in the "Lady of Lyons?"' said a manager toa seedy actor in quest of an engagement.

'I should think I might,' was the reply; 'I have done a great many land lords.'

☞ "Is that p-p-p-parrot for sale?"

'Yes.'

'How m-m-m much?'

'A guinea,' was the respence.

'C-c-c can it speak?'

'Yes,' said the fellow, 'a precious sight better than you can, or I'd chop his head off.'

☞ When is a printer like a good lawyer? When he works at his case.

☞ The man whose feelings were worked up, has ordered a fresh supply.

Flowers.

What a volume of thought and feeling is contained in the simple flower! As the lightnings which flash along the firmament of heaven, or the thunder which startle the silence of eternity, are typical of his anger and might so are the beauty and simplicity of a flower typical of His purity and mercy.

A flower is no insignificant object. It is fraught with many a deep though mute lesson of wisdom. It teaches us that even itself the brightest ornament of the vegetable world, must fade away and die—and the life which we prize so highly may be seen, as in a mirror, through its different changes.

The withered leaflet is like unto a crushed and broken heart. Its fading loveliness is like the approach of age as it throws its mantle of wrinkled care over the form of some lovely specimen of humanity. Its sweet fragrance is like the joys and pleasures of our breasts ere they have been contaminted by the rude touches of the world.

The dew drop which at morning's dawn, rests upon the half open bud, is like the tear which dims the infant's speaking eye when his childish glee has been reproved by the voice of affection.

A flower represents makind in the changes of infancy, youth, manhood, and old age. The young bud is infancy; the bursting flower youth; the flower full blown is manhood; and the withered and falling leaf is the type of old age.

Its uses are various and manifold.—Sometimes the promptings of affection leads us to place it, in its purity and beauty, over the tomb of some beloved friend, where shedding around its fragrance, it steals upon our senses like the memory of the departed beings beneath. Sometimes the hand of pride will pluck it from its stem, to deck the hair of the blooming bride, or add by its odor to the festive scene. And not unfrequently it is the mute bearer of some fond tale of love to the ecstatic sense of her whose heart and feelings are at length justified, by its sweet language, in the thoughts they so long have harbored. It soothes the cares of the troubled soul, and alleviates the pangs of sorrow. It wins upon us by its modest though blooming appearance, and its gentle influence steals into our bosoms and softens our natures.

Study the flowers, and behold the wisdom, the goodness, and mercy of the Almighty. Anatomize them, and behold the innumerable parts which form and make up the whole, and the system and order with which they are joined together.

Refinement dwelleth among the flowers. There the affections of our hearts are given license to rove, and there the enthusiasm of our nature overcomes the diffidence of our feelings. Voluntary homage arises to the maker, of objects so fair and beautiful, and the soul in the contemplation sighs itself away in a delicious reverie.

Pat's Hydrography.

One day the big clipper, star-liner Underwriter, was lathering away at it, braced up on the starboard tack, driving along fifteen knots, across the Grand Banks, in a rattling breeze at south-sou'-west.

At seven bells in the second forenoon-watch, Captain Symons came up on poop with his sextant, and began squinting through the little telescope attachment all around the horizon, adjusting the instrument and preparing to get his meridan observation for latitude.

Just about the same time, Mr. Treenail, the second mate, mustered a dezen men of the watch and set them to dragging away at foretop-mast staysail, jib, and flying jib-sheets, trimming aft the head sails.

Neil O'Callahan, a better class Patlander, and a second cabin passenger, happened to pop out of the companion-way on the poop, and observing, at two squints, the captain circumferenting the horizon with his queer-looking instrument, and all those sailors laying back and bowsing away at the pig ropes on the forecastle, suddenly took a 'turl' a' ide, and sung out to Mick Donoho, his especial chummy, who was quietly smoking his PUDEEN by the cabin stove.

'Houly Moses! Mick, Mick, I say, ye-od spalpeen, come away up here wud ye, and have a look; here's the captain measurin the great grane sae, and faue min houldin the ship be the hair av the hid!'

Capture of a Petticoat.

The leader of Southern chivalry has been captured, by our brave Michigan boys, while running to the woods, clothed in female habiliments. O, chivalry! where are thy blushes? How shall we sufficiently extol thy magnanimity? How are the mighty fallen! Jeff. Davis running away from camp in his wife's dress! Tell it not to the "Sunny South." Let it not go forth to the world. "Our Christian President" sneaking away from his poor helpless wife, leaving her to the mercy of "Lincoln's hirelings," and that after having himself robbed her of her clothing—faithful to the last—to the "last ditch"—to the "last dollar" even to the last woman.

Three cheers for Michigan! whose noble soldiers have always been foremost in the fight, bravest in battle, cheerful while others were despondent—and now give the closing touch to the rebellion, by taking prisoner their chivalrous petticoat President. Guard him well, lest he, by some willy plan, slip his neck from the halter.

Now we can finish up the play of "Hamlet," for we have the "Hamlet" for the play. We would give him the honor of standing upon "nothing," at the right of Robert E. Lee, Breckinridge, Regan, and all the rest of this class, down to a colonel, at least, and as much lower as we can find intelligence and enmity against our glorious Union. Stop not short of the halter for all the ringleaders in this most unholy and unprovoked war, which has cost us the lives of thousands of our best men, making breeches never to be healed; and shall we spare them and let another rebellion come upon us in a short time, because we dare not punish these? No, spare not the wicked leaders, but let JUSTICE have her full reward. Let it be swift and sure.

U. S. 7-30 LOAN.—It will be seen by reference to our new advertisement of the 7-30 loan, that less than $200,000,000 remain in the market; and should it continue to be taken in the unprecented haste which has characterized the absorption of the first series—nearly $10,000,000 per day being the average—that this chance for advantageous investment in our own Securities will soon pass away. Let all those who have the means and wish to aid the Government, be prompt in their subscriptions, for by so doing they make a saving to themselves, as well, by the aiding the payment and consequent discharge of their own loved ones whom "Uncle Sam" does not feel right to let go home without first filling his pockets with their well earned greenbacks.

☞ Anderson, the proprietor of the Richmond Tredegar Iron Works, is said to have made $14,000,000 since the war begun. He is opposed to confiscation.

A colored girl, whose eyes had long been defective, become blind about five months ago, and continued so untill the terrible explosion of the magazine, which seemed to shake creation. Recovering herself almost immediately from her sight, she exclaimed, "Mother, I can see."

The late conflagration in Richmond developed a curious incident and fact which may be valuable, if remembered. Some week or ten days after the fire, the iron safe of the Enquirer office was opened, when immediately on the admission of the air, the books and papers were ignited and consumed. And such was the case of all other safes which were not in brick vaults. In these the contents were uninjured. The Enquirer safe, at the time it was re-opened, was cold externally to the touch.

A robber was killed in Hamilton, Ohio, on the night of the 5th, during a thunder storm, while engaged in robbing the dwelling of D. Shatter. The latter heard an unusual noise in the house, and, while investigating the cause, a flash of lightning revealed the villain. Shaffer fired at him with a pistol, and the robber rushed upon him. The citizen fired again, bringing the robber to the floor. A light was peocured, and the rascal was found mortally wounded. One ball struck him in the left arm, the other in the back, penetrating his lungs. Before dying he said his name was Thomson. On his person was found $300, which he had stolen form the house adjoining that in which he met his fate.

National Debts and U. S. Stocks.

The creation of national debts is not a modern improvement, but the ability of a great nation to provide for a great debt, and to make it the most convenient and best form of personal property, is a modern wonder. The debt of Great Britain was begun by raising a million sterling by loan in 1692, and when her great contest with Louis XIV. was terminated, the debt had reached fifty millions. Many statesmen and economists were then alarmed at the great burden which had been imposed upon the industry of the country, but when the war of the Austrian succession had swelled this amount to eighty millions, Macauley says that historians and orators pronounced the case to be desperate. But when war again broke out, and the national debt was rapidly carried up to one hundred and forty millions, men of theory and business both pronounced that the fatal day had certainly arrived. David Hume said that, although, by taxing its energies to the utmost, the country might possibly live through it, the experiment must never be repeated,—even a small increase might be fatal. Granville said the nation must sink under it unless some portion of the load was borne by the American Colonies, and the attempt to impose this load produced the war of the revolution, and, instead of DIMINISHING, added another hundred millions to the burden. Again, says Macaulay, was England given over, but again she was more prosperous than ever before. But when at the close of her Napoleonic wars in 1816, this debt had been swelled up to the enormous sum of over eight hundred millions sterling, or four thousand three hundred million dollars, or nearly one half the entire property of the United Kingdom, the stoutest heart, the firmest believer in national progress and development, might well have been appalled. But in the very face of this mountain of obligation,—to say nothing of her vast colonial possessions,—the property of the British nation has been more than trebled, and her debt is now a charge of but 12 1-2 per cent. against it. All that Great Britain has done in paying her debt, we shall do, and more, with ours. We have vast territories untouched by the plow, mines of all precious metals of which we have hardly opened the doors, a population full of life, energy, enterprise and industry, and the accumulated wealth of money and labor of the old countries pouring into the lap of our giant and ever-to-be-united republic.—During the fiercest and most exhausting of all possible wars, we have demonstrated our national strength—and all the world over, national strength is but another name for national credit. "As good as United Stocks" will soon be synonmous the world over with "as good as British Consols." For our part, we think a U. S. Treasury note, bearing seven and three-tenths annual interest, is just as much better than British Consols as the rate of interest is higher. Some of our timid brethren, who shipped their gold to London ann invested in consols, are now glad to sell out and invest at home at a round loss,—and serves them right.

☞ A good story is told of Jeff. Davis. Some time ago the rebel authorities ordered all the horses that could be found in the neighboring counties suppressed. A squad of cavalry engaged in the execution of this order met Jeff. in his carriage, and ordered him to "get out" and give up the animals. Jeff. refused. The corporal insisted. Finally to cut short the parley, Jeff inquired, "Do you know who I am?" "No," replied the soldier. "I am President Davis," said Jeff. "Drive on," said the corporal, "I thought you looked like a d—d old postage stamp." The Hartford 'Courant' says it knows this to be true.

☞ A large emigration is taking place from great Britain and Ireland.—Crowds are waiting at Queenstown for the steamers to carry them over to America. Considerable numbers are leaving the mining and iron districts of England, 90 per cent. of whom are coming to the Northern States.

☞ The assassins awaiting their trial at Washington are kept under the strictest guard, and every precaution is taken to prevent their committing suicide.—Padded masks cover their entire heads except their mouth. It is thought that three of the Ford theatre employees will be convicted, although Ford himself seems innocent. Payne, the assassin of Seward will be the first tried.

☞ Henry A. Wise now claims to have been a strenuous Union man, and only took up arms when forced to do so by the North to protect Southern rights. This certainly caps the climax of rebel impudence.

☞ Edwin Booth, in a private letter to a friend in Washington, announces his determination to quit the stage forever.

☞ Many citizen clerks are being discharged from the War Department, and disabled soldiers substituted in their stead.

☞ The Navy Department has issued proposals for raising, on Government account, the sunken blockade runners along our coast.

☞ The telegraph is said to be working to the Gulf States, and confident hopes are entertained in Washington, of capturing Jeff. Davis. Later intelligence brings news of his capture.

☞ Mr. Henry Heyneman, the patriotic German who left Boston on the 24th ult., to walk to Washington, passed through Philadelphia on Friday last. He travels about 25 miles a day. Mr. Heyneman promises to walk back to Boston again if the Government hangs the pirate Semmes in the meantime.

☞ It is now ascertained that 1,600 lives were lost on board the Sultana, only 600 being saved, many of them seriously injured by wounds and scalds. The report that the boat was all in flames

Proclamation

By the President of the United States of America.

Whereas, By my direction, the Acting Secretary of State, in a notice to the public, on the 17th of April, requested the various religious denominations to assemble on the 19th of April, on the occasion of the obsequies of Abraham Lincoln, late President of the U. S., and to observe the same with appropriate ceremonies, and whereas, our country has become one great house of mourning, where the head of the family has been taken away, and believing that a special period should be assigned for again humbling ourselves before Almighty God, in order that the bereavment may be sanctified to the nation's good, now, therefore in order to mitigate the grief on earth which can only be assuaged by communion with the Father in Heaven, and in compliance with the wishes of Senators and Representatives in Congress, communicated to me by a resolution adopted at the National capital, I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States, do hereby appoint Thursday, June 1st, next, to be observed wherever in the U. S. the flag of the country may be respected, as a day of humiliation and mourning, and recommend my fellow citizens then to assembles in their respective places of worship, that they unite in solemn service to Almighty God, in memory of the good man who has been removed, so that all shall be occupied at the same time in contemplation of his virtues, and sorrow for his sudden and violent end.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at Washington, April 24th, 1865, and of the Independence of the United States of America the 89th.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

By the President; W. Hunter,
Acting Secretary of State.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit,) that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms.

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,

WOOLSTON COMFORT.

Commissioners Notice.

Wells deceased, late of the town of Franklin, hereby give notice, that they will meet at the late residence of said deceased in said town of Franklin, on the 17th day of June and 30th day of September 1865 at one o'clock P. "We can't forget the braves of so many battle fields,
The men who gave their life blood for what to-day it yields,
Who sleep beneath the pines, sweetly resting on their shields."

Nor should we—while life and being last we will cherish the memory of their deeds. What then will the citizens of Tecumseh do? Let us go to work at once to prepare a suitable monument to their memory. Let the monument be located in a conspicuous place in our beautiful village cemetery. Let the names of our sleeping patriots, with such other suitable inscriptions as we would all desire, have a place upon this monument. Let us have voluntary subscriptions to this work, to the amount of from five hundred to a thousand dollars, or as much more as may seem appropriate. Let the matter now be started, and completed as early as may be. What say you fellow citizens? A. CITIZEN.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

The sale of the first series of $200,000,000 of the 7-30 Loan was was completed on the 31st of March, 1865. The sale of the second series of Three hundred millions, payable three years from the 15th day of June, 1865, was begun on the 1st of April. In the short space of thirty days, over One Hundred millions of this serious have been sold—leaving this day less than Two Hundred to be deposited of. The Interest is payable semi-anuttly in currency on the 15th day of December and 15th of June by Coupons attached to each note, which are rerdily cashed any where. It amounts to

One cent per day on a			$50	note.

MORE AND MORE DESIRABLE

The rebellion is suppressed, and the Government has already adopted measures to reduce expenditures as rapidly as possible to a peace footing, thus withdrawg from market as borrower and purchaser.

This is

The Only Loan in Market,

now offered by the Government, and constitutes the

Great Popular Loan of the People.

The Seven-Thirty Notes are convertable on their maturity, at the option of the holder, into

U. S. 5-20 Six per cent.
GOLD-BEARING BONDS.

Which are always worth a premium.

Free from Taxation.

The 7.30 Notes cannot be taxed by Towns, Cities, Counties or States, and the interest is not taxed unless on a surplus of the owner's income exceeding six hundred dollars a year. This fact increases their value from at one three per cent. per ahumn, according to the rate levied on property.

Subscribe Quickly.

Less than $200,000,000 of the Loan authorized by the last Congress and now on the market. This amount at the rate at which it is being absorbed, will all be subscribed for within two months, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans. It now seems probable that no considerable amount beyond the present series will be offered to the public

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscription at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER
and
BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled
for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

RED JACKET
Stomach Bitters

THESE Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of over twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by their use gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from torpid liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of these Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

They strengthen and invigorate the system.
They are unequaled for general debility.
They are a sure cure for dyspepsia.
They give a good and healthy appetite.
They assist digestion.
They are the best stimulant in existence.
They are a preventive of Fever and Ague.
They relieve constipation.
They cure Nervous Headache.
They are perfectly pure and palatable

Aged persons and delicate females will find they can save large doctor's bills by the use of these Bitters.

Beware of counterfeits. The Red Jacket Bitters, are only sold in bottles with our name blown on the side, and our private government stamp across the cork.

There is a great and increasing demand for Good Coffee, and our design is to supply this demand.

Prospectus of the Jackson Daily Citizen.

On or about the 27th of March, the proprietors of the Jackson Weekly CITIZEN propose to issue a FIRST CLASS DAILY PAPER, to fill a pressing want, which has long been felt in Central Michigan, now one of the most populous and wealthy sections of the State.

We propose to issue a Journal, respectable in size, containing the full Telegraphic Reports of the Associated Press, the latest Markets, and all the General News of the day. Particular attention will be paid to Local and State News, and everything that goes to make a Daily Paper interesting to all. In fact, we propose to make a LIVE DAILY PAPER, fully up to the times, dealing fairly and equarely with all the issues of the day, and earnestly advocating those views and principles, which we believe will be for the best interests of our common country. While it will be the organ of no man or clique, it will support the administration in a vigorous prosecution of the war, until the old flag again floats over every every foot of the Nrtional domain, and until the last vestige of armed rebellion is swept from the land.

With a Journal of this character, looking closely after, and advancing the INTERESTS of this LOCALITY, not violently partizan, but firm, independent and manly in tone, we appeal to all classes of our citizens for a prompt, hearty and generous support.

We shall issue a MORNING PAPER, that will reach, at least, six of our interior counties in advance of any other Daily.—With a new POWER PRESS, operated by STEAM, and new type, we expect to make a handsome sheet, fresh and attractive in appearance, and as a NEWSPAPER worthy the confidence and patronage of all.

Our Weekly will be changed to a quarto in form, and will contain 48 colums of matter, over 40 of which will embrace the cream of the Daily, selected with the utmost care.

With these improvements the weekly Citizen will be as valuable in any household, and will contain as much interesting matter as any of the Eastern weeklies.

The Daily Citizen will reach Tecumseh at 8 o'clock A. M., six or seven hours in advance of any other paper, and will contain the latest war news. Mr. G T. Ketcham will have charge of our circulation in Tecumseh. Subscribers are requested to hand in their names early.

GUILTY OR NOT GUILTY.

BY CHRISTOPHER A. SMITH.

Towards the close of a lovely spring day, a traveler emerged from a copse bordering the West Camford Road, and, springing over the stile, took the direction of Aspendale, a village about two miles distant. His dress was of a superior, and yet travel-stained and neglected.

A few yards behind him, but unobserved by the former, came a peddler. The two traveled on together some distance, though the peddler, being an aged man, gradually dropped behind, and, at last, he turned aside into a lane, and the young man proceeded alone,

He was a man of about eight or nine and twenty: but he looked rather older; for his face, though partially concealed by thick beard, was pale and haggard.—Yet, for all that, he was handsome: but, though there was something in his aspect and carriage that was gracefull and easy, there was at the same time something about him repulsive; something dangerous in the expression of his dark, ever-vigilant, and somewhat bloodshot eyes.

There was somhthing defiant about him, though; for he seemed broken and sad.

Half an hour after he had leaped the stile, he entered the village of Aspendale, and, making his way to the Red Lion, seated himself in the tap room, and called for some brandy.

There were several persons in the room, who, after the first stare at the stranger, went on with their conversation without noting him.

The stranger, after eagerly swallowing the brandy, sat dozing in the corner, enjoying the coolness of the air, which was fafted in at the open window, and seemed to listen anxiously the conversation of his companions.

'Nation good luck, that of Daniel Keen's,' said the elder of two countrymen, who were convrsing, and whom his companion designated Jack Finch. 'Nation good luck, I must say: wasn't it?—Why, they do tell me as the squire left him a matter o' two hundred pounds.'

'Ay, sure he did such; for I driv him over t'other day to the bank to get the brads. Such a lot o' shiners! two hundred golden guineas all in a bab at once.'

'Sovereigns, man,—sovereigns: there a'n't no guineas now,' interrupted Finch.

Well, never mind: it's all the same.—But 'twas very good o' the squire to think of him,—werry good. I told the old chap as he'd better put it in the savings-bank; but he said there wasn't no bank as he'd trust. It was safe enough with him.'

'Well, people has strange notions.—A'n't he living ub there by himself?—'Ta'n't safe. Why, he might be robbed and murdered, and nobody none the wiser.'

They were interrupted by the entrance of Peter Coombs, the peddler, who having swung his packet from his back, turned round, and thus addressed the company:—

'Morning to ye, Muster finch. Morning, Muster Brown. Morning to you, sir.'

This last observation was addressed to the traveler, who, at the sight of the peddler, started, muttered a reply, which was not distinguishable, and sunk back as if wishing to to avoid observation.

No offense, sir? no offense I hope?—said the peddler.

And, having called for a pint of beer, he sat himself down.

'Now, Peter,' said Finch, 'hast got any knives, man?'

'Yes, sure I have,' answered the peddler, producing some from his pack.—'Them's the sort; splended steel; cut like a razor.'

'Let's look,' said Brown, who commenced trying their quality on one of his horny palms. 'Have this one, Jack:—t'other's got a flaw in the blade, close down by the handle. Do you see?'

'Ah! so it has. Dang it! that's a pity, 'cause I like that handle best; but come, Peter, what's the damage, man?—Two and sixpence? Well, that a'n't dear as things go: is it, Brown?'

'No I can't say as it is; only I wish that other one wasn't damaged, I'd have that mIself. You a'n't got another one, Peter?'

'No,' replied the peddler: 'them's the only twol've got o' them sort. But I'll bring you over one next time I come.

'That will do better; and Heter old Chap, pick us out a nice one,—no flaws, ol! gentle.'

The peddler placed the knife in his pack, and then commenced to devour huge slices of pork and bread, which he had brought with him. the countrymen, having drank their bear, rose, and bidding Peter good morning, and mumbling to themselves that 'that stranger was a mighty encivil chap, and they didn't half like the looks of him,' departed.

The peddler's meal being finished, he lit his pipe, and began to smoke; but fatigued with a long walk, he soon laid his head on the table, and fell asleep.

About a half an hour after this, when the peddler awoke, the stranger was gone. Strapping his pack on his back, he proceeded to look for his stick. It was not there.

'Well, he said, 'I could have sworn I brought that stick in here with me. But I suppose I left it up at Daniel Keen's.—I'll go back, and see. I wouldn't lose my old horse fer any money.'

Cheerily strode the peddler up the hill leading to Old Keen's house. He was an honest, faithful old man; and, his occupation taking him through all parts of the country, he had imbibed a strong love for the natural and the picturesque. The view which spread itself before him as he rose to the crown of the hill was very beautiful, glorified as it was by the warm tints of the sunset; and he sat down, and gazed on it. He sat for some time, drinking in its beauties, till the fading light warned him it was time to be moving.

Arrived at the house, the peddler knocked at the door. He then pulled the string, as he wont, and pushed the door to enter; but it was fastened. He tapped again, and waited; but he got no answer.

Daniel Keen's house was situated in a lone place, and was a much larger one than was necessary for a single man; but he was rather a strange old fellow, and though the squire had offered to build a comfortable cottage, and let him live rent free, he had refused. The house was his, he said, and it would last his time: he was born in it, and he would die in it.—Of late the place had fallen to decay, but though the old man was possessed of money, and had just had a legacy left him of two hundred pounds, he refused to have it repaired.

He was at times strange in his manner, and the villagers said he had never been right since his wife died; and that she, poor thing, had been killed by the unfilial conduct of their son, who, eight years since, had absconded, and never been heard of since.

There was a sort of bond between him and the peddler; for the peddler's son had been mixed up in the same affray as young Keen, and the two hae decamped on the same night, but whether in company none could say.

The peddler waited a few minutes, and then tapped a third time: he was beginning to feel uneasy. It was to early, under ordinery circumstances, for the old man to have retired to rest, and he feared he might be ill.

When he knocked the third time he listened; for he fancied he heard footsteps decending the stairs. They approached the door softly, and he heard some one breathing shortly and quickly on the other side of the door.

In another instant the door was opened. The peddler entered, and it was quickly closed and the bar dropped.

CHAPTER II.

Towards ten o'clock, a cottager, who lived in the West-Comford Road, was aroused by a knocking at the door. At first it was faint, then louder.

The cottager, who was in bed, got up, looked out of the window, and saw a man at his door, pale and trembling. The man whose name was Blackman, did not bear the best of characters. He was a notorious poacher; but the peasantry of that district did not look upon that as a crime of so hideous a character as to cause a man to be outcast, and so down the cottager came.

'What's the matter?' asked the cottager, when he had opened the door. You look as if you'd seen a ghost.'

'Something's wrong up at Keen's Jack; and, if I a'n't seen a ghost, I've seen something as would scare anybody.

'What did you see, mate?'

'I'll tell you. You see, I was just going down to Blissett's Bottom, to see if I could find a hare or a leveret or two,' when, as I goes past Old Keen's, I sees a light moving about. Thinks I, that's funny. What's the old fellow doing at this time of night? I goes on, but somehow I didn't think it was all right; so I goes back, and, just as I gets up to the door, I sees the light pass from one room to the other. 'Surely,' says I, 'that's never Old Keen;' and I knocked at the door. The light had come into the sleeping-room just before I knocked. As soon as I had, I heard footsteps go back up the stairs, but nobody came to the door; so then I looked in at the window, for the shutters wasn't fastened, and there I saw a terrible sight. The candle was on the table, and on the floor lay a man,—poor old Daniel; and I think he was dead, for his face was white, and there was blood on his garbardine, and on the floor. Just as I was looking in, there was a noise, then a cry, and then a groan. I can tell you, mate, I was so scared I didn't stop for nothing, but ran off here as fast as I could.'

'We'll go back,' said the cottager, whose name was Bedwell, 'and call up Jabez Banks as we go along.'

The two men started for Banks's cottage, and in less than half an hour the three were back at the lone house inhabited by Daniel Keen.

All was now dark, and the door resisted all their efforts: they were, therefore, obliged to return for some means of opening it.

Meantime, let us return to the peddler. No sooner was the door closed and barred, than a hand was on his shoulder, his feet were knocked from under him, and he fell heavily on the floor. He attempted to rise, but a blow from an unseen hand laid him prostrate, and the next instant a mist floated before his eyes, and in another moment he was unconscious.

When he recovered his senses, there was a light on the table, and a man, with his back towards him, was in the act of wrenching open one of the cupboards. The peddler started as though he would rise, and the movement caught the quick ears of the robber, and he turned suddenly round. As the light flashed upon his face, the peddler uttered a cry, exclaiming,—

'Heaven have mercy upon me! It is Fred!'

'Oh! you know me, then?' cried the man, springing towards him; but suddenly he recoiled.

'My father!' he cried. 'What a cursed chance! I did not mean to harm him.'

At the sight of the son, the poor old peddler closed his eyes, and sank back horror-stricken: but in a moment he opened them, and fixed them on his son; and, as he gazed, each appeared riveted, the one upon the other.

The son cowered before the meek, uplifted eyes of the poor death-stricken father. He stood for some moments spellbound. The peddler's lips moved as if in prayer, a shudder passed through his frame, and his eyes closed.

Relieved of those reproachful eyes, the man's evil passions seemed to return.

'It's like my cursed ill-luck!' he said, seizing the candle. 'Where can the old fool have stowed his money?'

And he proceeded once more to search the house.

After a time he noticed a door which he had not previously opened. There was no key; but a blow from his powerful arm, and it flew open. At first the room appeared empty; but a second glance showed in one corner an iron bound box. To break open the box was the work of a moment, and the next a heap of shining gold lay before him.

With a cry of exultation, he commenced to transfer it to his pockets. When he had secured it all, he seized his candle, and descended into the room below. There lay the bodies of his father and Daniel Keen. He was just looking at the peddler's body, fancying that the chest still showed signs of life, when he was alarmed by a loud knocking at the door. He hastily set down the candle, and rushed up stairs. In a minute or two after, there was a cry, a noise as of the falling of some heavy body, and a deep groan. Then all was still.

CHAPTER III.

When the three men returned to Old Keen's house, they brought with them a lantern and a crowbar. The door was forced, and a sorrowful sight met their view. The room bore evidence of a struggle having taken place, and on the ground before them lay the bodies of the two old men, weltering in their own blood.

On examining the body of the peddler, it was evident that life was not extinct; and one of the men set off to the village to give the alarm, and procure medical aid.

In the meantime the other two proceeded to search the house. As they ascended the stairs, they were alarmed by a sound; but, from whence it proceeded, they could not exactly tell; but it seemed as though it came from an upper room.—

It was a low, hollow sound, as of some one in pain. They stopped to listen; but all was silent. They advanced slowly and cautiously up the stairs, for now they felt certain that the murderer was in the house; and, though they were not positively cowards, they feared he might spring upon them unawares, and at any moment. On they went, now startled by the loud creaking of the stairs, and now alarmed by the echo of their own exclamations of terror.

Then came a low wailing, as if the wind was moaning in melancholy cadence in the trees outside, and they stopped again. Was it the wind, or was it a human cry?

With many stoppings, and great excitement they searched every room in the house. On their return, they looked in at the rooms which had been shut up. At one moment they thought they saw a form moving in the dim shade at one end of the room. Just at that moment a gust of wind extinguished the candle, which one of them had incautiously taken out of the lantern, and they were left in darkness.

Without waiting for anything more, the two men made their way down-stairs, and procured another light.

At this moment they were joined by the doctor and his assistant, together with the village constable, and Banks: and now, emboldened by numbers, they searched the house thoroughly; but no trace of the murderer could be discovered.

The doctor pronounced Danel Keen to be dead; but there was life still in the peddler, and he hoped for the best.

The excitement the next morning was great in Aspendale, and in the course of the day it reached as far as West Comford, and strange rumors were circulated as to the murderer.

Circumstances also transpired, which, in the minds of most people, seemed to fix the murder upon the peddler. The instrument with which the murder was perpetrated proved to be the very knife which the countryman, Brown, had refused to buy on account of the flaw in the blade, and which was known to have been in his possession a few hours before the murder was discovered.

If any one objected, and pointed out that the peddler himself was desperately wounded, that was said to be no obstacle to his guilt, as the old man might have turned upon him.

Another thing which favored this idea was, that, though the peddler had partially recovered, he refused to give any account of the transaction.

An inquest was holden, but nothing transpired to throw any further light on the mystery, except that Blackman affirmed he looked through the keyhole, and fancied he saw the face of a man, and, if it was a man, he was a stranger, and had a dark beard.

This recalled to Mr. Finch's mind the stranger he had seen in the tap-room of the Red Lion, and a search was immediately instituted, but no trace of such a person could be found, nor had any one seen him after he left the public-house.

The search for the stranger having passed, public suspicion next fell upon Blackman, and he was arrested.

On hearing this, Peter Coombs was greatly excited, and the report was circulated that the peddler had confessed.

In the course of the following day, unfavorable symptoms set in, and before midnight the peddler had breathed his last. The last word that he spoke was in attestatation of Blackman's innocence, and his last act to sign a deposition to that effect; but nothing could induce him to say any thing more.

This was enough; and, in the estimation of every one, Peter Combs died a murderer.

And did the real murderer escape?—Let us see.

A few months after, the house in which the foul deed had been perpetrated was pulled down. It was then discovered that there was a black staircase communicating with an upper room. The stairs from decay, had fallen, and at the bottom was discovered the remains of a man, in an advanced state of decomposition. On examining the clothes, the whole of the murdered man's money was found upon him, besides papers proving his identity.

It was the peddler's dissipated and long lost son.

The opinion seems to prevail that Jeff. Davis will be tried in Washington on the charge of treason.

Telegraphic communications is now open between the North an Mobile and will be to New Orleans in a few days.

The conspiracy trials are not likely to be closed for some days. It is said the defense have 250 witnesses to examine, which alone will occupy much time, besides the arguments of counsel.

The grand review of the armies commences in Washington to day. It is said the line will be 21 miles in extinct, and will occupy 8 hours in passing the White House, where the President, Gen. Grant and other officials and distinguished men will be stationed.

There is said to be extreme destitution among the people of Georgia—so great, indeed, they are unable to provide themselves with the means of ordinary business, or even to supply themselves with food. This probably applies chiefly to those sections visited by the armies.

The letter of C. C. Clay, of Ala., one of those for whose apprehension a reward of $25,000 was offered, voluntarily surrendered himself to Gen. Wilson at Macon, for trial on the charge of complicity with the assassination of President Lincoln. He says de does not question that he willl receive "a full, fare and impartial trial." That course is better thant a resort to petticoats, to say the least.

The President has issued his proclamation declaring that all ports of the U S except those in Texas, to be open for foreign comerce from and after the 1st of July; and also removing all restrictions upon trade in the States eas of the Mississippi, articles contraband of war excepted. This is an important step towards the restoration of peaceful trade between this country and foreign nations and between the North and South.

Wednesday, May 24.

By advice from Florida, we learn that Tallahassee and St. Marks surrendered to the U. S. forces on the 9th inst. Also, the steamer Spray, to an officer of the U. S. ship.

A large fire occurred in the pork packing house of Kingan & Co., Indianapolis, the largest establishment of the kind in the western country; loss $300,000; insured for $200,000.

The present place of confinement of Jeff. Davis is in the casemates of Fortress Monroe, about as safe a place as can be found. It is thought his wife and family will be sent South again, as also the wife of C. C. Clay.

Great indignations was caused among the American residents at Honolulu by the act of some midshipmen of a British ship-of-war, in the American legislation amid the rejoicing over the fall of Richmond. The captain compelled the middies to return the flag, and make a public apology.

Advices from Mobile state that the women are the only genuine rebels there at present, showing it by their treatment of the rebel paroled prisoners—feeding and clothing them, and furnishing them with money.

Thursday, May 25.

Fortress Monroe dispatches of yesterday give an account of the imprisonment of Jeff. Davis at Fortres Monroe. He is confined in an apartment especially prepared for him, and strongly guarded.—The time appointed for his trial has not yet been announced

From Washington we learn that Mr. Seward has resumed his duties at the head of the State Department. It is officially announced that the rebels engaged in the atrocious starving of Union prisoners of war, are not to receive the benefits of the amnesty proclamation.

Attempts have been made by prominent individuals to reconcile the Sherman Halleck difficulties.

News from Hayti is to the effect that a revolution has occurred there. The rebels, under Col. Soulare, took possession of the island of Port Hayitien without opposition on the part of the Government troops. An attempt was made to assassinate one of President Geffard's ministers, but without success.

Gold closed at 133 5-8.

Great grief and excitement was caused in Augusta by the announcement that Jeff. Davis was captured. A wagon containing $243,000 in specie belonging to the rebel Government was found in a by way and turned over to Gen. Moirennx.

The Blessings of Peace.

The American people are ready to appreciate the blessings of peace after four years of bloody war. We shall undoubtedly have very prosperous times after the flag is vindicated vindicated throughout the country, and if we are virtuous we shall be happy. Prices will come down and we can surround ourselves with the comforts and even the luxuries of life.—Every man can keep a fast horse and a handsome establishment. Perhaps every pint pot in the country will hold a quart. Milkmen wil no longer water the lacteal fluid they dispense; lawyers will speak the truth when it is anywise difficult to avoid it; doctors will take their own medicine, in small doses, when they are sick; and provisions dealers will discontinue perjury about the losses they attain by selling beaf-steak at 20 cents a pound. Everything will pe as smooth as the working of an oil pump. People will digest their food and generate cheerfulness.—They will seek ration amusements and wisdom. But much is to be done to bring about this happy state of things.—There are some villians to catch yet and a number of fragments of rebellion to pick up. To convey the welcome intelligence and prepare the people for the millennium which is to come, the HERALD will be continued to all those who fork over two dollars a year.

Jeff Davis on Hanging.

An officer of the U. S. army, whose authority in such a case we cannot question gives leave to publish the following account of what he heard Jeff. Davis say, before the breaking out of the war. We use his words:

I heard Mr. Davis utter the following words in a Southern town where he delivered an address in November, 1860.—I did not hear the whole speach, only the words quoted, as I passed by the crowd of listeners:

"What! coerce a sovereign state! attempt to deprive us of our most inestimable rights!

Let Mr. Lincoln try it, or Mr. Douglas either, and we will hang them higher than Haman, and the only difference I should make would be that (humorously) as Mr. Lincoln is considerably taller than Mr. Douglas, we should have to build his gibbet (standing on his toes and reaching up his hand) a little higher the than that for Douglas."

Must be Paid.

We hear that Andy Johnston, who was born boor, and raised poor, and is yet of the people in his property and edpecations, has given the order for Retrenchment and Economy, and declared that the Nation must go to work to pay its debts Good!

The National Debt has been ciphered up, and the sum total is a big one,—but the American People is a big one too.—On the first of July next our Debt will foot up up in round numbers Three Thousand Millions We can pay it without strain, without oppression But we have got to practice economy, public and private. We have particularly to apply economy economy and watchfulness to the Legislation of Congress, anc to the administration of the Departments and Cureaus in Washington. The expenses of the Government must be shoved back rapidly and in good faith towards the old peace footing of 1860. We may never again get quite to that,—but let us get as near to it as we can.

The ablest statists in the service of the Treasury Department have been directed to measure the wealth and resnuces of the nation, and to calculate when it will be possible for us to pay, and probable that we will pay, that immense debt of Three Thousand Millions. They have reported that "bottom dollar" of it can be paid in twenty years from 1870!!

Good again! Let the watchword of all Politics be—PAY OFF THE NATIONAL DEBT.

JOHNSTON'S ISLAND.—We are informed that Johnston's Island has been selected as the prison on where all the rebel officers who refuse to be amnested on the terms prescribed by President Johnston's new proclamation, will be kept, until a final disposition can be made of them.—We haee no peculiar relish for them, but abide the powers that be. It ic certainly one of the best situated prisons in the country, being easy of access, hard to escape from, and in a very healthy climate.—Sandusky Register.

☞ A gentleman in this city, received a letter from a friend in Philadelphia yesterday, who informed him that the ladies of the Quaker city accounted for the reason of Jeff. Davis wearing petticoats was: "Because he expected hourly to be confined"—in prison.—Jackson Citizen.

Proclamation

By the President of the United States of America.

Whereas, By my direction, the Acting Secretary of State, in a notice to the public, on the 17th of April, requested the various religious denominations to assemble on the 19th of April, on the occasion of the obsequies of Abraham Lincoln, late President of the U. S., and to observe the same with appropriate ceremonies, and whereas, our country has become one great house of mourning, where the head of the family has been taken away, and believing that a special period should be assigned for again humbling ourselves before Almighty God, in order that the bereavment may be sanctified to the nation's good, now, therefore in order to mitigate the grief on earth which can only be assuaged by communion with the Father in Heaven, and in compliance with the wishes of Senators and Representatives in Congress, communicated to me by a resolution adopted at the National capital, I, Andrew Johnson, President of the United States. do hereby appoint Thursday, June 1st, next, to be observed wherever in the U. S. the flag of the country may be respected, as a day of humiliation and mourning, and recommend my fellows citizens then to assembles in their respective places of worship, that they unite in solemn service to Almighty God, in memory of the good man who has been removed, so that all shall be occupied at the same time in contemplation of his virtues, and sorrow for his sudden and violent end.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at Washington, April 24th, 1865, and of the Independence of the United States of America the 89th.

Acting Secretary of State.

Circular.

I would say to the farmers of northern Lenawee, (and all whom it may benefit,) that I have purchased the Flouring, Grist and Saw Mills formerly owned and run by J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., and that I have thoroughly repaired and improved my Custom Bolts, put on new cloth of the very best quality, and also improved the machinery for cleaning custom wheat, to separate therefrom all smut and foul grains, which is very essential to the making of good flour; and that I shall give special attention to grinding for customers, and will warrant forty (40) pounds of good flour from a bushel of good wheat, and from inferior wheat as good flour as can be made.

I believe my facilities for doing Custom grinding, as regards both quality of flour and yield per bushel, cannot be equaled by any mill in this county.

Good flour is certainly one of the requisites to keep piece and quiet in the family, and the good wife who places light, delicious bread—the staff of life—upon her table, bestows a luxury, and aids in smoothing the rugged path of life.

Wheat taken in store, of farmers and others, for their bread, and gaound or exchanged for good flour when wished.

Wheat floured and packed on reasonable terms.

Wheat, Corn and Feed ground at all times, and corn shelled and ground.

Sawing done for Customers.

Bills of hard-wood lumber sawed to order, and delivered if wished.

Lumber for sale.

One hundred thousand feet of Saw Logs wanted—all kinds of good timber.

Also a few thousand bushels of good White and Red Wheat wanted,—for which I will pay the highest market price.

In conclusion I would say—wishing to gain a livelihood by this business—I am determined that justice shall be done all who may favor me with their patronage.

Most respectfully,
WOOLSTON COMFORT.

The Aid Society of Tecumseh has sent to Harper Hospital, of Detroit, 42 white and 19 calico pillow cases, and 3 hospital shirts. The Com. Stewart writes thus:

DETROIT, May 20, 1865.

It gives me pleasure, in behalf of my comrades, to thank the ladies for their kindness in sending us this donation.—They will be very useful as we have not a change on account of the Hospital being so full as there are 660 men here now.

Very Respectfully,
R. R. KNAPP,
Com. Stewart.

MR. EDITOR:—I was much pleased with the note from "A Citizen" in your last issue, and wish to call attention to it. We ought to do what we can to honor the memory of those noble men who have died for their country. It is their due, and we cannot innocently do less then e ect a monument to commemiorate their patriotism and devotion to their country. Will not the citizens of this town attend to it promptly? Who will make a move,—call the people together, and give the enterprise from which shall ensure success? Honor to the braves who have fought for the country, whether they are living or dead. D.C.W.

Wastell & Adam have received new goods again. We are not surprised for the throng of customers continually carrying goods from their store would soon leave them minus of goods if they did not replenish their stock every week. During the last week they have received a large assortment of F. Hull & Co's celebrated new style Watch Spring Steel Skirts. The improvements on tham are far beyond the celebrated Duplex Eliptic Skirt. Don't fail to get one of their skirts at your earliest opportunity for they are in great demand. Examine their stock. You will find W. & A always ready to wait on customers in the most agreeable manner. They study to please.

One of the side shows attending Dan Rice's Menagerie had a characteristic mouth-piece who got off some very funny sayings. Thus: 'This is a gentleman's show, a lady's show, a baby's show, and everybody's show; pass right in the inside for twenty-five cents, one quarter of a dollar, or two York shillings; this was never known to make a man or break a man or set a man up in business, the great the small, the short the tall, the rich the poor, the old the young, the little the big, the fat the lean, the thick the thin, the slim the slender, the tough the tender—they all come, and see this wonderful show.'

The association for the purpose of purchasing grounds and laying out a trotting park where the State Fair is to be held next fall, at Adrian, have elected their officers. They are as follows:—President, George L. Bidwel; Vice President, J. J. Anderson; Secretary, R. A. Bury; Treasurer, W. A. Walby; Directors, W. H Stone, Dr. Andrews, H. A. Angell, W. S. Cary, Henry Hart.—The grounds purchased comprise about 30 acres lying on the west side of the river, and north-west of A. J. Dean's residence. Work has commenced and the Park will be pushed rapidly forward to an early completion. The buildings for the accommodation of the State Fair will be erected by the Agricultural Society.

See the new advertisment in another column of C. B. Ackliy's store. It has been the opinion of many of our citizens that this establishment was only a temporary affair here for the purpose of selling off some old stock; but such is not the case. He has leased the building for a number of years and is now receiving new goods by every train. He is selling goods remakably low. Call at the new store in Usborne's Block and see for yourselves.

All Michigan contributors to the Northwestern Fair are requested to mark their contributions, whether sent to Detroit or Chicago, "North-Western Fair, Michigan Department." This will insure their being properly received and credited.

At Wastell & Adams you can procure the best assortment of French Corsetts, also Parasols and Fans. Remembar the place, one door west of Fisher & Baker's Drug store.

SOME OF THE RESULTS OF INDIGESTION.—A feeling of over-fulness after eating; troubled with a sinking sensation at the pit of the stomack between meals; depressed spirits; difficulty in calculating, or arranging ideas; flatulence in the stomach and bowels; rising in the morning unrefreshed; after performing a small amount of labor feeling languid, faint and dizzy; swimming of the head and sudden dimness of sight after having been intently reading or writing. To overcome all of the above do not use a powerful cathartic that will prostrate you, nor a fiery stimulent that will give you relief for the moment and be followed by a colapse; nor a violent astringent that first irritates, and in the end, partially paralyzes the digestive organs; but use the mild cordial, "Red Jacket Bitters," which will gently assist instead of attacking the functions of nature.

R. C. Moore is yet selling goods at the lowest prices, at which they have been offered this year. Goods in New York have advanced, if you want goods, buy them now! If you neglect buying until prices are advanced, dont blame any one but yourself. Call at Moore's and satisfy yourself that goods are, under all circumstances, as cheap as can be expected. Look out for new goods at Moore's very soon. TERMS—Cash on delivery.

The Commissioners of Highways for the township of Tecumseh, will meet at the public bridge over the River Raisin, in said township, near the village of Newburg on the 1st day of June next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, for the purpose of letting a contract to the lowest bidder for the construction of a new bridge over the river at that site. Plan and specification wi l be on exhibition.—Dated, this 18th day of May, A. D. 1865.

MORE AND MORE DESIRABLE

The rebell on is suppressed, and the Government has already adopted measures to reduce expenditures as rapidly as possible to a peace footing, thus withdrawg from market as borrower and purchaser.

This is

The Only Loan in Market,

now offered by the Government, and constitutes the Great Popular Loan of the People.

The Seven-Thirty Notes are convertable on their maturity, at the option of the holder, into

U. S. 5-20 Six per cent. GOLD-BEARING BONDS,

Which are always worth a premium.

Free from Taxation.

The 7.20 Notes cannot be taxed by Towns, Cities, Counties or States, and the interest is not taxed unless on a surplus of the owner's income exceeding six hundred dollars a year. This fact increases their value from ot one three per cent. per annum, according to the rate levied on property.

Subscribe Quickly.

Less than $200,000,000 of the Loan authorized by the last Congress and now on the market. This amount at the rate at which it is being absorbed, will all be subscribed for within two months, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans. It now seems probable that no considerable amount beyond the present series will be offered to the public

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscription at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER
and
BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled
for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

TO THE RETAIL TRADE

The present high prices have induced all kinds of experiments, and every kind of substance has been tried as a substitute for Coffee. The vilest trash, under Showy and Taking names, has been thrust upon the public. Bogus and Spurious Coffees, whose chief merit is found in their Labels and wrappers, have proved alike injurious to the consumer, as also to the retailer. These Villainous Compounds have about had their day, and the public taste is fast returning to its first love, and nothing less than a

Good, Fragrant and Wholesome Cup of Coffee can prove Satisfactory.

There is a great and increasing demand for Good Coffee, and our design is to supply this demand.

Prospectus of the Jackson Daily Citizen.

On or about the 27th of March, the proprietors of the Jackson Weekly CITIZEN propose to issue a FIRST CLASS DAILY PAPER, to fill a pressing want, which has long been felt in Central Michigan, now one of the most populous and wealthy sections of the State.

We propose to issue a Journal, respectable in size, containing the full Telegraphic Reports of the Associated Press, the latest Markets, and all the General News of the day. Particular attention will be paid to Local and State News, and everything that goes to make a Daily Paper interesting to all. In fact, we propose to make a LIVE DAILY PAPER, fully up to the times, dealing fairly and squarely with all the issues of the day, and earnestly advocating those views and principles, which we believe will be for the best interests of our common country. While it will be the organ of no man or clique, it will support the administration in a vigorous prosecution of the war until the old flag again floats over every every foot of the National domain, and until the last vestige of armed rebellion is swept from the land.

With a Journal of this character, looking closely after, and advancing the INTERESTS of this LOCALITY, not violently partizan, but firm, independent and manly in tone, we appeal to all classes of our citizens for a prompt, hearty and generous support.

We shall issue a MORNING PAPER, that will reach, at least, six of our interior counties in advance of any other Daily.—With a new POWER PRESS, operated by STEAM, and new type, we expect to make a handsome sheet, fresh and attractive in appearance, and a NEWSPAPER worthy the confidence and patronage of all.

Jumping for a Wife.

A STORY OF THE OLD DOMINION

In one of the lovliest villages of Old Virginia, there lived, in the year 175—, an odd, old man, whose was declared to be the lovliest maiden in all the country round. The vetran in his youth had been athletic and muscular above all his fellows; and his breast, where he always wore them, could show the adornment of three medals received for his victorious in gymnastic feats when a young man.—his daughter was now eighteen, and had been sought in marriage by many suitors. One brought wealth; another a fine person; another industry; another military talents; another this and another that.—But they were refused by the old man, who became, at last, a by-word for his obstinacy among the young men of the village and neighborhood. At length the nineteenth birthday of the fair Annette, his charming daughter, who was as amiable and modest and modest as beautiful, arrived. The morning of that day the father invited all the youths of the country to a hay-making frolic. Seventeen handsome and industrious young men assembled. They came not only to make hay, but also to make love to fair Annette. In thre hours they filled the farmer's barns with the newly dried grass. Annette, by her fathers command, had brought the malt liquor of her own brewing, which she presented to each enamored swain with her own fair hands.

'Now, my boys,' said the old keeper of the jewel they all coveted, as leaning on their pitchforks they assembled round his door in the cool of the evening—'Now my lads, you have nearly all of you made proposals for my Annette. Now, you see I don't care anything about money, talents, nor book-learning. I can do as well by my gall as any man in the country. But I want her to marry a man of my own grit. Now you know or ought to know, when I was a youngster, I could beat anything in all Virginia in the way of leaping. I got my old woman by beating the smartest man on the Eastern Shore, and I vowed that no man shall marry my daughter without jumping for it. Understand me, boys. There's the green, and here's Annette,' he added taking his daughter, who stood timidly behind him, by the hand. 'Now the one that jumps the furthest on the "dead level" shall marry Annette this very night.

This unique addres was received by the men with applause; and many a youth as he bounded forward to the arena of trial, cost a glance of anticipated victory back upon the lovely object of village chivalry. The maidens left their looms and quilting-frames, the children their noisy sports, the slaves their labors, and the old men their arn-chairs and long pipes, to witness and triumph in the success of the victor. All prophesied and many wished it to be young Carroll. He was the handsomest and the best youth in the country, and mutual atachment existed between him and the fair Annette. Carroll had won the reputation of being the best leaper, and in a country where such athletic achievements were the sine qua non of man's cleverness, this this was no ordinery honor. In a contest like the present, he, therefore, had every advantage over his fellow athletae.

The arena allotted for this hymeneal contes, was a level space in front of the village denominated 'the green.' The verdure was quite worn off at this place, by previous exercises of a similar kink, and a hard surface of sand, more benefiting for the purpose of which it was to be usee, supplied its place.

The father of the lovely, blushing, and withal happy prise (for she knew who would win,) with three other patriarchal villagers, were the judges appointad to decide udon the claims of the several competitors. The last time Carroll tried his skill in this exercise, he 'cleared,' to use the leaper's phraseology, twenty-one feet and one inch.

The signal was given, and by lot the young men stepped into the arena.

'Edward Grayson, seventeen feet,' cried one of the judges. The youth had done his utmost. He was a pale, intellectual student. But what had intellect to do with this arena? Without a look at the maiden, he left the ground.

'Dick Moulden, nineteen feet.' Dick with a laugh, turned away and replaced his coat.

'Harry Preston, nineteen feet, three inches.' 'Well done, Harry Preston,' shouted the spectators; 'you have tried for the acres and homesteads.'

Harry also laughed, and said he only jumped for the fun of the thing. Harry was a rattle-brained fellow, but never thought of matrimony. He loved to walk and talk and romp with Annette, but sober marriage never came into his head. He only 'jumped for the fun of the thing.'

'Charley Simms, fifteen feet and a half!' 'Hurrah for Charley! Charley'll win!' cried the crowd good-humoredly. Charley Simms was the cleverest fellow in the world. His mother had advised him to stay at home and told him if he ever won a wife, she would in love with his good temper, rather than his legs. Charley, however, made a trial of the latter's capabilities, and lost. Many refused to enter the list altogether. Others made the trial; and only one had as yet cleared twenty feet.

'Now,' said the villagers, let's se Harry Carroll. He ought to to beat this,' and every one appeared, as they called to mind the mutual love of the competitor and the sweet Annette, as if they heartily wished his success.

Harry strpped to his post with a firm tread.. His eye glanced with confidence among the villagers, and rested before, he bounded forward, upon the face of Annette, as if to catch there, that spirit and assurance which the occasion called for. Returning the encouraging glance with which she met his own, with a proud smile upon his lip, he bounded forward.

'Twenty-one and a half!' shouted the multitude, repeating the announcement of the judges; 'twenty-one feet and a half! Harry Carroll forever—Annette and Harry.' Over the heads of the spectators waved hands, caps, and handkerchiefs and the eyes of the delighted Annette sparkled with joy.

When Henry Carroll moved to his station to strive for the prise, a tall, gentlemanly looking, locking young man, in military undress, frock coat, who had ridden up to the inn, dismounted and joined the spectators unperceived, while the contest was going on, stepped suddenly forward, with a knowing eye, and measured deliberately, the space accomplished by the last leaper. He was a stranger in the village. His handsome face and easy address attracted the village maidens, and his manly and sinewy frame, in which symmetary and strength were hapily united, called forth the admiration of the young men.

'Mayhap, sir stranger, you think you can beat that, said one of the bystanders, remarking the manner in which the eyes of the stranger scanned the arena. 'If you leap beyond Henry Carroll, you'll beat the best man in the colonies.' The truth of this observation was assented to by a general murmur.

'Is it for mere amusement you are pursuing this pastime?' inquired the youthful stranger; 'or is it for a prize to the winner?'

'Annette, lovliest and wealthiest of our village maidens, is to be the reward of the victor,' cried one of the judges.

'Is the list open to all?'

'All, young sir,' replied the father of Annette with interest, his youthful ardor rising, as he surveyed the proportions of the straight-limbed young stranger. 'She is the bride of him who outleaps Henry Carroll. If you will try you are free to do so. But let me tell you, Henry Carroll has no rival in Virginia. Here is my daughter, sir; look at her and then make your trial.'

The young officer looked upon the trmbling maiden about to be offered on the alter of her father's unconquerable monomania, with an admiring eye. The poor girl looked at Harry, who stood near with troubled brow and anxious eye, and then cast upoh the new competitor an imploring look.

Placing his coat in the hands of one of the judges, he drew a sash he wore beneath it, tighter around his waist; and taking the appointed stand, made, apparantly without effort, the bounu that was to decide the happiness or misery of Henry and Annette.

'Twenty-two feet and one inch!' shouted the judge. The announcement was repeated with surprise by the spectators who crowded around the victor, filling the air with loud murmurs from those who were interested in the happines of the lovers.

The old man approached, and grasping his hand exultingly, called him his son, and said he felt prouder of him than if he were a prince. Physical activity and strength were the old leaper's true parents of nobility.

Resuming his coat, the victor sought with his eyes the fair prize he had, although nameless and unknown, so fairly won. She leaned on her father pale and distressed.

Her lover stod aloft gloomy and mortified, admitting the supriority of the stranger in an exercise in which he prided himself as unrivalled, while he hated him for his succes.

'Annette, my pretty prize,' said the victor, taking her passive hand, 'I have won you fairly.' Annette's cheek became paler than marble. She trembled like an aspen leaf, clung closer to her father, while the drooping eyes sought the form of her lover. His brow grew dark at the stranger's langnage.

'I have won you, my pretty flower, to make you a bride—tremble no so violently—I mean not for myself, however proud I might be, he added, with gallantry, 'to wear so fair a gem next to my heart.—Perhaps,' and he cast his eye around inquiringly, while the current of life leaped joyfully to her brow and a murmur of surprise ran through the crowd—'perhaps there is some favored youth among the competitors, who has a higher claim to this jewel. Young sir,' he continued, turning to the surprised Henry, 'methinks you were victor in the list before me. I strove not for the maiden, though one could not well strive for a fairer, but from love for the manly sport in which I saw you engaged. You are the victor, and as such, with the permission of this worthy assembly, receive from my hand the prize you have so well and honorably won.'

The youth sprang forward and grasped his hand with gratitude, and the next moment Annette was weeping for pure joy upon his shoulders. The welkin rung with the acclamations of the delighted villagers, and amid the temporary excitement produced by this act, the stranger withdrew from the crowd, mounted his horse, and spurred at a brisk trot through the village.

That night Henry and Annette were married, and the health of the mysterious stranger was drunk in overflowing bumpers of rustic beverage.

One evening, having just returned home after a hard campaign, he was sitting with his family on the gallery of his handsome country house, when an advanced courier rode up and announced the approach of General Washington and his suit, informing him that he should crave his hospitality for the night. The necessary directions were given in reference to the household preparations; and Mr. Carroll, ordering his horse, rode forward to meet and escort to his house the distinguished guest, whom he had never seen although serving in the same army.

That evening at the table, Annette, now become the dignified, matronly and still handsome Mrs. Carroll, could not keep her eyes from the face of her illustrious visitor. Her absence of mind and embarrassment at length became evident to her husband, who inquired affectionately if she were ill.

'I suspect, colonel,' said the general, 'that Mrs. Carroll recognizes in me an old acquintance.'

The colonel started, and a faint memory of the past seemed to be revived as he gazed, while the lady rose impulsively from her chair, bending eagerly forward over the tea-urn, with clasped hands, and an eye of intense interest fiixed upon him, stood for a moment with her lips parted as if she would speak.

'Pardon me, my dear madam—pardon me, colonel, I must put an end to this scene. I have become, by dint of campfire and usage, too unwieldly to leap again twenty-two feet one inch, even for so fair a bride, as one I wot of.'

The recognition, with the surprise, delight and happiness that followed, is left to the imagination of the reader.

General Washington was, indeed, the handsome young 'leaper,' whose mysterious appearance and disappearance in the native village of the lover, is still extraordinary, and whose claim to a substantial body of bona fide flesh and blood, was stoutly contested by the village story-tellers, until the happy announcement which took place at the hospitable mansion of Col. Carroll.

'Well, doctor,' said a chap suffering with the toothache, 'how much do you ax for the job? By Jove! but you did it quick, though!'

'My terms,' replied the dentist, 'are half-a-crown!'

'Half-a-crown for one minute's work? Half-a-crown, by Jove! Why a doctor at our place drawed a tooth for me two years ago, and it took him two hours.—He dragged me all around the room, and lost his grip half a dozen times. I never seed such hard work—and he charged me only a shilling. Half-a-crown for a minute's work. Oh, git out—you must be jokin!'

Communication.

RICHMOND, May 30th, 1865.

MR. EDITOR:—After witnessing the review in Washington and looking around a day or two, I started for Richmond taking a boat at Baltimore and coming via. City Point and Fortress Monroe.—The trip down the Chesapeake bay is very pleasant although made mostly in the night, the breeze from the salt water is very refreshing after having ridden in dusty cars for a great distance.

We arrived at Fortress Monroe at 7 A. M., and had a fine outside view of the fort, but no one is admitted inside, since Mrs. Jeff. has taken rooms there. The harbor is very large and is now filled with vessels of all kinds. We here change boats for Richmond, arrive there at 6 P. M. There is now a grand rush for this place and the boats are crowded almost to suffocation, and if a man gets anything to eat before the third table he must act slightly swinish. I made no effort for a state-room as it required more strength and muscle than I possessed to fight my way up to the clerk's office and stand jammed in the crowd for hours and then perhaps be told they were all taken long before. We passed Neport News and saw the wrecks made by the Merrimack. Harrison's landing is a place of interest as being connected with the great "change of base." The Dutch gap canal does not appear in passing as a work of so much magnitude as I expected. The water is very high in the James River and runs through the canal with a good current.

Fort Darling and the Howlet house battery are plainly seen from the river and are both in very commanding positions. The holes where our men burrowed in the banks of the river, to avoid the shells from the rebel battery are visible from the river at the canal. We arrived at the Racketts at 6 o'clock, where all are required to register their names and residence. We found the Hotels all full and chances for getting a room were slim indeed, but a New Yorker after finding I was a Wolverine, kindly offered to let me occupy a bed with him, saying, he was not afraid to trust a Michigan man.

The Hotel where I stopped was used as the rebel Auditor's office and the back yard was full of all kinds of rebel documents, which had been thrown out after we took the city. We started early next morning, to see the places of interest and went to the celebrated Libby prison first, where we had free access and saw the different rooms and the tunnel where our men escaped. Castle Thunder stands near by and is filled with our own men who have been arrested for various crimes and are confined there awaiting their trial. We then went to Jeff. Davis mansion, which is now head quarters of Gen. Halleck and were admitted to a part of the house; we next called at the Governor's house and saw Gov. Pierpont, who is a fine looking man. The ground in and around Richmond is quite hilly and uneven and none of the streets are level.—From the top of the state-house a fine view is had of the whole city—the river and adjoining country and also the falls. There was a great furore for relics among all the Yankees. The curled hair and part of the frame of the President's chair was yet there, but public documents, and everything that could be carried away, fast disappearing, although there were guards all over the building who forbid taking anything away. About one third of the city is in ruins and in many places still smoking, although it was burned nearly two months ago. The burnt district includes nearly all the business part of the city. I had a good view of Gen. Lee in the street, who was dressed in a full millitary suit, and not only he, is allowed to dress thus, but all the Rebel officers and soldiers have the same privilege, a privilege I do not believe Ben. Butle would tolerate.

Sabbath morning we went to an African church, where there were about 1000 scholars and the exercises were conducted by some Boston Clergyman, and were very interesting. After Sabbath school closed, we left and went to another church which we much regretted afterward, as I learned in the evening, that Rev. J. D. Fulton preached at the colored church in the morning. Being anxious to hear a preacher and see a full congregation all of the African persuasion went in the evening where there were 1500 blacks and two whites (calling us whites)—I might say by us, I mean Rev. Mr. Evans of Blissfield and myself. This meeting of itself was nearly worth a trip to Richmond. The preacher was a splendid looking man (of the kind) and had a voice like a Lion and when he came to the closing prayer, as his voice gradually rose to a higher and a higher key the enthusiasm was such that it seemed as if the roof would rise up under the pressure. There was every kind of gesture and every kind of sound—groaning and shouting—weeping and laughing—stamping, waving of handkerchiefs, &c.

Some might think that in such a crowd there might be an odour offensive to white nostrils, but we sat by a large open window. The blacks here seem to appreciate their freedom and seem disposed to earn their living.

The whites do not seem to me to be subdued, they act sullen and as if they would be glad to again have a chance to set the laws of the Union at defiance. I was anxious to visit the battle fields of the seven days fight but could not get a team to go seven miles, for less than $30, so I concluded to go to the Petersburgh battle fields instead.—Perhaps I will write a few lines from there and other points, if I have leisure.

Notes of Third Series---7-30s now Ready.

The demand for the Second Series of the 7-30 Notes was so great that the Treasury Department was unable to print them with sufficient rapidity to fill the orders. It will be remembered that a hundred millions were subscribed and paid for a single week. The printing presses have finally surmounted the difficulty, and on Wednesday, June 7th, the deliveries of the third series commenced, and will be continued with the same promptness that marked the supply of the notes of the first and second series. It has been this interruption of delivery at the time of subscription which has given an appearance of a falling off in the popular taking of the loan,—the great body of small takers being unwilling to pay their money unless they receive their notes right in hand, to carry them home. It is expected that after this week the daily subscriptions to the Seven-Thirties will run up into millions, as they will undoubtedly be stimulated by the opening of the farmers' wool markets East and West. It is not at all likely that the Government will ever again offer so desirable a security as these notes, and about two hundred millions only remain to be taken.

With the close of the war the national expenses will be vastly reduced, and investors must look for a sharp reduction in the rate of interest as soon as the present loans become due and can be paid off.—There is no reason why the United States credit for MONEY should ever again fall below its credit for COURAGE. The same spirit that preserved the GEOGRAPHICAL integrity of the country will place its pecuniary integrity on a par with that of the most favored nations—and that will represent a rate of interest under rather than over four per cent. Let no time be lost then by any one who desires a good, safe, and paying investment, for this series will soon be exhausted and no other put into the market.

Fire at the State Prison.

Last evening, about half-past 11 o'clock one of the most destructive fires that has occurred for a long time broke out at the State Prison. It was first discovered about the centre of the wagon shop, in the west wing. The flames spread with the most astonishing rapidity, and in a very few minutes the entire building—some 300 feet long—was on fire. The alarm was promptly sounded, but by the time the engines had reached the scene of conflagration, the building was too far gone to save. All that could be done was to prevent it from extending to the other wings. The burned building was two stories high, and filled with highly inflamable materials, which accountes for the rapidity with which the fire extended over the building. It was oocupied by Austin, Tomlinson and Webster, who employed from 80 to 100 convicts in manufacturing wagons for emigrants on the overland routes to the West. The building was divided up into departments where the iron work, wood work and painting were done, and it contained a vast amount of material partly finished, and machinery.

The south end of the wing was occupied by Walter Fish, who employed quite a number of convicts in making boots and shoes. He also lost a large amount of material, tools, etc. It is impossible for us at present to estimate the damage with any degree of accuracy.

It is stated that Austin, Tomlinson & Webster lost $50,000 worth of material alone to say nothing of machinery and the damage sustained in the suspension of their business. Mr. Fisk's loss we could not ascertain. It will cost the State $30,000 to rebuild the ruined wing. The sheds in the rear containing large quantities of lumber were also consumed, and a portion of the North wing was badly damaged. There was a large amount of insurance on the property, the amount we could not learn. As we write, (at 1 a. m.,) the fire is still raging and the flame lights up our office windows.

Large crowds of people visited the fire, and the flames illummed the whole city. Some place the total loss at $125,000. The best of order prevailed during the progress of the fire, and not a single convict escaped. It was the most destructive fire that has visited this city for a long time. How it originated is not definitely known.—[CITIZEN, Friday.

Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions.

The notes of this third series are precisely similar in form and privileges to the 7.30, already sold, except that the Government reserves to itself the option of paying interest in gold coin at 6 per cent., instead of 7 3-10ths in currency. Subscribers will deduct the interest in currency up to July 15th, at the time when they subscribe.

The delivery of the notes of this third series of the Seven-thirties will commence on the 1st of June, and will be made promptly and continuously after that date.

The slight change made in the conditions of this Third Series affects only the matter of interest. The payment in gold, if made, will be equivalent to the currency interest of the higher rate.

The return to specie payments, in the event of which only will the option to pay interest in Gold be availed of, would so reduce and equalize prices, that, purchases made with six per cent. in gold would be fully equal to those made with seven and three-tenths per cent. in currency. This is

Only Loan in the Market.

Now offered by the Government, and its superior advantages make it the

GREAT POPULAR LOAN OF THE PEOPLE.

Less than $230,000,000 of the Loan authorized by the last Congress and now on the market. This amount at the rate at which it is being absorbed, will all be subscribed for within two months, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans. It now seems probable that no considerable amount beyond the present series will be offered to the public

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscription at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

JAY COOKE,

SUBSCRIPTION AGENT, Philadelphia.

May 1st, 1865.

Subscriptions will be received by the First National Bank of Ypsilanti, and the First National Bank of Detroit.

Union School Alumni.

The Tecumseh Union School closes on Friday, June 23d, at which time the Society of the Alumni are to have their annual Exercises and a Reunion. These meetings are very interesting, especially to all the old students of the Union School and the Alumni of the Tecumseh Union School is becoming one of the necessary institutions of the place.

☞ Now that hot weather is fairly in augurated people will cast about to find means of cooling off. We can safely say as far as our knowledge extends there is no place so pleasant and at the same time so popular, (judging from the crowd of ladies and gentlemen who constantly throng the place,) as Walter's Ice Cream Rooms, situated in Mechanics' Block, directly over Wishart's Crockery Store, to find a dish of Ice Cream, "as is Ice Cream" or a glass of Lemonade 'ice cold.' We have tried them "Go thou and do likewise."

☞ Marshal Hyde is preparing for the Fourth. He has lately graded a portion of Chicago Street and is building new plank walk crossings in all parts of the Village. It would be a decided improvement and one much needed if our citizens would follow the example of the Marshal and repair their own side-walks somewhat. Some of them are in shocking bad order, and moreover their influence is immoral, for it must be an extremely pious man, who, after cracking his toes upon the 'snake heads' a few times, can refrain from using a little very emphatic language.

☞ Mr. A. D. Hall returned from St. Paul, Minn., on Tuesday last, where he had been in search of his son, who, in company with two other youngsters, disappeared very mysteriously some two weeks ago. Nothing was heard of them until last week, when Mr. Hall received a telegram from St. Paul, stating that the boys were there and that the police had them in charge. Mr. Hall took the first train for the west and on Tuesday returned with the runaways. Young America appears to enter for more airs than usual this season.

Family Duties.

"If any man provide not for his own, especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel." One of the most sacred duties of every man is to provide for his family while he lives, and lay up a fund to shield them from poverty in case of his death. How can this best be done? We answer, By insuring one's life.—Let no man who loves his family neglect to insure his life. All who desire Life Insurance in first-class companies, can apply to S. C. Stacy, Agent.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.—A grand performance of this most popular of all works, being a dramatization of Mrs Harriett Beecher Stow's popular novel, is to be given on Saturday evening, June 17th. The company of Ladies and gentlemen, 40 in number, are from Detroit. They have a canvass capable of seating 1200 people, with all the scenery, and appurtenances for the exhibition of this truthful and life like representation of Southern life and scenery. Let every one attend. Don't forget the date. At Tecumseh Saturday June 17th.

Runaways.

Wednesday afternoon a span of horses belonging to James Simons, of Raisin, started from the Globe Mill, where he left them a moment to go into the office, and ran up Chicago street until they reached Alf. James' store where they struck a lumber wagon, upsetting it, and throwing down one of the horses, which stopped them. His little boy, Harvey, was in the buggy at the time, and was taken out when the team stopped entirely unhurt. The boy, who was about 5 years of age, was hanging to both reins, and shouting when at the top of his voice, and never thought of crying until after he had been taken from the buggy, when he began to realize the situation he had been in. The horses were but slightly injured and the buggy not badly broken. This should be a warning to people never to leave a child in a wagon, with a team before it, under any circumstances.

Within half an hour afterwards John Fisher's team started from the depot, with a lumber wagon, filled with stoves and crockery, ran around by the old Methodist Church and so down to Chicago st., where they turned east and started with increased speed down the street. As they passed Fisher & Baker's Drug Store Charley Smith ran out and seized the off horse by the bits, and succeeded in turning the team off the street and into the vacant corner west of the Post Office and stopped them. We admire Charley's grit, but we think we should have let the team run. Nothing whatever was broken except a portion of the crockery.—John that was worth an X. Take them all in all they were two very lucky runaways.

Connubial Bliss.

'The course of true love never runs smooth,' is a maxim as old as it is true. Lovers will quarrel, young married people will separate, and even old husbands and wives will keep the house in a continual up-roar with the clatter of family jars. Our good fellow villagers will doubtless remember, that about a year ago, one of our most enterprising millinery establishments was provided over by the beautiful, grace, and charming face of Miss Annie Deaves. But Miss Annie, like the vast majority of her sex, preferred the matrimonial to the millinery business, and after due consideration and fore-thought concluded to change her calling, to go and be a milliner no more, but remove to Clinton and become a Fisher. Six months of married life passed away, when a few days since Mrs. Fisher returned to this place, having been d[illegible] h[illegible] a[illegible] S[illegible] ys, a[illegible] f[illegible] d, [illegible] P[illegible] d, a[illegible] cy [illegible] which event appears to be complete. We shall await further developments with much interest.

Died,

At the residence of her father, Mahlon Sherd, Esq., near Tecumseh, ATTIE, wife of Wm. M. King, aged 24 years and six months. Though seemingly taken from her friends in the midst of a life of usefulness, she has left behind her, an undying influence written upon the hearts of all who knew her, but to love her. Her real worth was best known to those who came within the charmed circle of her intimacy, and they will feel that words can but inadequately express the magnitude of their loss. We are comforted in the assurance that she rests in peace, and that her "Beings broken wave, has multiplied the stars that shine across eternity."

COM.

☞ The attention of the Dry Goods buying community is respectfully called to the stock of K. C. Moore—especially to his line of Woolens, such as various styles for the fashionable short wool Sack, Gentlemens fancy Cassimeres,—a large lot of valuable Balck Broad Clothes and Shaker Flannels all bought at auction, and being sold as low as they can be bought in New York at wholesale, Ladies Dress Goods, in every style, the best Hoop Skirt in town,—Cottonades, Denims, Stripes, Prints;—in a word any thing you want. Dont fail to look at his AUCTION PURCHASES

☞ At this season of the year we hear many persons complaining of loss of appetite and general debility. We would advise every person complaining in this way to call at Curtis' Drug store and get a bottle of Dr. Borce Dodd's Wine Bitters. There are no medicines of the kind in market so valuable.

For Sale.—Two buckets, ropes, chains, wheel, curb, &c., at a bargain.—The articles are all nearly new and any one in need of them can save money by applying at this office.

☞ Wastell & Adam expect their stock of notions this week.

Literary.

Ticknor & Fields have just issued the initial volume of a new series of Illustrated volumes of poetry entitled Companion Poets for the People. The first volume is Household Poems by Longfellow, and contains many of the choicest selections from the writings of that distinguished and popular poet, The design is to place a high class of literature within the reach of all. Price 50 cents per volume. The next volume "Songs for all seasons," will contain selections from Tennyson.

☞ We notice that J. D. Robbins has just received a large stock of Pocket Books, Combs, Brushes, & Yankee Notions generally. His assortment of Wall Paper is still complete,—far the best in town.

☞ Good, Fresh Meats can be obtained at Mathews' Market. 'Tis a fact:—Give him a trial and see for yourselves.

☞ Will somebody bring us some wood on subscription.

Notice.

This may certify that my wife Anne E. Fisher has, without just cause or provocation, left my bed and board, and I hereby forbid all persons trusting or harboring her on my account as I will pay no debts of her contracting after this date. Clinton, June 12, 1865.

THE SCANDINAVIAN Remedies.

"No pen-up Utica contracts our powers,
For the whole boundless Continent is ours."

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER
and
BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for euring

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

RED JACKET Stomach Bitters

THESE Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of over twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by their use gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from torpid liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of those Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

THEM THREE TRAYS.

A MISSISSIPPI RIVER SKETCH.

One fine autumnal evening, some fifteen years ago, I found myself on board of one of the western steamboats, making as the captain said pretty 'good time.' I was on the lookout for sport, and was anxious to study human nature in all its phases. I did not care with whom I conversed, or mingled, so that I was not placed in exact contact with desperadoes or 'shovers.'

I had just commenced 'puffing' desperately, at one of 'those large regalias' that Jones, of the Dock street Exchange Hotel, had insisted on taking along as 'baggage' when I heard the sound of footsteps. I looked toward the quarter from whence the sound proceeded, and beheld a short, thick-set individual approaching me at what I thought a very peculiar gait. He addressed me in a familiar manner, and with an air of nonchalance, said—

'Stranger, I will take some of your fire.'

'Certainly,' said I, 'and a cigar, too, if you have no objections.'

'Wall,' replied he, 'I'm on the make, stranger, and if you kin shove one of them real Hawanas on me, why, tote her along.'

I drew out my cigar-case, and proffered him one of my best, which he accepted, ignited, and puffed at, with all the ease and elegance of a man of the world.

'Bin long on the river, stranger?' said he.

'No,' I answered, 'this is my first go—I am rather verdant yet in regard to western life.'

'Oh,' he replied, laughing, 'I rather guess you ain't the greenest man about these parts, if you ain't twenty-one. Fact is, I like you; come let's liquor.'

I accepted the offer of my companion, knowing that a refusal would naturally lead to an argument, and forced down some 'all-fired' hot compound, labelled 'brandy;' and it was a good thing that it was labelled, else I would have sworn it wes some kind of active poison—and even as it as it was, I was half inclined to ask the bar-keeper if he ever did as the northern druggists do—make mistakes.

When my friend paid the damage done to the liquor, by the throwing down of two dimes, we went to where I was first sitting. After a moment he bit off the end of his cigar, and, loking intently at me said—

'Stranger, two gentlemen should never travel without knowing one another's names; now what is yourn?'

I handed him my card, containing my name in full, to which he replied—

'Heard that name afore, likely; ain't very uncommon. However, as I've no kerds of this sort aboard, why, I'll just sing out—it's Duplicate Dodge.'

'Dodge!' I exclaimed.

'True as preachin' Ain't no relation to Dodge, the funny man, though.'

'Duplicate!' I answered. 'Singular name, that; but what I suppose you are a twin brother—that is what you mean by Duplicate?'

'No, that ain't what I mean. You see i'm a cripple,—that is, one of my legs is shorter than its feller—so, when I get in a fight, i plugs my man right from the shoulder, and at the same time, fetches him a kick with with my game leg. The blow and kick goes in company. The short leg contains my best foot, and when I'm fightin', I always put it forward.—The fellers—that is the sportin' men—calls that leg a duplicate, and they calls me Duplicate Dodge.'

I must confess that this quaint style of explanation eleased me heartily, and when I looked at his plesant face, and expressive eye, I felt I felt certain that Duplicate Dodge, although a gambler, was not the worst fellow a man might meet on the western waters.

'Do you know, stranger,' said he, 'that when I see a chap like you, I am reminded of a feller I once met in Louisville, at the races who was orful anxious to bet on the sweat. He was a medical student had lots of the needful, a rich father, and a thunderin' good credit; but the young man hadn't traveled, that is, he hadn't, in a legitimate and proper manner, been put through a course of sprouts. He'd heard something about the game, and when his eye lit upon my fixins, he imagined he had my pewter, sure. He was goin' in on the whole pile—nothin' could stop him, he was so orful smart.

I had just got a couple of three-shillin' bets, and was losing the one, and socking the other, justkeeping the game square while I was waitin for chances. Un walked the student, and, with an all powerful pert'vouce, sung out'—

'Say, Mister, I'll go you considerable on that speculation, if you'll stand m doublin' on you.'

'Jist walk up, young man,' said I, 'and win my money; you kin double and be d——d, if you'll stick to one number.'

'I'm down,' said he, and plump he socked a V. on the six.

'When I seed the way the cat was jumpin', I manoeuvered some, and just tilted some bones in my box that was trained to come up trays. I shook 'em purty good, so the feller couldn't complain of not getting their money's worth, and when I rolled 'em out, up came came the trays, and down went his V. among my dough. It hadn't been there long afore down went an X., which shared the same fate of the V. But he wasn't skeered a bit. He was aregular fighin' chicken, and kept the six well covered with his stuff, notwithstandin' the industrious efforts I was a makin' to keep the board clean.—After a while I began to diskiver that he had to dive down purty deep to chase up his change. Presently with a desperate lunge, he laid out a five, but afore I could turn out the nice, he caught my arm and remarked'—

'Say, old top, I swear, if you do have the luck to hatch out trays agin, I'll eat 'em.'

'Thinks, I young man, you will be sure of your dinner, if you ain't a-goin to to perjure yourself. And, you kin believe me or not, stranger, afore I was done a thinkin, the dice was was rolled, the trays were up, the feller grabbed 'em, and swallowed 'em afore I could stop him.

Now, that worried me some, for I didn't like to lose them dice, for they was a fortune to me in their way; so, says I Old horse, I will jist follow you up. You see I was sartain he couldn't hold 'em long, for they was loaded, consequently they would lay rather heavy on his stomach.

So, when he came to the hotel, he was pretty blue about the gills, and he made one or two remarks about feeling a little under the weather. Arter a bit I heard a gaggin' and a spittin,' and there stood my customer agin a fence, with his face as red as scarlet, and his eyes a startin' out of his head. Before assistance could be rendered, he was relieved of his dose. He looked upon the ground' juniped back and starin' me full in the face, bawled out'—

"By thunder! There is them darned three trays up again!

Golden Rules for Young Shopkeepers.

1.—Choose a good and commanding situation even at a higher rate or premium; for no money is so well laid out as for situation, providing good use be made of it.

2.—Take your shopdoor off the hinges at seven o'clock every morning, that no obstruction may be opposed to your customers.

3.—Clean and set your windows before seven o'clock, and do this with your own hands, that you may expose for sale the articles which are the most saleable, and which you most want to sell.

4.—Sweep before your house, and if required, open a footway from the opposite side of the street, that passengers may think of you while crossing, and that all your neighbors may be sensible of your diligence.

5.—Wear an apron, if such be the custom of your buisiness, and consider it as a badge of distinction, which will procure you respect and credit.

6.—Apply your first return to ready mony to pay debts before they are due, and give such tranactions suitable emphasis by claiming discount.

7.—Always be found at home, and in some way employed; and remember that your meddling neighbors have their eyes upon you, and are constantly gauging you by your appearances.

8.—Re weigh and re-measure all your stock rather than let it be supposed you have nothing to do.

9.—Keep up the exact quality, or flavor, of all articles which you find are approved of by your customers; and by this means you will enjoy their preference.

10.—Buy your goods for ready money as often as you have any to spare; and when you take credit, pay to a day and unasked.

11.—No advantage will ever arise to you from ostentatious display of expenditure.

12.—Beware of odds and ends of a stock, of remnants, of spoiled goods, and of waste; for it is in such things that your profits lie.

13.—In serving your customers be firm and obliging, and never loose your temper, for nothing is got by it.

14.—Always be seen at church or chapel on Sundays, never at a gaming table; and seldom at theatres or at places of amusement.

15.—Prefer a prudent and discreet to a rich and showy wife.

16.—Spend your evenings by your own fireside, and shun a public house, or a sottish club, as you would a bad debt.

17.—Subscribe with your neighbors to a book club, and improve your mind, that you may be qualified to use your future affluence with credit to yourself, and advantage to the public.

18.—Take account of stock every year, estimate your profits, and do not spend above one fourth.

19.—Avoid the common folly of expending your precious capital upon a costly architectural front; such things operate on the world like paint on a woman's cheek,—repelling beholders instead of attracting them.

20.—Every pound wasted by young tradesmen is two pounds lost at the end of three years and two hundred and fifty-six pounds at the end of twenty-four years.

21.—Remember that prudent purchasers avoid the shop of an extravagant and ostentatious tender; for they justly consider, that, if they deal with him, they must contribute to his follies.

22.—Let these be your rules till you have realized your stock, and till you can take discount for prompt payment on all purchases; and you may then indulge in any degree which your habits and sense of prudence suggest.

An Artist's Stratagem.

The following story is, we fear, too good to be true. The Spaniards have a similar one which probably really happened. A nobleman agreed to pay a good price for his portrait, but when finished, refused to take it, except at a much less sum than that agreed upon. The artist painted a prison window grating over the face, and exhibited it in his window, with the inscription,—'A nobleman imprisoned for debt.' The prisoner was very soon discharged by the payment of the debt.

One of the most distinguished artists in Paris, painted for a lady occupying a brillant position in society, her portrait, with the intention of placing it on exhibition soon afterwards. The lady, although for a long time celebrated for her beauty, had arrived at that age which is never admitted, (forty years), notwithstanding which she dissimulated, and was as amiable and as graceful as in her younger days. Paris is full of resources and ointments are to be obtained there to heal even the wounds of time.

Our heroine had her portrait taken in the most graceful attitude, with all possible advantages, splendidly dressed, and leaning on an arm-chair, smiling in the looking-glass, which should return her the most amiable compliments. The painter made a most striking lileness, but this was a great mistake—a flattering one was expected; and the lady consequently declared that she did not recognize herself in this painting, and the portrait was left in the painter's hands.

This was a double injury. Attacked in his pride of talent, and his finances, he had not philosophy enough to see a portrait worth three thousand francs left coolly on his hands and an idea of vengeance presented itself to his mind, which he put into execution at once.

A few days before the one fixed for the final reception of pictures for the Louvre, the lady was secretly informed that her portrait was ornamented with certain accessories rather compromising her.

She immediately went to the artist, and there was the portrait, the same striking likeness, certainly; but the painter had thinned the hair on the head of the picture, and the lady so faithfully painted held in her hand two large tresses of false hair. On the toilet were several flacons of small bottles, labelled thus:—'Whitewash. 'Vegetable Red,' 'Cosmetic to efface wrinkles,' 'Blonde Water to dye the hair in a minute.'

'It is abomnable,' said the lady, greatly excited.

'Of what do you complain?' coldly replied the artist. 'Have you not declared that it is not your portrait? You are right; it is a mere fancy sketch, and it is with that view that I shall present it to the public.'

'What, sir, you intend to exhibit this painting?'

'Certainly, madame; but as a tableau de genre, (cabinet picture) as the catalogue will indicate it, under the title of the "coquette at forty five years."'

At this last word the lady fainted, and on her recovery immediately paid for the portrait. The accessories were effaced in her presence, the portrait restored to its original state, and the three thousand francs transferred to the purse of the painter.

In Chancery.

A fair daugter of 'Maryland, my Maryland,' a handsome, volatile, spiteful young lady of sixteen summers, or such a matter, an irrepressible rebel, was guilty of the bad taste of chering for Jeff. Davis in a mixed assembly, at the baptist Seminery, Indianapolis. A young lady of this city equally as pretty as the Maryland rebel, but of a quiet, undemonstrative torn of mind, told her she had better not do that again, or it would cost her a thrashing.

The little rebel again cheered for J. D. louder, and more defiantly than ever, whereupon the city girl 'went for her,' as the phrase is, and a well contested trial of pugilistic skill began. 'Longtime in even scale the battle hung;' hair and hairpins, fragments of lace and torn ruffles, broken combs, ear-rings, brooches and artificial flowers, terribly mussed and mangled, strewed the scene of combat. At last loyal muscle triumphed over rebellious pluck and science. The loyal girl succeeded in getting her opponent's head in that uncomfortable posi ion in the nomenclature of the P. R. as 'chancery.'—With a heroism worthy of a better cause the rebel took fearful 'punishment' for a time, and then bleated for quarter. Union girl 'let her up' on conditions she would publicly recant and take the oath.

When the blood was washed away it was discovered that the blue eyes had suddenly become black, and that her 'face divine' was, to borrow the expressive language of Mrs. Wizzie, 'scored like pork.' The little rebel, whose name is Lucy, has been excused from further prosecution of her studies in this quarter, with full permission to return to her beloved Maryland by the earliest tram. The Union girl, a ward of Mr. Jos. Longsdale, named Gates, after an apoligy to the principals, is permitted to remain.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JUNE 22, 1865

Our National Anniversary.

Since that time honored old patriot the elder Adams declared "let each returning anniversary of our national Independence be solemnized by acts of devotion to Almighty God—let it be celebrated with guns, bells, bonfires and illuminations from this time, (1776,) forward forever" we, at least, have never known our citizens so unanimously determined to lay aside all ordinary business and cordially, hopefully and gratefully unite in commemorating our next Great and Glorious National Anniversary. Great in its origin and glorious in its preservation, for our nation literally is "born again."

We will celebrate the day with renewed hopes and with renewed life and spirit, because through blood and fire and untold suffering "our Constitution, our Union and our Laws" have been preserved. We will celebrate the day because in place of the dark clouds of rebellion which for years hung like an ominous pall over our political horizon, we now look forward to perpetual peace and prosperity, while the only stain on the national escutcheon will soon be removed by the peaceful action of the states.

We will celebrate the day because in the gratitude of our hearts we desire to honor our returned citizen soldiers who have fought for us on many a bloody battle field, or suffered for us on the march, in camp, in hospitals, or in cheerless pestilential prisons. We will celebrate the day because while feasting and rejoicing over our preserved nationality, we desire to cherish the memory of the glorious dead and contribute our offerings to perpetuate in monumental form, and in all time the names of our gallant citizen-soldiers, "who fought the good fight, who kept the faith" and sealed their devotion to us,—their relatives, their friends, their neighbors and to their country, with their lives. We will celebrate the day because the Almighty Ruler of Heaven and Earth has mercifully vouchsafed the blessings of peace and unity to our long distracted country.

4th of July 1865.

Preparatory arrangements for the celebration of the approaching anniversary of our national Independence.

The Town Committees assembled pursuant to adjournment at the office of P. Bills Esq. on Saturday, June 17th, and reported that the feeling in favor of a grand celebration of the 4th, was very unanimous, and that the proposition to connect with this object the erection of a monument in memory of our fallen soldiers was received with equal favor.

Whereupon, the Delegates present from the several Towns adopted the following Resolutions and nominated the following committees and officers:

Resolved, That the citizens of Tecumseh, Franklin, Cambridge, Macon, Ridgway and Raisin be requested to furnish provisions for a public dinner on the 4th of July next, and that the sum of thirty cents be charged each person, except returned soldiers and clergy, for the purpose, in part, of defraying the necessary incidental expenses not otherwise collected, but especially for the more important object of commencing a fund to be increased as may be required hereafter for the erection of a Grand Monument on Military Square, opposite the Union School House, Tecumseh, with suitable tablets on which shall be inscribed the names of our citizen soldiers from the above towns who have been killed in battle or died while in the service of their country during the recent rebellion.

The following gentlemen were appointed a General Executive and Finance Committee:

William Hayden, James V. DeFuy and Simeon Davidson.

The business of this committee is: 1st. To procure and distribute the Tickets to the Town committees and provide for their sale. 2d. To solicit subscriptions to defray incidental expenses so as to encroach as little as possible on the "Monumental fund." 3d. To secure necessary assistants, furnish lumber, erect stands and tables and have general supervision of the grounds.

Resolved, That a committee of one in each school District be selected by each Town committee for their respective Towns to solicit provisions, and report progress as early as possible to their town committees, who will report to the Central committee on the evening of the 1st of July next.

Resolved, That the several Town committees be requested to call a meeting of the several School District committees as early as possible in each Town.

Resolved, That the several Town committees be requested to be on the ground in season to receive the provisions as they arrive.

Resolved, That M. A. Patterson, Wm. Hayden, I. S. Hamilton. G. T. Ketcham and A. Anderson, be appointed a committee to arrange a programme for the celebration.

The committees' appointed at the previous meeting, compased of M. Wright, S. Rappalye and P. Bills report that they are encouraged to expect the services of Rev. J. Wainwright Ray as Orator.

Resolved, That the following gentlemen be appointed officers of the day.

President.—Dr. M. Patterson.

Vice Presidents.—P. Bills Esq. Tecumseh; F. S Snow, Clinton; S. Rappleye, Macon; Joshua Waring, Ridgeway; Joseph Southard, Raisin; G. D Perry, Franklin; N. S. Wheeler, Cambridge.

Chief Marshall.—Lucius Lilly.

Assistant Marshals.—Hugh Richard, Jehiel Davidson, Tecumseh; Joseph Kies, Clinton; LeRoy Mead, Macon; John Brittain, Ridgeway; Thos. J. Toby Raisin; Maj. L. Saivers, Franklin; Clinton Blackman, Cambridge.

P. Bills, Chairman, Cen. Com.
Henry Conklin, Sec'y. Cen. Com.

Good.

We learn that Governor Crapo has obtained a concession from the War Department which will be of material advantage to the Michigan soldiers about to be disbanded. The original decision was that the troops should be paid only up to the date of being mustered out in the field. This Gov. Crapo thought unjust to the soldier, as he might be detained a number of days in coming from the field to his home, and put in an urgent request that the paymasters in this State should be ordered to pay the men up to date of disbandment in the camps in this State. The War Department has acceded to the request, and our troops will as a consequence be considerably the gainers.

The Governor is entitled to credit for the earnestness with which he urged this point; although it is quite characteristic, and will be found to be but one among many instances which will manifest themselves before Mr. Crapo's term expires, of his watchful care for the interests of the citizens of Michigan.

The Crops.

It is encouraging, amid the inevitable lull of excitement and the vast expenditures on the part of the government—which must produce its corresponding depression in all the relations of communities to know, that we are to be a blessed with abundent crops for the sustenance of the nation, during the coming year.—The cheapness of food will be thereby insured. The large number of discharged soldiers thrown back upon community to seek new avenues of support for themselves and families may be encouraged, that small wages even will suffices to obtain the staples of living. Throughout the Western States, a large stock of the last year's crop still remains on hand and a larger breadth of grain has been sown and with the prospect of increased help, a more extensive and better harvest will be secured, than for four years past.

In Southern Indiana and Ohio, where the wetness of the season interfered with early spring operations, the subsequent favorable weather has allowed an immense crop of corn to be well got in But with its last years surplus and the prospective immense yield the West has no need to fear a surfeit and waste for want of a market. The South, to a great extent, will have to be fed and nourished through the coming winter by its surplus products. And the cheaper price will somewhat increase the Eastern consumption, and it may be, that a foreign demand will also put in its claims.

The News.

Now that the war is over, the news is resuming its old wont of tameness, and is of course lacking much of the interest with which it was invested by the war.—A little gossip about the conspiracy trials or the probable fate of Jeff. Davis, or the demeanor of the great rebel in prison, or the rise and fall of gold, or the squabbles of politicians in regard to appointments, have made the staple of the news since the great review at Washington. Such excitements as we had when McClellan was on the Peninsula, or Sherman marched on Atlanta, or Grant marched through the Wilderness and beleagued Petersburg; in fact such a constant strain of great events and throbbings of the public heart as we have had for four years past, we shall probably not have again in this generation. The great Rebellion, the greatest historical event of the century, is over. Its smoke and din are passing away. Quiet industry will soon replace the ravages of war We shall have less daily excitement in our news, but fewer fears to alarm and less anxieties to perplex and excite us. The peaceful ways of industry will make less noise and glare in the face of the world, but they will make real wealth and spread contentment throughout the land.

WOOD'S

Reaper and Mower,

The best in the world can be obtained at R. Brewer's Foundry. The undersigned would respectfully announce to the farmers of this vicinity that he has on hand the Wood Self Raking Reaper, also the Mower and Reaper attached. These tools excel all others in use, they take the lead in every town and State where they are known, they are made of the best material and in the neatest style and will be sold as low as any first class machine in market. I would say that the self raking reaper can be made to rake the bundles as large or as small as the binder wishes. It gives universal satisfaction in all cases. It cuts lodged grain and rakes the same as well as it can be done by hand rake. Farmers wishing to buy would do well to call and see these machines before purchasing elsewhere.

U. S. 7-30 Loan!

Third Series.
$230,000,000.

By authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, the undersigned, the General Subscription agent for the sale of United States securities, offers to the public the third series of Treasury Notes, bearing seven and three-tenths per cent, interest per annum, known as the

7,30 LOAN,

These notes are issued under date of July 15, 1865, and are payable three years from that date in currency, or are converlible at the option of the holder into

U. S. 5-20 Six per cent. GOLD-BEARING BONDS.

These Bonds are now worth a handsome premium, and are exempt, as are all the Government Bonds, from State, County and Municipal taxation, which adds from one to three per cent per annum to their value according to the rate levied upon other property. The interest is payable semi-annually by coupons attached to each note, which may be cut off and sold to any bank or banker. The interest at $7.30 per cent. amo'ts to

One cent per day on a		$50	note.
Two cents	" "	$100	"
Ten "	" "	$500	"
20 "	" "	$1000	"
$1 "	" "	$5000	"

Notes of all the denominations named will be promptly furnished upon receipt of subscriptions.

The notes of this third series are precisely similar in form and privileges to the 7.30 already sold, except that the Government reserves to itself the option of paying interest in gold coin at 6 per cent., instead of 7 3-10ths in currency. Subscribers will deduct the interest in currency up to July 15th, at the time when they subscribe.

The delivery of the notes of this third series of the Seven-thirties will commence on the 1st of June, and will be made promptly and continuously after that date.

The slight change made in the conditions of this Third Series affects only the matter of interest. The payment in gold, if made, will be equivalent to the currency interest of the higher rate.

The return to specie payments, in the event of which only will the option to pay interest in Gold be availed of, would so reduce and equalize prices that purchases made with six per cent. in gold would be fully equal to those made with seven and three-tenths per cent. in currency. This is

Only Loan in the Market.

Now offered by the Government, and its superior advantages make it the

GREAT POPULAR LOAN OF THE PEOPLE.

Less than $230,000,000 of the Loan authorized by the last Congress ard now on the market. This amount at the rate at which it is being absorbed, will all be subscribed for within two months, when the notes will undoubtedly command a premium, as has uniformly been the case on closing the subscriptions to other Loans It now seems probable that no considerable amount beyond the present series will be offered to the public.

In order that citizens of every town and section of the country may be afforded facilities for taking the loan, the National Banks, State Banks, and Private Bankers throughout the country have generally agreed to receive subscription at par. Subscribers will select their own agents, in whom they have confidence, and who only are to be responsible for the delivery of the notes for which they receive orders.

SUBSCRIPTION AGENT, Philadelphia.

☞ Uncle Tom's Cabin exhibited here last Saturday evening. They had a large and appreciative audience, and every one appeared to be pleased with the performance. Most of the characters were well sustained, especially those of Uncle Tom, Topsy, Gumption Cute and Eva.—Aunt Ophelia, Deacon Perry and Marks performed their parts quite creditably.—As a whole the play was very well represented.

At a regular communication of the W. T. T. Association held at Headquarters on the—day of June, 1865 the temperance question having been made the special order of the evening, remarks were made by the G. H. P. the G. T. P. the G. T. B. and others brothers, and the session adjourned after unanimously passing the following resolutions.

Whereas it is with feelings of extreme regret that we have witnessed the alarming increase of intemperance in our midst during the past few months, and Whereas our village is justly an object of pride to its citizens, for its noble school, its beautiful churches, its high-toned refinement and moral culture: Therefore

Resolved That we owe it to the community in which we dwell, to the generation which is to come after us, to humanity in general, and to all good law both human and divine, to use our utmost endeavor to stop the sale of intoxicating drink and strive most earnestly to reclaim and regenerate those who are on ruins high road to ruin. That we learned with heartfelt satisfaction of the late action of the village Board and the prompt and efficient manner in which they have resolved to bring the violators of the liquor law to speedy justice.

That we bid the Board "God speed" in their noble work, and cheerfully tender them our warmest sympathy and encouragement and all the assistance in our power.

That we urge upon the friends of reform a more vigorous and united effort to induce our young men (who are the hope of the nation) to turn aside from the tempters path, and by invitation and entreaty to enlist them into the service of temperance reform.

That it is the duty of all good citizen to heartily co-operate with the Board in their endeavor to execute the law and stop this abominable traffic.

That the G. S. R. be instructed to transmit a revised copy of these resolutions to the Herald for publication.

Done at Headquarters this day of June A. D. 1865 Signed by the G. H. P.

Sealed with the great seal and countersigned by the G. S. R.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Prepared in the old Bourbon Districts, to the exclusion of all other Bitters, from the United States Asylums, Hospitals, and thousands of private families, and is the only popular medicine which has been exempted from stamp tax by the United States government, on the ground of its having been adopted as a standard remedy by the medical profession.

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ They are made of ingredients well known and appreciated by the medical profession, as healthy stimulants and tonics of great purities, are both palatable and powerful, with a decided strengthening character, to expel the bilious derangements of the system, and act like a charm when taken in the morning for dyspepsia; as a remedy for the ague and fever, chills and fever—Intermittent, Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Affections, Loss of Appetite, Leanness of Flesh, Sallow Complexion,

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

FOR

Headache, Costiveness, and kindred diseases, arising from a disordered condition of the Stomach, Liver, or Bowels. Let every one try these agreeable Bitters; once tried and used, they will recommend them with confidence to all others who are in need of a wholesome, agreeable and effectual tonic. The rapidly increasing demand for these Bitters has induced me to give them publicity, so that thousands who have not used them, may try them and be convinced of their efficacy.—

SWAIN'S BOURBON BITTERS

☞ Ladies, who have tried and found most other "Stomach Bitters" too bitter, unpalatable and too highly medicated for their delicate taste, please give these a trial, and you will not be without them. They will give tone to the stomach, and strength to the whole system.

☞ If your druggist or trading man has not got these Bitters, have him send for them.—

☞ Remember the name, and take no other,

THESE Bitters are prepared, in pure Bourbon Whiskey, from a combination of over twenty different kinds of roots, barks and herbs, which act in perfect concert one with other, prepared from the original formula given by the great chief, Red Jacket, to Dr. Chapin, who used them successfully in his practice for many years, and by their use gained so great a popularity in the treatment and cure of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Constipation, Sick and Nervous Headache, Fever and Ague, and all diseases arising from torpid liver or indigestion. Persons suffering from either of these loathsome diseases will find a sure cure by the use of these Bitters, which are perfectly pure and free from all those drugs and poisons usually put up in such preparations and palmed off on an unsuspecting public. A single trial will convince the most skeptical that in the RED JACKET there is virtue which no other Bitters possess.

TO THE RETAIL TRADE.

The present high prices have induced all kinds of experiments, and every kind of substance has been tried as a substitute for Coffee. The vilest trash, under Showy and Taking names, has been thrust upon the public. Bogus and Spurious Coffees, whose chief merit is found in their Labels and wrappers, have proved alike injurious to the consumer, as also to the retailer. These Villainous Compounds have about had their day, and the public taste is fast returning to its first love, and nothing less than a

Good, Fragrant and Wholesome Cup of Coffee can prove Satisfactory.

There is a great and increasing demand for Good Coffee, and our design is to supply this demand.
